

Ex-husband Goes Money Comes Chapter 373

“Of course, it’s my responsibility. I’ll marry Viola and take responsibility for this!” Ormand agreed without hesitation.

Bentley narrowed his eyes coldly and looked at Ormand mockingly. Bentley said, “Do you think this is over as long as you take responsibility?”

Viola understood Bentley too well. Bentley held a grudge against Ormand now!

Bentley was too vengeful, and if Bentley didn’t punish Ormand, Bentley wouldn’t let Ormand off easily.

Viola quickly said, “Bentley, I made a mistake too. Orin has just recovered. Don’t think about how to torment Orin.”

“Ormand wouldn’t know how to cherish you if we don’t teach him a lesson. Does he think that he can easily get the precious daughter of the McGraw family just because you’re pregnant?” Bentley said disapprovingly.

“Bentley...”

Viola was about to walk up when Ormand stopped her and said, “No matter how much you want to make things difficult for me, I’ll take it all. I won’t resist!”

“Alright.”

After getting Ormand’s promise, Bentley stood up and glanced at Ormand icily. Then Bentley turned and left.

Viola quickly called out to Bentley, “Bentley, does Bobby know about this? You didn’t tell him, right?”

Bentley was reluctant to make a move on Viola, but it was different for Bobby. Bobby had been disciplining Viola since she was young. Bobby would not let Viola and Ormand off.

Bentley stopped and said sadly, “On Christmas Eve, go and beg for forgiveness yourself.”

Viola breathed a sigh of relief. Hearing that, Viola knew that Bobby still didn't know.

Viola gently patted her chest with small hands, rejoicing that she could still keep her legs for two more days.

"Are you that afraid of Bobby?" Ormand took in Viola's actions and held her hand.

"Once Bobby finds out, he will explode in anger! After all, this is no small matter. Bobby will not let me off, let alone you!"

"Don't worry. With me here, no one can hurt you." Ormand stroked Viola's head and hugged her tightly.

"Don't try to be brave. You will only end up worse than me."

"No. I have to think of a way in advance so that Bobby can vent his anger on Christmas Eve as soon as possible!" Viola frowned, looking grim.

It was then Christmas Eve.

At noon, Viola, Ormand, and Todd gathered at Javon's place for a Christmas Eve meal together.

Ormand had prepared many exquisite gifts. In the evening, Ormand and Viola returned to Adain Mountain. They went directly to Willard's villa on the top of the mountain.

The villa was bustling with noise and excitement.

Lily, Bobby, Bentley, and Russell were all there.

This time Ormand did not bring the ghost mask with him to the McGraw family. When Lily came out and saw Ormand, she was stunned.

"Mr. Hobson is so handsome. Looks like those rumors are all fake?"

Ormand pursed his lips and did not answer.

Viola sneered and mocked Lily, "Of course. The rumors can't be compared to what you see with your own eyes. After all, some people like to listen to rumors. Now that you see Orin's true face, I'm afraid you're very jealous, right?"

Lily glared at Viola. Lily was indeed very jealous. Lily's chest was about to explode from anger.

However, today was Christmas Eve. Willard had told Lily in advance to behave properly. Moreover, Viola's brothers had all returned, and her fiancé was also there. Lily could not beat Viola with words.

Thinking of this, Lily snorted arrogantly, rolled her eyes, and turned to leave.

Viola was too lazy to argue with Lily, so Viola dragged Ormand into the villa.

As soon as they entered, Lainey dragged Viola over to put on the decorations while Ormand was dragged away by Russell. The two of them went outside to set off firecrackers.

Because it was a day for union, Willard gave all the servants in the villa a break. After the chef finished cooking dinner, he would immediately go back to his family.

The deafening sound of firecrackers was there for a long time, and the whole villa was in a festive atmosphere.

During dinner, everyone was quiet. Although everyone had smiles on their faces, they seemed to have different thoughts and were all pondering over their own matters.

Viola cleared her throat lightly.

Ormand immediately put down his spoon and elegantly wiped his lips with a tissue. Ormand was the first to break the silence.

“Mr. McGraw, apart from coming here as Viola’s plus-one for a reunion dinner, I would like to announce a very important matter to everyone.”

Viola subconsciously tightened her grip on her fork and cast a glance in Bobby's direction.

However, Viola saw that Bobby was frowning and seemed to be thinking about something else.

It was so quiet that there was only the sound of plates and forks.

"Viola is seven-week pregnant. Viola is having twins. We wanted to wait a bit more before making it public. But considering that we are all family, we thought might as well tell everyone on Christmas Eve."

After Ormand finished speaking, Willard and Lainey were both pleasantly surprised. Lily looked at Viola's belly with a look of astonishment, jealousy, and unwillingness.

Bentley had already known a few days in advance, and he had no extra expression.

Russell nervously swallowed the soup in his mouth and glanced at Bobby. Russell had already received good news from Viola a day earlier.

Among everyone's different expressions, Bobby had the reaction.

Bobby slammed his fork on the table, his sharp eyes filled with shock and rage.

The sudden loud noise scared Viola so much that her shoulders trembled and Viola covered her face awkwardly. Ormand immediately pulled Viola into his arms and patted her gently.

"Are you really pregnant?"

"Viola, what did you promise me before? Is this the answer you gave me?" Bobby gritted his teeth and stared at Viola in Ormand's arms.

Willard cleared his throat twice in a deep voice and calmed everyone down.

“This is a good thing, a great thing. In a few months, I will be able to hold my grandchild! Viola, you are very good! Unlike you, Bobby, how long have you been married? Lainey is still not pregnant! You should be punished.”

Lainey’s face was red, and she lowered her head in embarrassment.

Bobby didn’t say anything. After all, in front of Willard, he couldn’t scold Viola.

After Willard finished dealing with Bobby, Willard turned to look at Bentley and Russell and said, “And the two of you, until now, you haven’t even found a wife. When can I have a grandchild? A bunch of disappointing people!”

Bentley and Russell lowered their heads and continued to eat without a word.

Bentley was not ready to be in a relationship. Bentley looked indifferent.

Because Russell had an engagement with Rebecca before, Russell and Willard had been at odds. Until now, Russell had not spoken a word to Willard. Moreover, the Felton family would have to wait until next year to reunite with Sherlyn.

Russell had to wait until the Felton family reunited with Sherlyn and think of a way to persuade Willard to help him get engaged.

At the table, everyone had their own thoughts.

In silence, Ormand looked at Willard and continued, "Mr. McGraw, I want to find a good day to get registered with Viola after Christmas. I want to start making arrangements for the wedding. As for the baby, I will find a chance to tell everyone after the wedding.”

“Um... It’s time to think about your marriage, but isn’t it a little too hasty to have the wedding after Christmas?”

Under the dining table, Ormand held Viola’s hand tightly. Ormand looked at Viola passionately. Ormand spoke to Willard.

“Mr. McGraw, don’t worry. I will focus all my energy on preparing for the wedding. It’s not because of the pressure of the baby coming. I will give Viola the best wedding!”

“Since that’s the case...” Willard’s eyes were filled with gratification.

“I don’t agree.”

Before Willard could finish, he was interrupted by a sharp voice.
