

Ex-Convict 4401

Chapter 4401: Awakening Harley immediately cleared out the restaurant, taking Calvert with him and heading to the hospital!

All the way, Calvert was feeling particularly awful. He was curled up like a shrimp, his face flushed red, and his whole body was shaking non-stop.

He was practically using all his strength to suppress his desires. Yet, even when he closed his eyes tightly, all sorts of beautiful fantasies would still continuously emerge in his mind.

My body feels like it's about to explode.

Just then, a voice rang in his ear, "Are you feeling bad?"

Immediately after, a hand gently touched his forehead, wiping away the sweat that was breaking out on his face.

That hand was so cool to the touch. Just a slight contact made him feel so comfortable where it touched, as if it was cooling him down.

But... that's too little!

That's way too little!

He wanted her to explore more, to experience more...

Suddenly, Calvert's eyes snapped open, and Harley's face was reflected in those passionate, dark eyes.

"Don't... don't touch me..." He stammered, his lips trembling as he struggled to utter these few words.

"What?" Harley was suddenly confused.

"Don't... don't touch me... or else... I won't... won't be able to control myself..." His voice trembled as he spoke, and then he closed his eyes again.

Every time he looked at her, his desire deepened, making his self-control even weaker!

Harley finally understood what was going on. His face turned red instantly, and he stopped wiping the sweat off Calvert's face.

After all, her actions might also be a form of torment for him.

Finally, they arrived at the hospital. Calvert was rushed into the emergency room, while Harley anxiously waited outside.

He should be safe now that he's at the hospital, but why does she still feel so anxious?

Even when she saw Calvert in distress, his eyes filled with desire, she found herself wanting to help him relieve that desire.

Oh my God, what on earth is she thinking!

Harley quickly dismissed the thoughts in his mind.

After a good while, the doctor came out and said to Harley, "Everything's been taken care of, and I've given Mr. Elledge a sedative. He'll be fine once he wakes up."

"So... don't I need to take any more medicine?" Harley asked.

"No need for that. Just have him drink more water in the next few days to flush out the residual medication from his body. However, in the following days, his body might react more easily than usual. Just ignore it," the doctor said.

Harley was initially listening to the doctor's advice with a serious face. But as the conversation went on, his face turned red again. Uh... 'Easily reactive,' such words really make one's mind wander!

The nurse took a comatose Calvert to the ward, with Harley following closely behind.

Once the nurse left, Harley sat by the bed, looking at Calvert lying on the hospital bed.

Now, his complexion has returned to normal, no longer constantly sweating. With his eyes closed, he looks like he's peacefully asleep.

Today's experience must have felt like a nightmare to him.

If she hadn't rushed over, what terrible things might have happened to him?

Thinking of this, a smile unconsciously crept up on Harley's lips. He was glad he made it in time to protect him. It felt really good!

When Calvert slowly opened his eyes, the first thing he saw was Harley, asleep by his bedside.

Chapter 4402: She is His Hero

How could she be here? Calvert was taken aback, and then he remembered what had happened before.

Oh right, he was tricked by his agent into having dinner with Miss Maldonado. They drugged him, and just when he was in despair, thinking something terrible was about to happen, Harley showed up.

She was like a hero fallen from the sky, saving him from his predicament.

When he was a child, he always hoped that a hero would come and pull him out of his messy life. He wanted to be like other children, to have a warm home, to be loved, and to live a life where he could eat well, dress warmly, and not be beaten every day.

As he grew older, he gradually understood that heroes only exist in fairy tales. So, he stopped harboring such unrealistic expectations.

But then she came into his life, changing his destiny and leading him to live a life he never dared to dream of before.

And now, she had even saved him.

How could he possibly not be moved by someone like this!

He lifted his hand, unable to resist the urge to touch that peacefully sleeping face.

Just as his hand was about to touch her face, her eyelashes fluttered, and a pair of beautiful eyes opened.

Calvert quickly pulled back his hand, instantly snapping back to reality.

What on earth is he doing?!

He has no right to do such a thing, it's like he's desecrating her.

"You're awake, how are you feeling?" Harley asked Calvert.

"There's... there's nothing else, really. Thank you so much this time," Calvert said, his face flushing slightly.

"What you've been through, your agent can't just get away with it, it's outrageous!" Harley said, "I'll deal with this kind of agent for you, and later find you a suitable one."

He watched her, filled with righteous indignation, and felt a warm feeling in his heart, "Mm-hmm."

"If you're feeling okay, you can be discharged this morning. I'll sort out your discharge paperwork in a bit," she said.

"I can handle the discharge procedures myself, I've already troubled you enough!" he said hastily.

"Don't talk about whether it's a hassle or not, aren't we friends?" Harley said.

"Friend..." Calvert's eyes dimmed a bit. Yes, they were just friends. Even being able to be her friend was already a great fortune. How could he dare to fantasize about anything more?

Harley handled the discharge procedures for Calvert and accompanied him back to his residence.

"By the way, these past few days, the doctor has been advising you to drink more water to speed up your metabolism and flush out the residual medication in your body. Also... um, they said your body might react more easily, but don't panic, it's all normal. Once all the residual medication in your body is metabolized, you'll be fine."

After hearing this, Calvert's face suddenly turned beet red.

Suddenly, my body tensed up. What was once a normal body, had suddenly become somewhat sensitive.

"You..." Harley looked at Calvert's rosy cheeks, finding them incredibly beautiful, and suddenly had the urge to tease him.

"What's the matter? We're all adults here, there's nothing to be shy about!" she said, "You can't possibly tell me you don't even know how to relieve stress on your own."

As soon as these words were spoken, Calvert's face turned even redder, "I... I just... just..."

He just "only" pondered for half a day, but couldn't come up with what to say next.

Chapter 4403: Do You Like Me?

Seeing his embarrassed look, Harley was thinking about not teasing him anymore. But when she accidentally glanced at his crotch, she also felt a bit awkward.

Even if she didn't understand anything else, she knew... he was... reacting!

The doctor did mention that there are still remnants of the medication in his system, making his body more sensitive than usual, and therefore more prone to reactions.

But isn't this a bit... too fast for him?

It seemed like he noticed her gaze. Calvert's face turned so red it looked like it was about to bleed. He desperately tugged at the hem of his clothes, trying to use it as a cover.

And from his mouth, came endless apologies, "I'm sorry, I'm sorry... I... I didn't mean to!"

"..." Harley was at a loss for words for a moment. It seemed like she should be the one saying sorry, right?

If she hadn't deliberately teased him with her words just now, he probably wouldn't be in this physical state!

However, at this moment, his flushed face, paired with those black eyes shimmering with moisture, she found him incredibly attractive, so much so that she couldn't tear her gaze away.

Seeing Harley silent, Calvert became even more flustered, fearing she was truly angry.

"Harley, you... you can yell at me, or even hit me, whatever you want, I know... I shouldn't have... I... I really didn't expect my body to... I... I promise I won't do it again!" He rambled on incoherently.

Harley stared at Calvert, suddenly asking, "Do you like me?"

Calvert's body suddenly became incredibly stiff. His eyes, looking at her, were like those of a startled deer, brimming with moisture.

"So you mean, not the kind of liking between friends, but the romantic kind?" Harley asked, being even more straightforward.

Calvert was incredibly nervous, feeling that this answer would impact the future. He thought maybe he should use some excuse to vaguely get by, but he didn't want to deceive her!

But, after he truly expresses his feelings to her, would he even lose his last bit of hope?!

After all, she's such a wonderful person, with a great family background, beautiful looks, and a pleasant personality. There are plenty of people who like her. After he told the truth, he was simply rejected by her.

Just... rejection, it's just that he was rejected a bit earlier than expected. As long as he acts like it's no big deal and accepts it, he should still be able to continue being her friend, right?

He was wrestling with his feelings. After a while, he finally said, "Yes, I like you. It's the kind of liking between a man and a woman. I... I know I'm not good enough for you, but... I'm trying. I hope that one day, I can stand by your side. It's okay if you... reject me. I'm mentally prepared for it. It won't upset me. So, you can reject me now if you want..."

Calvert hung his head, mumbling incoherently.

"Would you really not be upset if I turned you down?" Harley's voice rang out.

"No... No, I won't." His voice trembled slightly as he responded. Despite the fact that he would be heartbroken, even desperate... But hadn't he been mentally preparing himself for this over the years?

He was just a kid from a low-income family, with a mother who ran away and a father who was an alcoholic. Even though he had made some progress in the past couple of years, when compared to her, the difference was like night and day.

Between them, there was a world of difference. It was only natural that he would be rejected!

Chapter 4404: Not Friends

"Really? Well, I'm quite upset then," Harley said.

Calvert was taken aback, abruptly lifting his head to look at the other person. "You're upset?" Had he answered something incorrectly again?

"Yeah, it's pretty sad. You say you like me, but it seems like you wouldn't be upset if I rejected you. It's as if your affection for me is just casual, just a nonchalant liking. That's why you wouldn't be upset even if you were rejected!" Harley said.

Calvert's face was a mix of red and white, "No... that's not it, my feelings for you have never been casual, I just... just..."

He stammered, but his voice got stuck once again.

He just didn't want to end up not even being able to be friends with her.

"I'm going to ask you one last time, if I reject you, are you really not going to be upset?" Harley asked seriously.

Calvert looked at the person in front of him. This time, he seemed to have made up his mind and answered truthfully, "Yes, and it will be very painful, probably unbearable. But... even so, I... I still want to stay by your side, just to watch you quietly. It's enough if you can occasionally talk to me. I don't want to end up as strangers just because I confessed my feelings for you!"

As he continued speaking, his voice choked with emotion. His eyes were incredibly red, as if the mist in them could turn into tears at any moment, ready to flow down his cheeks.

Harley looked at Calvert, feeling a surge of emotions in his heart.

She didn't dislike Calvert saying he liked her, in fact... she was even somewhat accepting of it.

And now, when he says that he'd be devastated if she rejected him, she might even feel... happy?!

His reddened eyes and slightly trembling body made her feel pity and heartache.

Could it be... she has different feelings for him? Feelings that go beyond friendship, for him...

"Harley, please don't hate me, okay?" Calvert mumbled, choking back tears.

Thump! Thump! Thump!

Harley found his heart suddenly pounding faster.

Is this what they call love at first sight?

Once, she had feelings for Lornell, you could even say she loved him deeply. But that affection and love, accumulated over the months of this year, gradually formed into a habit.

After breaking off her engagement with Lornell, she didn't think she'd fall in love with anyone else anytime soon. After all, it wouldn't be easy to find another person in this world who could make her heart flutter.

Moreover, that person must be honest and kind, not approaching her deliberately because of her family background, but simply liking her for who she is.

In this vast sea of humanity, what are the odds of us meeting?!

But now, has she encountered it?

"I won't hate you," Harley began, "And when you said you liked me, I was actually very happy. But Calvert, I've broken off an engagement before, so if I were to start another relationship, I would be more cautious. I don't want to reject you, but right now, I can't make any promises to you..."

Calvert listened, his eyes slowly widening, as if he couldn't quite believe what he was hearing.

"Can... Can I still stay by your side, as... as a friend?" Calvert asked, his voice trembling.

"It's not just friendship," Harley said. "I want to see what it would be like to be with you. So, can we try to be more than friends first? If it doesn't work out, we can always go back to being friends."

Chapter 4405: How to Describe It?

At this moment, Calvert held his breath, deeply afraid that he might have misunderstood.

"I know, my proposal is somewhat selfish, only considering myself. So, if it upsets you, feel free to say so. We can think about whether there are other ways for us to get along that suit both of us," Harley said.

"I... I'm not unhappy, can I really be with you as more than just friends?" he asked excitedly.

"Yes, it's like being in a relationship, but... it's not official. So technically, you're not my boyfriend. If in the future, you find someone else you like, you can tell me anytime. There's no need to feel burdened," Harley said.

In general, there are no restrictions between the two of them.

No titles, no responsibilities, no demands!

She just wanted to know if what she felt for Calvert was truly love.

However, knowing how he feels about her and still acting this way, it's a bit selfish.

"I'm willing!" Calvert hastily said, "I won't love anyone else, the only person I love is you. No matter how you want our relationship to be, I can adapt!"

Harley couldn't help but chuckle, "What do you mean 'cooperate'? Just be yourself like you usually are. But... um, we could be a bit more intimate with each other."

Her smile instantly eased his nerves.

"Also, don't say things like 'never again'. Life is long, who can predict the future?" Harley said, "Just like me, I never thought I'd see the day when I'd break off my engagement with Lornell. But in the end, didn't our engagement still end?"

Calvert pursed his lips, silently saying to himself: But he can't, in his life, apart from her, he will never love anyone else.

From the moment he fell in love, he was incredibly aware of this fact!

Karen was dumbfounded when she found out that Harley and Calvert were "together".

"Are you dating Calvert?" she asked in surprise.

"It's not exactly dating," Harley explained. "It's more like we're hanging out in a dating-like manner, but without the official label of being in a relationship."

After all, as the heir to the Gu family, if she officially starts dating someone, it would inevitably become big news, and it could even affect the family business.

Unless one day, she's truly sure that she genuinely likes Calvert, she won't announce they're dating. Otherwise, if they start dating now and later she realizes her feelings for Calvert aren't romantic, breaking up might negatively impact the business.

This would probably be a blow to Calvert, wouldn't it?

Perhaps he'll face even more rumors and gossip.

So, all she wants to do now is to test the waters, to figure out what her true feelings are.

"So... there's no commitment, no responsibility, and no obligation. 'Being together' but still able to see other people, right?" Karen asked.

Harley pondered for a moment and said, "To some extent, yes. But personally, I'm not a fan of juggling multiple relationships. If he truly finds someone else he likes, then we can just go back to being regular friends," Harley stated.

"So, aren't you guys basically friends with benefits?" Karen said.

"Pfft!" Harley nearly spat out the coffee he was drinking.

What kind of description is this!

Chapter 4406: Awakening

"What do you mean by 'friends with benefits'? What is that!" Harley quickly retorted.

"Hey, if two people are together and they don't need to take responsibility for each other, isn't that just friends with benefits?" Karen retorted.

"We're not in... um, that kind of relationship," Harley said.

"Are you sure?" Karen looked at Hao You skeptically, "I mean, you've seen a lot of handsome guys in the entertainment industry, but Calvert isn't bad looking either. Plus, I've noticed he's been getting more and more handsome these past two years. Don't you think he sometimes gives off this isolated yet pitiful vibe?"

"..." Suddenly, in Harley's mind, the image of that day she went to save Calvert flashed. Calvert's face was flushed, yet his eyes were misty.

Suddenly, my heart started pounding again.

"I also saw in a magazine that he's been described by many female netizens as the man they most want to swoon over. It's impressive that despite his fame, he hasn't been involved in any scandals, and there's no talk of him being particularly close to any woman... well, except for you," Karen added. "So, even if you don't have any intentions with him now, are you sure it will stay that way in the future?"

Harley looked at Hao You with a hint of embarrassment, "Let's... just go with the flow in the future."

"You seem to really like Calvert, don't you?" Karen said.

Harley was taken aback, "I really like him?"

"What else could it be? With your cautious nature, you just broke off an engagement two years ago. Would you jump into another pit so quickly? You say you don't need to be responsible for each other with Calvert, that he can go find other women. But when he really finds someone else, can you truly be indifferent? Can you immediately revert back to being just friends?" Karen said bluntly.

Harley was silent. The mere thought of Calvert being with other women made her uncomfortable, even causing a faint stabbing pain in her chest.

"So, seize the day!" Karen patted her friend's shoulder, grinning mischievously. "If you want to confirm whether you really like him or not, just go on a date with him. That should clear things up."

In today's society, things are not like they used to be. If two people willingly engage in a relationship before marriage, there's nothing wrong with that.

Did Harley's face suddenly turn red? Did she eat Calvert?

By the time she snapped back to reality, she had unknowingly arrived at Calvert's apartment door.

These past few days, Calvert has put all his work on hold due to medication, and has been staying in his apartment.

She knew the apartment's passcode, so at that moment, she punched in the code and entered the apartment herself.

There's no one in the living room, so they must be in the room.

Harley headed towards Calvert's bedroom. When she reached the door, she knocked twice but received no response. So, she knocked harder, making a louder noise, and called out, "Calvert? Are you there?"

Still no response. Harley pushed open the bedroom door, hearing a muffled groan, as if something was being suppressed.

At the same time, she noticed the quilt on the bed was moving, clearly indicating that he was completely wrapped up under it.

Could it be that he's not feeling well, or something happened to him?

Harley rushed over, asking, "Calvert, what's wrong? Are you feeling unwell? Do you need me to take you to the hospital again...?"

Before her words even had a chance to fade, the blanket was suddenly lifted from within. A pair of arms reached out from under the blanket, and abruptly wrapped around her waist.

Chapter 4407: Unexpected

"Ah!" Harley gasped, before he could even react, he was already dragged onto the bed by the other person.

"I... feel so uncomfortable..." Calvert's voice murmured, his body heavily pressing down on Harley. His eyes were hazy as he looked at her, and his feverish body kept rubbing against hers.

Harley was startled by Calvert's sudden move. But then he realized what was pressing against his body. It was his...

So, his body is just reacting to the medication right now.

This is a normal occurrence.

"Harley, can you help me..." His voice was hoarse, and his beautiful black eyes were full of mist.

A thought crossed Harley's mind, recalling Karen's words. Could she really handle it if he were to be with other women in the future?

Is it really right to be together, unbound by anything, all in the name of selfishness?

Just how much did she like him? At this moment, his actions didn't bother her at all. In fact, she even wanted... to knock him over, to see him moved, to be the only one reflected in his eyes...

Even... they want to make him cry!

What kind of sick joke is this?! Harley thought to himself.

"Help me... I feel so awful... so awful..." Calvert's voice continued to echo in her ears, the mist in his eyes growing thicker, as if tears were about to burst forth at any moment.

Harley took a deep breath, as if making some kind of resolution, "Alright, I'll help you."

Her hand slowly moved down, touching his vulnerable spot.

They hadn't even shared a kiss yet, but now, she had touched him there. This... was probably a triple jump, Harley thought to herself.

He nuzzled into her palm, his eyes involuntarily closing, a soft hum escaping his lips.

"Feeling comfortable?" She was quite curious.

"So...so good, I really...like...Harley...can you touch me more..." Calvert pleaded, the burning heat in his body seemed to lessen a lot at this moment, due to such touch.

It was so comfortable, so comfortable that he didn't want to wake up from this dream.

Only in her dreams would she help him like this, their bodies intimately intertwined.

After satisfying his physical desires, Calvert suddenly shivered. His previously hazy thoughts gradually became clear, and the sensation was still so vivid.

Could it be... are you saying, this isn't a dream?

"What's wrong? Still not feeling well? Why has your face suddenly turned so pale?" Harley's voice echoed in Calvert's ears.

His body shivered, his eyes still tightly shut, his entire body becoming incredibly tense.

If those weren't just dreams... then what he had done before was undoubtedly a desecration to her!

He even went as far as to... on her hand.

Will she get mad? Will she make our previous agreement null and void?

He was afraid that once she opened her eyes, all the beauty would vanish into thin air!

"Are you really not feeling well? Is it your eyes that are bothering you? You've been keeping them closed. I can take you to the hospital right now." As her words trailed off, it seemed like she was about to get up and leave him.

"No need for the hospital!" He suddenly opened his eyes, grabbing her in one swift motion!

"I'm okay... just... I'm sorry, I'm sorry..." He apologized to her in a flustered manner, "I thought it was just my illusion, that's why I treated you like this... If I knew you were real, I would never have..."

Chapter 4408: Want to Date

Harley blinked his eyes. So, he had thought it was an illusion earlier, which made him so bold. But now, realizing it's reality, he's panicking like this?!

"I'm not blaming you for anything, besides, I chose to do this!" Harley said.

Calvert was taken aback, staring at her blankly, seemingly unable to react.

Harley let out a sigh, "Do you think you can force me to do this if I'm not willing? So, you don't need to apologize. After all, it's a matter of mutual consent!"

Calvert's pale face slowly turned red.

She said... this is what she wanted. Does that mean... she actually...

He looked into her eyes, seeing a hint of anticipation. Yet, he feared it was just his own wishful thinking. His lips quivered, but in the end, he said nothing.

"I like you, Calvert!" Harley blurted out. Now that she was sure of her feelings, she decided to tell him straight up.

Even though the future holds many uncertainties, and she might get hurt again, at least for now, she doesn't want to live with regrets!

"You... you like me?" Calvert asked, his lips trembling, looking at Harley in disbelief.

"Yes, I like you, so stop overthinking," she said. Of course, he would overthink. It was partly her fault. In this relationship, her attitude had been too ambiguous. She had even told him that they were together, but without any official status, without any obligations or responsibilities.

Thinking about it, these must be the sources of his unease, right?

"Calvert, I like you, so, let's date," Harley added.

Calvert looked utterly bewildered. What was she talking about? Dating? Her and him?

But how could this be possible? He must have heard it wrong!

"What's the matter? At least give me an answer, don't you want to?" His prolonged silence prompted Harley to ask again.

Finally snapping back to reality, Calvert swallowed the saliva that had pooled in his throat, "Are... are you asking me out?"

"Right, since you like me and I've realized I like you too, it's better for us to be together, bound by responsibility to each other. After we start dating, we'll be boyfriend and girlfriend," Harley said.

"Really... you want to date me? You're not joking?" Calvert still couldn't believe it.

Harley thought for a moment, then leaned over and kissed the other person's lips. "Now, do you believe me?"

Calvert's eyes widened. It was only at this moment that he truly believed she really wanted to be with him.

"However, we'll have to wait until the medication in your system has completely metabolized before I take you to meet my parents," Harley added.

After all, given his current physical condition, if anything unexpected happened in front of her parents, it would probably be a huge embarrassment.

His face was flushed with embarrassment, as if stained with blood, yet the corners of his lips curled up in a charming smile.

That smile, it was so captivating, it had Harley utterly mesmerized!

A few days later, Calvert's body was finally back to normal. All the blood tests done at the hospital showed normal results.

At the Hart Mansion, Harley brought Calvert to meet his parents.

Calvert looked visibly tense, while Harley, on the other hand, appeared completely calm.

Sitting on the sofa directly across from them were Brian and Valda, looking at the man their daughter had brought home.

Calvert and his family had often heard their daughter mention this young man over the past couple of years. However, this was their first time meeting him, and it was as their daughter's boyfriend.

"Are you two dating?" Brian asked.

"Yes," replied Harley.

"I'm asking him, Harley, don't rush to answer," Brian said to his daughter, his sharp gaze falling on Calvert.

Calvert nervously moistened his somewhat dry lips, "Yes, Harley and I are dating."

"Do you think you're good enough for her?" Brian asked again.

"Dad!" Harley called out, somewhat disgruntled. In her view, her father wasn't the type to care about status or rank. Otherwise, he wouldn't have ended up with her mother.

After all, her mother was just an ordinary person's daughter, not some high-society lady.

Brian, however, paid no attention to his daughter, his gaze fixed solely on Calvert.

Calvert took a deep breath and said, "I will strive to become someone worthy of her!"

From the very beginning, there was a gap in their social statuses.

This was something he couldn't change, but he didn't want to back down and give up on Harley.

Now, he wants to give it his all to fight for what he wants!

Brian stared intently at the person in front of him. Although Calvert was nervous, he didn't avoid the other's gaze, instead, he met it head-on.

After a good while, Brian said, "Alright, stay and have dinner with us."

Huh?!

Calvert looked utterly bewildered, while Harley just chuckled and responded to their parents with a cheerful "Okay!"

Naturally, her father's words were a sign of approval for Calvert to become her boyfriend!

It wasn't until after dinner, when Harley saw Calvert out, that Calvert seemed a bit taken aback.

"Did your parents agree to us dating?"

"Yeah, why else would I have invited you for dinner?" Harley said.

"But... how did they agree so quickly?" Calvert still found it hard to believe.

"What else do you expect? Do you think this is like a TV drama where I'm supposed to deliberately make things difficult for you, humiliate you? Or do you want me to ask how much money it would take for you to leave me?" Harley retorted.

Calvert was speechless.

"My parents, they love me very much. So, whoever I love, they would never make it difficult for them," Harley said. "Calvert, I like you. So, no matter what your background is or what your past was like, my parents will definitely accept you. I know very well that all they want is for me to be happy."

He stood there, stunned. So, these were her parents? All they wanted was their child's happiness, so different from his own parents.

But in his heart, there wasn't a shred of jealousy. He just felt so happy for her. She had such a wonderful family, such loving parents, and was living a great life. She didn't have to endure the hardships he had gone through. It was truly wonderful.

"What's the matter? Why so quiet?" Harley asked.

"Harley, all I want is for you to be happy." Even if they were to break up in the future, he would still wish her happiness. He didn't know how long their relationship would last, but every day he spent with her was an incredibly precious memory to him.

She smiled, "We will be happy together, trust me, Calvert!"

It was a very simple sentence, devoid of any fancy rhetoric, yet he believed in it profoundly!

Simply because the person who said this was her - the one he loved most in his life!

During the few days Harley stayed at home to recover before heading to Calvert, he had already handed over Calvert's agent and that Miss Maldonado to the police.

Everything is being handled by the police.

Chapter 4410: Boyfriend

Though out there, not many people know about this.

But everyone in this circle knows about it.

Everyone knew that Harley had stuck his neck out for Calvert, and now Harley had become Calvert's rock.

However, when the news of their relationship broke, everyone in the circle was left utterly shocked.

After all, she's the big princess of the entertainment industry. She actually fell for this Calvert, who has no family background at all, and even... became boyfriend and girlfriend?!

Many people were both envious and jealous of Calvert's good fortune, and naturally, there were also many who suspected that Calvert must have used some underhanded methods.

Otherwise, with so many handsome men and beautiful women in the entertainment industry, why would Harley be interested in them!

However, both Harley and Calvert chose to ignore these rumors and gossips. After all, in this circle, if you care about these rumors, you're bound to get depressed.

"You don't need to get resources for me, I want to rely on my own efforts," Calvert said seriously to Harley.

"Sure!" Harley responded cheerfully, "But even if I don't help you get resources, those resources will keep coming your way because you're my boyfriend. You may never know which ones you earned through your own abilities and which ones were given to you because others wanted to please you. Unless you leave the industry and switch to a field that has nothing to do with the entertainment circle."

Calvert looked up, "Are you asking me to quit the industry?"

Harley was taken aback. At this moment, she suddenly had a feeling that if she really agreed, he would probably quit the circle without hesitation.

"You shouldn't be asking me, but rather, you should be asking yourself. This is your career, your future life!" she said.

But... she is his life!

From the moment he entered the entertainment industry, it was because of her recommendation. It was her who made him live like a human being!

He had always seized every opportunity, climbing relentlessly upwards, all because of her. He just wanted to stand by her side, to be more worthy of her.

"I don't know what else I could do if I leave this circle." Over the past couple of years, he's become increasingly adept at navigating this world. "What I want is to be able to accompany you on a longer journey. If you're destined to be in this circle, then I want to stay in it too. If I can't distinguish which resources I've earned through my own abilities and which ones you've brought to me, that's okay. I'll strive to do better, so good that maybe one day, I might be able to help you."

He didn't want to be forever on the receiving end of her help. He also hoped that he could be of use to her!

Harley laughed, patting Calvert on the shoulder, "You got this, boyfriend!"

Calvert was taken aback for a moment, a feeling of Harley washed over him. Boyfriend... yes, he was now her boyfriend!

Harley doesn't want her relationship to be public, attracting public attention, especially now that she's still dating Calvert.

And those gossip journalists, naturally, after hearing such rumors, tactfully avoided the scandal involving Harley and Calvert.

After all, you don't want to mess with the Hart family. Those journalists who have crossed the Hart family in the past didn't end up well!

When Calvert is at work, Harley often drops by for a visit.

Just like this fashion show, Calvert is on the runway, while Harley is in the audience, watching Calvert strut his stuff.

The moment she saw him appear, her gaze seemed to be unable to move away from him!