Chapter 3221

In the other bedroom, Grace said to Jason, "I saw Lawrence today and he seems like a nice kid, but his parents are a bit..."

"Sycophantic, right?" Jason interrupted.

"I can understand their thoughts, after all, Jasper likes the piano that their son plays. If they can get some favor from the Reed family through their son, then their family's life can naturally be improved. Actually, there's nothing wrong with that, but... I hope the child won't be affected." Grace said.

She could understand the thoughts of people like the Abbott couple who lived at the bottom of society, but Lawrence, with his clear eyes, she didn't want his clarity to turn into worldliness in the future.

"It depends on the child himself." Jason said, he didn't really care about Lawrence.

"What do the child's parents do?" Grace asked, she hadn't asked about these details before.

"His mother is a cleaner at that hotel, and his father is a transportation worker." Jason said.

Grace pondered for a moment, and Jason said, "If Jasper really gets along with the child later on, then I will arrange another job for his parents, so their family's conditions can naturally be improved."

"What if things don't go so well?" Grace asked. After all, today was only the first day they met, even though it seemed like Jasper quite liked Lawrence.

However, children are naturally fickle and who knows what the future holds!

"If it doesn't work out, then it came from somewhere and will go back there," Jason said indifferently. He naturally didn't care about the fate of others.

"Jason, even if these two children don't get along, don't just kick them out right away," said Grace. "Now that we plan to have Lawrence systematically learn piano, and he has a high talent for it, I think even if the two children don't get along in the future, let Lawrence continue to learn piano. Otherwise, it would be a waste of his talent.”

“Do you want to properly nurture this child?” Jason raised his eyebrows.

“I’m just afraid that if this child falls from a high point to a low point again, their mentality will change. I don’t want Jasper’s actions to make this child’s fate worse than before,” said

Grace.

Jason’s eyes flickered slightly, then he smiled faintly and said, “Alright, whatever you say, we’ll do it that way.”

Grace’s eyebrows relaxed, “I wonder how Lawrence will turn out in the future. Jasper was also into piano when she was young, so she treats William with special care. Time flies, it’s been several years already. It feels like I’ll be old soon.”

The older the children get, the older she becomes.

Chapter 3222

“You’re not old at all,” Jason said, leaning down and placing his hands on either side of Grace’s body. His handsome face drew closer to hers. “In my eyes, you’re still very young.”

“You always know how to say things that make me happy,” Grace murmured. “In a few years, I might start getting crow’s feet around my eyes, followed by gray hair and wrinkles...”

“So I’m also growing old with you slowly,” Jason said, as he leaned in and gently kissed Grace’s cheek. “Grace, being able to grow old with you is the happiest thing for me. Thank you for not giving up on me and coming back with our child.”

Grace lifted her hands and wrapped them around Jason’s neck. “So should I also thank you for still being willing to fall in love with me, even after being hypnotized to forget our memories?”

“Then tonight, just thank me properly.” He continued to kiss her eyebrows, eyes, and nose...finally landing on her lips. His voice was hoarse as he said, “If I’m not satisfied, you won’t be able to leave...”

Even though they were an old married couple, Grace couldn’t resist his temptation.

To her, he always had such an irresistible charm that sometimes just a word or a glance from him could make her heart skip a beat.

He kissed her and she responded passionately.

Being able to grow old with him is also one of her happiest things, isn't it?

Even if in the future, they have white hair and wrinkles, their love for each other will still remain!

Valda and Brian's honeymoon trip was pretty good overall, except for the occasional awkward moment of being recognized while walking down the street.

And Valda also bought a lot of anime-related merchandise.

Although many things can be bought online, there is still a different feeling when personally selecting and purchasing them.

On the second to last day of their honeymoon, there happened to be a local anime convention. Visiting the convention was something Valda had planned in advance and was looking forward to.

"Are you really going to the anime convention?" Brian asked.

"Exactly, it would be a shame not to browse around since we have the time." said Valda.

A flicker of hesitation crossed Brian's face.

Valda shuddered at the thought of a certain possibility and asked, "Are you afraid that I'll go to the anime convention and it will bring back bad memories?"

A rare expression of embarrassment appeared on his face.

Suddenly, she knew she had guessed correctly.

After all, she was once attacked at an anime convention. And when she was being attacked by others, he received news of Grace's difficult childbirth and left without turning back.

At first, it was precisely because of this that she broke up with him once.

Valda smiled and said, "Do you think I'm such a stingy person?"

The past is already behind me, and I know that you love me the most now. Your feelings for Grace are a thing of the past."

She spoke and took his hand, "Alright, let's go. If we don't leave now, we'll probably get stuck in heavy traffic later!"

He followed her footsteps with a dazed expression, his phoenix eyes lowered and fixed on her hand holding his. It was she who had pulled him out of the abyss, and from now on... she would always be there to pull him along.

Between them, there are still many years of life that they can spend together!

Chapter 3223

When we arrived at the venue of the comic convention, there were already a lot of people there. However, most of the attendees were young people, and there weren't many people over the age of 30.

Moreover, many young people are dressed in trendy and even exaggerated clothing, some even wearing heavy makeup, resembling characters from a comic book.

Squeezed among this group of anime enthusiasts, Valda feels a sense of her own lost youth.

The two of them were strolling along when suddenly Valda's eyes lit up at a large display booth, and she found herself unable to move her feet.

"What's wrong?" Brian asked.

"Among these prizes, the third prize is a set of rare comics," Valda said. "I used to really like these comics and would read them at the library. They're no longer available for purchase, so it's surprising to see them here, but unfortunately they're only being offered as a prize."

If it's for sale, she would like to buy it and keep it as a collection.

Although this type of comic book may not be worth much even if it goes out of print, it is still a keepsake at the very least.

This comic series can be considered as her initiation into drawing shoujo manga. Back then, when she first encountered this type of manga, she was deeply shocked.

I never knew that love stories could be expressed in this way.

Later on, she fell in love with drawing comics, which was actually related to the comics she used to read.

“So I’ll talk to the organizers and suggest replacing the third prize with something else, and then buy this set of comics,” said Brian.

“Don’t do that, it’s not good. Maybe there are many people, like me, who actually like this third prize and are working hard to win it!” said Valda.

On the table, there were already several people who were preparing to participate in the competition and clearly aiming to win the prize.

The host is still keeping the atmosphere lively and inviting the audience on site to continue signing up enthusiastically.

“Then let’s go win this prize,” said Brian.

“Huh?”

Valda was stunned when she saw Brian raise his hand to apply for the competition.

Brian is already tall, making him stand out in a crowd. So when he raised his hand, the host immediately noticed him and invited him on stage.

Valda stared blankly as Brian went up on stage, only to belatedly come to her senses and realize that he was really going to compete for a prize?

This action seems to have nothing to do with him!

Brian’s appearance on stage immediately drew gasps of amazement from the group of girls below. After all, the other contestants were all young people, and Brian clearly had an age difference with them.

However, this age difference gives him a mature charm, especially with the slight sense of detachment he carries, which adds to his mysterious aura.

“He’s so handsome!”

“Is this guy also an anime fan?”

The girls in the audience were already discussing, and some were taking out their phones to take pictures.

Valda looked at Brian on stage, knowing that he was doing something he wouldn’t have done before for her.

Finally, the number of contestants reached its limit, and the host began to ask each contestant their name, purpose of participation, whether they like anime, and their favorite anime character, etc.

When it was finally Brian's turn, he simply stated his last name.

"So, Mr. Hart, what is your purpose for participating?" the host asked.

"My wife really wants the set of manga books for third prize, so I joined this competition," Brian said.

Chapter 3224

The group of girls in the audience all felt a pang of regret when they heard Brian mention his wife.

"So, do you like anime?" the host asked again.

"It wasn't anything special to begin with, and I didn't particularly like it. However, my wife is a big fan, so under her influence, I gradually grew to like it too," said Brian.

The girls in the audience immediately began to whisper and wonder what kind of woman this "wife" really was.

The competition is divided into two aspects: "civil" and "martial". In terms of "civil", it naturally refers to answering questions.

The host's questions were all about anime, some of which only experienced anime fans could answer. Even Valda in the audience had to think for a while to answer some of the questions, and there were even some that she couldn't answer.

However, what surprised Valda was that Brian was able to answer almost all of the questions, except for two that he didn't answer. He was the first to start writing and finished answering almost all of the questions.

Even the host was a bit skeptical and couldn't help but ask, "Are you really influenced by your wife and like anime? Then... may I ask how long you have liked it?"

"It's not even three years yet," Brian replied.

"The host said, 'Mr. Hart, you're really amazing to be able to answer so many questions. You must have watched a lot of anime works.'"

Brian replied calmly, "Yes, quite a few."

Valda was surprised. She didn't know that. Usually when they were together, even if he watched anime works, he would just come over and take a look when she was watching. The number of works he watched shouldn't be too many!

Moreover, among these questions, some anime works she had watched, but not with him. She watched them alone!

After the quiz section, there were some sports events, such as live darts and ring toss.

Brian usually did well at the beginning, but in the last few rounds, he would make mistakes, causing others to catch up with his score.

Many people felt sorry for Brian, but Valda realized that he did it on purpose.

He deliberately made mistakes to keep his total score in third place.

And when the competition ended, Brian did indeed win the third prize.

It wasn't until now that someone finally realized what he had done.

"Really? Could it be that he did it on purpose? Just to win this third place prize?"

"Oh my god, if this was intentional, then his calculations are just too accurate. Not only does he have to calculate his own score, but he also has to calculate the scores of others!"

"Wow, his wife is so lucky."

"I also really want to have a husband like this."

For a moment, there was a lot of discussion, which made

Valda feel a bit embarrassed.

When Brian approached Valda with the prize in hand, her face turned red and all she could see was him smiling at her and saying, "Alright, we got the book, let's go."

The smile at the corner of his lips softens his aloofness and indifference.

"Mhmm," Valda responded.

It wasn't until the two of them walked away that someone realized.

“Was that person just now his wife?”

“He smiled so tenderly at his wife!”

“But his wife looks average, and when she walked just now, she seemed to limp a bit! Could it be that his wife is some rich person and he’s just a gigolo?” Some people started maliciously speculating.

But immediately after, another voice contradicted it.

Chapter 3225

“Oh, I remember now. The guy earlier, his name was Brian, right? Isn’t his wife the one with a slight limp in her leg? It must be him. He also mentioned that his last name is Hart!”

“Brian?”

“Oh, the prince of the entertainment industry!”

Suddenly, the people around finally reacted and some of them started searching for Brian’s related pictures online to confirm if the man with the surname Hart they just saw was really the entertainment industry’s young master.

After a moment, someone in the crowd murmured, “I... believe in love again. Oh my god, the prince must truly love his wife!”

After Valda got her beloved limited edition comic, she and Brian didn’t really go around the anime convention much. After all, they had already gone around most of it before.

“When you were competing, did you purposely make mistakes in some of the events because you calculated your score beforehand?” Valda asked as they walked outside the anime exhibition.

“Yes,” Brian replied. “You wanted a third place prize, so there was no need to get high scores.”

Valda found it unbelievable that he was manipulating the scores of the competition.

“By the way, how did you almost answer all the questions correctly during the quiz?” Valda was also very curious about this, as he was not part of their circle and yet he was able to answer so many questions correctly, with only two questions left unanswered.

“Because I’ve seen a lot of them, so I can naturally answer them,” Brian replied.

“You’ve seen a lot of them?” She was stunned. “Have you seen all the anime, manga, and books about anime production related to those questions?”

“Yes,” he continued to give her a positive answer.

She widened her eyes, looking extremely shocked. “When? When did you see all of those?”

“During the year you disappeared, I had nothing to do, so I watched them all,” he said casually, but her eyes suddenly turned red.

How could he have had nothing to do?

She had heard from Camille that during her disappearance, he was in a state of complete despair, neither human nor ghost-like, and even Camille thought that if they couldn't find her, he might commit suicide.

What kind of emotions did he have when he was looking at these anime-related things back then?

"Why... do we have to watch those..." she murmured.

"Because it's something you like, when I look at them, it's like I'm keeping you company while you watch," he said, raising his hand and gently stroking her reddened eyes. "Okay, don't cry. I won the prize for you today because I wanted you to be happy, not because I wanted you to cry."

"I...I'm touched, not uncomfortable," she muttered.

The two of them walked out of the anime convention, and Valda felt a little thirsty. So Brian said, "Wait here for a moment, I'll go buy some water."

"Okay," she replied. Outside the exhibition hall, there were many benches along the tree-lined path where people could rest.

She sat on the chair and lightly massaged her calf through her long skirt with one hand.

My Gorgeous Wife is an Ex-Convict!

At that moment, a van suddenly appeared and screeched to a halt in front of her. Two young men wearing masks and caps, dressed in black, rushed towards her and reached out to grab her.

Valda was suddenly confused and before she could react,

some people appeared from the side and stopped the two young men. With just a few moves, they subdued the two young men. The driver of the van saw this and immediately stepped on the gas, trying to quickly leave the scene.

However, right after that, something even more confusing happened to Valda. Several cars surrounded the van, forcing it to crash into the green belt.

What is happening here?!

Valda was shocked and widened her eyes. Among the people who subdued two young men in front of her, she recognized one of them as a bodyguard she often saw around Brian.

“You...”

“Madam, I apologize for startling you,” the other person said respectfully.

Startled... It’s not so much that I was startled, but rather that I was too stunned to even have the chance to be startled.

At that moment, Brian hurried over and looked at Valda with a nervous expression. He asked, “Valda, did anything happen?”

Valda shook her head with a sigh, as if she thought he was the one who had more important matters to attend to.

At this moment, his face was pale and his forehead was covered in a thin layer of sweat. The hand that was holding hers was trembling with nervousness.

Valda grabbed Brian’s hand with her other hand and said, “I’m okay, nothing happened to me. Your bodyguard acted quickly and these two people didn’t even touch my clothes.”

Upon hearing this, his facial expression improved slightly. However, immediately after, he suddenly hugged her tightly and said, “As long as you’re okay, everything is fine!”

He cannot bear any more accidents happening to her.

That tight embrace made Valda feel a bit sore in her bones. But she knew that the tightness of the embrace was a reflection of how much he cared and worried about her.

Her hand lifted gently and stroked his hand back, tapping it lightly and rhythmically. "I'm okay, Brian. I'm fine now. You're here to protect me, and I'm doing well."

Her voice, her warmth, and even her breath were all easing his unease.

After a while, Brian muttered, "Hmm, you're okay."

Next, the two subdued individuals and the driver of the van were all taken back to the police station. Valda and Brian also went to the police station to give their statements.

Valda learned from the police that these three individuals are unemployed youths who enjoy gambling and have a lot of debt. Today, at the anime convention, they learned about Brian's identity from others when he went on stage to compete. They became greedy and followed Brian and Valda out of the venue.

After seeing Valda alone, they wanted to kidnap her. However, their plan was foiled as they were quickly caught and subdued, resulting in them not obtaining anything and getting into trouble with the authorities.

After finishing the record, Valda and Brian left the police station. Curiously, Valda asked Brian, "How did you know that we might encounter danger today when we came to the anime exhibition?"

At the police station, she found out that the cars that had forced the van to stop were also driven by his subordinates.

In other words, he must have arranged for many people and vehicles to follow her.

"I don't know," Brian replied.

"Huh?" Valda blinked in surprise. "But how did they plan to kidnap me when your bodyguards and those cars were there to appear so timely?"

"It has always been there, not just today," he said.

She widened her eyes and said, "It's been there all along. So you mean, on the first day we arrived here, you already arranged for them to follow us?"

"In fact, it's not just the first day I've felt this way, it was the same over in Emerald City," Brian said.

"Valda, I've lost you once before, so I won't allow myself to make the same mistake again."

Because of this kind of mistake, he can't afford it.

Chapter 3227

Valda used to dislike being followed around all the time, but after what happened today, she finally realized that it was necessary.

After all, Brian's identity alone is enough to make many people greedy.

Once greed takes hold of the human heart, many things will be done recklessly.

However... "Wait, so, sometimes when there's nobody around on the roadside, we... kiss. Your bodyguards have seen us do that too?" Valda suddenly thought of this question.

Brian's expression became somewhat unnatural, and he vaguely said, "Maybe."

"I guess so," Valda muttered to herself, blushing again, and then began to look around.

"What are you watching?" Brian asked.

"Looking at your bodyguards, they are there now," she said.

"If you see them, I can immediately dismiss them," he said.

"..." She was speechless.

When Valda returned to the hotel, she received another call from Camille who asked, "I heard you encountered kidnappers, are you okay?"

Valda paused for a moment, then quickly realized something and said, "Don't tell me I'm trending again."

"Yeah, congratulations on making it to the trending list again," said Camille. "But first, tell me, is it a big deal or not?"

"I can answer your call now, which means everything is fine," Valda said. "The kidnappers acted on a whim, but they didn't even touch me."

"That's good," said Camille. "Someone captured a video on site. Although it's not complete, it's quite exciting. The van was forced to stop by several cars, just like in a police action. movie. How many people did Brian send to protect you?"

“Uh...” Valda paused, she realized that she had never asked this question before.

“But as long as you’re okay, that’s good. Are you coming back tomorrow?” Camille asked.

“Mmm, I’ll come back tomorrow,” she said.

“Okay, when you come back, let’s make time to get together.”

“Okay.”

After ending the call, Valda opened her phone’s web browser and checked it out. As expected, it was trending on the hot search.

And when she clicked on it, she saw the video that Camille had mentioned. In the video, the two young men who had rushed over were already pinned to the ground by the bodyguards. Shortly after, the van was forced to stop.

The following scene shows Brian rushing towards her, pulling her nervously and checking if she’s injured. Then, he embraces her tightly and holds her in his arms.

Chapter 3228

The angle of the footage is from above, likely taken from a nearby residential building. This gives a bird’s-eye view and the person’s face is not captured very clearly. Despite this, it has still generated a lot of comments below.

However, these comments were unexpected for Valda, as most of them were positive. Some said she was lucky, others praised the romance, and some even mentioned how Brian protected her perfectly. There were also some who expressed envy.

Although there are some sour words and criticisms among them, overall, they are not very numerous.

“What are you watching?” Brian leaned over and asked.

“Someone filmed today’s video and posted it online,” Valda said, then opened the video and showed it to Brian.

After he finished watching it, he gave his evaluation, “It was well made.”

"If I had known I was going to be photographed, I would have dressed up a bit more." She felt a bit regretful because she was going to an anime convention, so she was only wearing casual clothes and had a plain face without makeup.

"You're already so beautiful that you've enchanted me completely. Do you really want to become even more beautiful?" His phoenix-like eyes shimmered with desire.

She blushed and met his gaze, "Why are you getting better at sweet-talking?" He was different from before.

"It's not sweet talk, it's the truth," he whispered, lifting his hand to gently cup her face. "I only say these words to you, Valda. I'm truly captivated by you."

So obsessed...to the point of being completely infatuated!

His lips met hers in the deepest expression of love.

After their honeymoon, Valda and Brian returned to Emerald

City. They naturally went to see Camille first and gave her the prepared gift.

Camille happily took the gift and looked Valda up and down. "I feel like after a honeymoon trip, you look even more beautiful. You must be a newlywed bride who has been nourished by love."

Valda almost spit out the water in her mouth. "You're exaggerating too much, kid."

"Where's the exaggeration? Haven't you seen the comments online? They say that within 10 years, no Cinderella will surpass your achievements! You're envied by countless women now. And someone even posted the video of Brian winning that rare comic book set for you at the anime convention. Have you seen it?"

"I have," Valda said. She had found the video that night.

"Brian is really amazing. There were so many questions that I couldn't answer," Camille said.

"Oh, Camille," Valda suddenly became serious. "Can you tell me everything you know and have seen about Brian during my one-year disappearance?”

“Huh?” Camille was taken aback. She had told Valda some things before, and Valda had been very upset. “It’s all in the past now. You’re already married to Brian. Besides, I already told you what happened to Brian when you disappeared, didn’t I?”

“But now, I want to know everything you know,” Valda said. “Camille, please tell me everything you know without leaving anything out, okay?”

Because that was the Brian she didn’t know, the Brian who made her heart ache.

If it weren’t for this kidnapping incident, she might not have thought about how he spent that year at all.

All she knew at the time was that he was desperately looking for her.

But what about the rest of the time? During that year, besides waiting for her message and searching for her whereabouts, what did he do?

She wanted to know!

Chapter 3229

Upon hearing this, Camille sighed and agreed, “Okay, I’ll tell you everything I know.”

When Valda returned to the villa, she saw Brian sitting on the couch in the living room, flipping through some documents. When he heard her footsteps, he looked up at her with a gentle gaze.

“You’re back,” he said.

She suddenly rushed into his arms and exclaimed, “Brian, I love you so much.”

“I know, I love you too,” he replied. Although he was a bit puzzled by her sudden confession, he was very happy.

“In the future, I will stay by your side and won’t mind if you assign more bodyguards to protect me. It doesn’t matter how many you send,” she continued.

“What’s wrong?” he asked, confused. “Is it because you were almost kidnapped before and now you're scared?"

She shook her head and said, "I am a little scared, so please don't let me encounter any danger in the future, okay?"

"Okay," he responded, "don't be afraid, I won't let you encounter any danger."

Her head rested on his chest, listening to the sound of his new heartbeat.

Actually, it's not so much that she's afraid of being kidnapped, as she's more afraid of what he might become if he loses her.

Today, I listened to Camille talking about Brian from that year. What Camille knows is not everything, but just hearing the part she talked about made her heartache terribly.

She didn't know there was so much she didn't know!

Originally, he loved her much deeper than she had imagined!

She always thought that she was the one who gave more in their love, but it turns out that he didn't give any less than her.

She feels truly happy to be loved so deeply by him!

Valda and Brian arrived at the Reed House the next day with their honeymoon gifts.

The Reed family, including the husband and wife and their four children, gave a total of six gifts.

After receiving the gifts, Mick politely said "thank you," while Jasper smiled sweetly and chatted away. He even kissed Valda on the cheek. As for the gifts for the triplets, Mason, and the youngest daughter Jasmine, Grace helped collect them..

"Is Mason planning to continue living with the Barlow family?" Valda asked. Among the children, Mason was the hardest to come by. Every time he visited the Reed family, he was nowhere to be seen.

"Okay," Grace said. "He's used to living with the Barlow family, so we're just letting him stay there. Whether he wants to come back and live with us in the future is up to him, we won't force him."

Although the Barlow family couple, Grace, is not appreciated, fortunately, they are not very cunning and tend to follow the crowd. As long as enough money is given, they are not afraid that they will do anything harmful to Mason.

Moreover, Grace quite liked the Barlow family's girl – Veronica. She could see that as Mason grew older, his attachment to Veronica not only did not diminish, but also increased day by day.

Chapter 3230

I just don't know if this attachment will turn into love in the future, and I wonder what Veronica Barlow thinks about it!

However, these are all things for the future.

After a brief chat among a few people, Brian and Jason went to the study to discuss some business matters, while Valda and Grace continued to chat in the living room.

The conversation shifted unknowingly to the topic of almost being kidnapped. Grace laughed and said, "During your honeymoon, you made it to the trending topics twice. I saw the videos others took, and Brian really cares about you."

"Well, if he hadn't arranged for someone to follow me beforehand, I might have actually been kidnapped," Valda said. "Fortunately, everything's okay now!"

"What about the baby then?" Jasper asked.

"Baby?" Grace was taken aback.

"I heard Mommy and Daddy say that when Auntie Valda and Uncle Brian came back from their honeymoon, they had a baby!" Jasper said this while staring at Valda's belly with his eyes.

Valda's face turned slightly red, "Not so fast, we still need some more time!"

"I see," said Jasper with a disappointed look. "I was hoping to see Auntie Valda and Uncle Brian's baby soon. I have many toys that I could share with her. I would be a good big sister to her!"

At that moment, a servant approached and said, "Madam, Miss Three, the Abbott family's people have arrived."

"Okay, ask them to wait in the side hall for a while. I'll go over there in a bit," said Grace.

The servant left and Valda asked, "Do you have something to attend to?"

"I'll be done soon. Please wait for me," Grace replied.

Jasper happily said, "Lawrence is here, Auntie Valda. Later, I'll ask him to play the piano for you. He plays really well!"

Valda was surprised and looked at Grace, "Is this Lawrence the little boy that Jasper was looking for before?"

"Yes, that's him. He plays the piano well. I invited them over today to sign a contract. From now on, the Reed family will be responsible for all of Lawrence's educational expenses," Grace explained.

This education includes regular academic courses and all expenses related to piano lessons.

Grace took Jasper to the sitting room while Mick stayed with Valda in the main hall.

Valda looked at Mick, who was almost 10 years old and resembled Jason the most among the triplets. However, their personalities were completely different.

Jason gave people an unpredictable feeling, but Mick was mostly cold and seemed indifferent to everything. However, he was very protective when it came to family matters.

At this moment, Valda and Mick looked at each other for a while before Valda spoke first, "Mick, do you have a girl you like in your class?"

Nowadays, children are much more open-minded than those in her generation. Some even have girlfriends or boyfriends in kindergarten, and in the first or second grade of elementary school, they can write love letters using pinyin and characters after learning just a few words.

Valda became curious and wondered what Mick would be like if he had a crush on a girl.

She was just destined to be disappointed.

Mick simply answered with two words, "No."

"Do you not have a crush? Or are you just too shy to tell Auntie Valda?" Valda continued to ask.

"No." The little one's face showed no sign of embarrassment.

"Do you have a favorite celebrity or cartoon character?"

"No."

"Really none?"

"Why should I like them?"

Valda was left speechless by this question.

The two of them stared at each other with wide eyes, and Valda couldn't help but marvel at how different the triplets' personalities were.
