

Ex-Wife 1862

Chapter 1862

The people around them felt confused watching them hug.

"Why are they hugging each other so intimately? They look so lovey-dovey."

"Although they're divorced, they look more in love with each other than my husband and I..."

"Ah, I really don't understand rich people. Isn't it tiring to keep breaking up and getting back together?"

Renee's cheeks heated in shame, and she wanted to leave, but Stefan just hugged her even tighter.

"Calm down, time's not up yet," Stefan closed his eyes and whispered to Renee.

"You know, I should be asking you that question. Isn't it tiring for you?" Renee stopped struggling and whispered furiously to Stefan. She couldn't blame the parents for bringing it up; she herself was tired of this vicious circle. She didn't want to feel these emotions anymore.. She just wanted peace.

After ten minutes passed, Renee and Stefan let go of each other.

"Great! That's the kind of romance we want to see!" Some of the parents started clapping enthusiastically.

Adie and Abby looked at each other, covered their mouths, and giggled.

"I told you, Adie-Mommy is still in love with Daddy. Their relationship will get better after they hug each other."

Yeah, Mommy is just stubborn. I don't think she's mad anymore..."

"Mommy behaved herself today, but Daddy didn't. We've got to come up with a way to make him fix this."

"Mm, let me think..." Adie frowned deeply as he thought about it. Finally, he smiled and said, " I have an idea."

After the group session, the parents went to start cooking. They took out the ingredients they had fished and foraged, and either cooked or roasted the seafood. Meanwhile, the children happily ran and played on the beach, their gleeful laughter resonating throughout the whole island.

Adie was writing something in the sand when a girl walked up to him with an apple in her hands.

"Adie, I've got an apple. Do you want it?" The girl asked sweetly.

"No!" Adie refused instantly without even looking up, just as insensitive as Stefan. However, he suddenly seemed to recall something. Wait a minute. He turned around and looked at the apple in the girl's hand. "I'll take it."

"Really? Adie, you want my apple? I'm so glad! The girl's eyes shone with happiness as she eagerly handed the apple to Adie.

Adie took the apple and went to a tap to wash it. Then, he walked over to a girl in a white dress who was watching the sea quietly and held it out to her. "Hey, crybaby. This is for you!"

The girl looked up at Adie in confusion, then asked indifferently. "Why are you giving me an apple?"

"Didn't you say you love eating apples?" When the girl hesitated to take the apple, Adie raised an eyebrow and straightened, about to leave. "It's fine if you don't want it."

"Wait." The girl quickly took the apple from Adie and bit it. "Of course, I want it."

'You're silly, Tiffany Elsher!" Adie said with a grin, and the both of them laughed. Meanwhile, someone secretly watched the two children from nearby....
