

Every Night 46

Chapter 46: Drive This Woman Out

Perhaps, there are a considerable number of people wanting to see Daniel Marshall dead.

Those hoping for Daniel Marshall's demise surely aren't few.

If anything happens to Daniel Marshall, even if it makes her a widow, the blame, undoubtedly, would fall on her by the Marshall Family.

The members of the Marshall Family would never let her go; she would still not attain the freedom she yearned for, thus ruining her life along with Daniel Marshall's.

No matter how much Olivia Jenkins detested Daniel Marshall or found him repulsive, at this moment, she remained remarkably sharp and clear-headed.

Frowning in hesitation for a few seconds, Olivia Jenkins announced, "I have O-type blood; I can donate 400CC so that he can have the surgery immediately."

Adam Howard, watching this sudden revelation, had a fire blazing in his eyes. Losing composure slipped through excitement, he exclaimed, "Thank you, sister-in-law, I'm deeply grateful!"

Olivia Jenkins gave a self-mocking, faint smile, "Looks like I am tied to the same boat as him now. To ensure my own protection, this is the path I must take. You don't need to thank me. I am saving him for my own protection."

Adam Howard looked somewhat amazed, "You seem to have a significant issue with him. Is there a misunderstanding?"

"There isn't much time. I will go donate the blood. Assistant Howards, Please wait here for the news."

Leaving these words behind, Olivia Jenkins exits.

Adam squints his eyes, watching Olivia's departure.

My word! The sister-in-law indeed is something special!

Distinctively unique in her character!

The surgical procedure was led by the Head of Thoracic Surgery and assisted by another doctor. The surgery was successful.

Due to confidentiality, Olivia Jenkins was left in charge of Daniel Marshall's VIP room.

Everything from transferring oxygen to setting up the monitor was carried out by Olivia alone, with no nurse present.

Having received a blood transfusion, Daniel Marshall's complexion improved; he started to look more human.

Although he just came out of surgery, she did not view him as particularly dangerous or formidable. As soon as he regained consciousness, his demeanor was rather repulsive.

He had discarded her necklace as if it were trash, and she couldn't stand him for that.

If it weren't for her entanglements with the Marshall Family, Olivia Jenkins might actually have preferred being a widow.

Olivia Jenkins shot Daniel Marshall a few glares filled with hatred, then turned to Adam Howard and spoke.

"His surgery was very successful, and his post-operative condition is good. He's already awake, just slightly disoriented. Keep an eye on him. If anything comes up, ring the bell."

Adam nodded, his strained emotions finally subsiding a bit, "Alright, thanks a lot, sister-in-law!"

Olivia's voice was very soft, and she nonchalantly replied, "I'm off at 8 AM. After 8, reach out to our head doctor if there is anything. The orthopedics department will be coming for consultation about his leg injury. Most likely they will apply a cast."

Adam Howard stared at Olivia in disbelief, unable to comprehend what he had just heard, "Sister-in-law, shouldn't you be the one staying behind to care for Chief Daniel Marshall? He is your husband after all! You can't just abandon him! I have a lot of work to handle as well. I need to get back to Marshall Corporation before 9AM."

Would his dear woman not care for him anymore?

If she showed up and saw Olivia tending to Daniel Marshall in the VIP room, how awkward that would be!

Moreover, it was debatable whether Daniel would even want Olivia taking care of him. She didn't feel like intruding anymore.

Olivia's expression remained steady, without a hint of emotion. With calm indifference, she casts a glance at Daniel Marshall.

"Assistant Howard, I have work too, I'm also extremely busy and now, quite tired. There should be plenty of women willing to take care of him. I won't join the crowd. If worse comes to worst, call Auntie Jane and let her care for him." "Adam Howard, get this woman out! So noisy, it's annoying!"

The words of Daniel Marshall, though spoken slowly and with a heavy tongue, reached Olivia's ears loud and clear.

Daniel Marshall wanted her out of his VIP room; Olivia was more than glad.

She didn't care at all about being his head doctor in the first place.

Olivia, full of defiance, snapped at Daniel Marshall, " Don't worry about throwing me out, I am leaving right now.. And remember, don't ever bother looking for me again, Goodbye!"