

The Untouchable Ex-Wife

Chapter 1565

All Timothy knew was that Stefan and Renee had reconciled with each other, but he didn't know about Renee's blindness.

"It's nothing, Grandpa. You know Jovan can never say anything nice; just ignore him." Stefan hid the truth from Timothy because he didn't want him to worry.

Jovan walked up to Timothy and faked a smile. "Grandpa, I think the worst decision you've made was entrusting Renee to Stefan. All he ever did was hurt her. And now... even her body was hurt. If Renee's grandfather learns about it, I don't think he'll be able to rest in peace."

"Shut up!" Clenching his fists, Stefan said to Jovan firmly, "Please leave if you have nothing better to do. Don't say such cruel words in front of an old man."

"Cruel?" Jovan snorted. "When you did it, you didn't find it cruel. I'm just stating facts, so why is it cruel? Even if it is, who caused this?"

Jovan hated Stefan's hypocritical side, and Stefan hated Jovan's wickedness. Both had wronged Renee in different ways, and it was the guilt they felt for it that made them so overbearing.

"Stop arguing! I'm not dead yet!" Taking a deep breath, Timothy leaned against the head of the bed and felt around for his glasses. After that, he pointed at Jovan and said, "Tell me-what's the matter with Renee? Why did you say that her body was hurt?"

"Renee..." Jovan was about to tell Timothy when he felt Stefan's threatening gaze on him. After some contemplation, he said ambiguously, "She loves Stefan so much and missed him so badly that her body weakened. I really can't take it. Grandpa, I hope you can talk some sense into Stefan. After all, she's his wife, so he has to take care of her, right? If not, there are plenty of people who can do that for him."

"You're right, Van. Did you hear that, Stef?" Timothy stared at Stefan fiercely, feeling like beating up his disappointing grandson.

"Okay, Grandpa. I know I was a jerk to her, and I'll never do it again." Stefan nodded obediently. Since Jovan was keeping the peace for now, so would he.

"Fine then. Bring Ren and my two great-grandkids to see me in a couple of days..." Timothy patted the back of Stefan's hand and said sadly, "I'm afraid I already have one foot in the grave, so I want to enjoy some time with my family before I go. Then I can rest in peace and have a good conversation with Ren's grandfather."

"Don't say that, Grandpa. The doctor said you'll be okay as long as you rest well. You need to be positive," Stefan urged.

"I know my body, and Hunt Enterprise has been developing well under your leadership these past years. I know that you've contributed a lot, but there are also many people coveting it. It'll all come down to you and Jovan when I'm gone..." Timothy glanced at Stefan before looking at Jovan.

Although you both don't share the same parents, you both belong to the same Hunt family. The most important thing is a harmonious family, so don't do anything bad and ruin our company!" Timothy sighed, then tried to send Stefan off first by saying to Jovan, "Van, you stay. I've got something to say to you alone."
