

Ex-Convict! 4360

Chapter 4360 Introducing the Job

Was it worth it?

Harley wasn't sure, after all, she had only known Calvert for a short time and had only met him a few times.

But every time, Calvert left quite an impression on her.

Calvert was shy and didn't easily accept the kindness of others. Despite having such a beautiful face, there wasn't a hint of arrogance. Instead, he seemed to carry a sense of inferiority.

And Calvert was stuck in such a terrible environment, with a father like that.

Harley gave was just a chance!

Brian looked at his daughter with satisfaction. Indeed, she had grown up and understood the principle that it's better to teach a man to fish than to give him a fish.

When Harley saw Calvert again, the injury on Calvert's face seemed to have almost healed.

"Do you want to go see your father?" Harley asked.

Earlier, Harley had his father taken to the hospital for a comprehensive check-up. He learned about the results of the examination from the doctor.

Calvert's father wasn't in good health. Years of heavy drinking had led to nerve

"But I'm afraid I can only pay you back for my father's medical bills once I start working in the future," Calvert murmured.

Even then, Calvert, despite having a full scholarship and working diligently, could only just make enough to support himself.

“Don’t worry about the money,” Harley said. “I’m the one who wanted your father to be hospitalized for examination and treatment. Naturally, you don’t have to pay for it.”

“But you’re not obligated to pay this money!” Calvert insisted, “I will definitely pay it back!”

“If you insist on paying me back, that’s fine. Whenever you have the money in the future, you can repay me then,” Harley novelbin

And also, he had accepted Harley’s help.

Was this help, in Harley’s view, a form of charity? Did Harley think he was so pitiful that he was giving him a job out of pity?