Chapter 1011 Diamond Ring

[This is awesome. Paige is so lucky.]

[What's the point of working? Go home and become a noble wife.]

[Jealousy, how come she is so successful?]

All sorts of sour talk comes into view.

Paige was too lazy to read too much, so she just quit and looked at the other topics on the hot search.

As the president of X Entertainment, hot searches are something she reads at countless times a day.

Mainly, to see the news about the entertainment industry.

And to see if anything happens to her artists.

To avoid any unforeseen circumstances for her own artists, which the company does not detect in time, resulting in even worse repercussions.

After looking around and not finding anything, she briefly browsed around for some topics on social news, and then exited Weibo and closed her eyes to rest.

The next day, Abel took Paige and went back to the McCall family to have a formal talk with the two elders about the marriage.

On the McCall family, the two elders didn't say anything.

Paige could sense that there was still a divide between them and herself, but she still maintained the courtesy she should have.

Although, she has a lot to say about Abel's mother.

However, she has completely let go of it.

Not for anything else, but for the sake of Abel not having to be caught in the middle.

Abel, who was so kind to her, made many concessions for her.

Naturally, she couldn't help but do something for Abel.

After going to the McCall family to see the two elders of the McCall family, Paige then went with Abel, for a maternity check-up.

The results of the maternity test was normal.

On the third day, Abel went to the master and calculated the date of the wedding, which was set for the twelfth of next month.

On the fourth day, Paige took Abel, the two elders of the McCall family, and arrived in the small county where her family was located.

With that, said the attendant returned her gaze to her phone.
This ring, however, is worth a million.
Who can afford it in this small county?
And looking at the woman dressed quite averagely, she did not feel she could afford it.
The attitude of the clerk dissuaded Paige in a second.
She knew exactly what the clerk was thinking.
She didn't bother with such people and turned straight to the front of another brand of diamond jewellery counter and looked at it casually.
The clerk at the other house, with a smile on her face, looked at her and asked, "Miss, you want to buy a ring, don't you?"
"I'm just looking around." Paige said as she looked at the jewellery.
The jewellery that comes into view is relatively inexpensive for her.
The style, she felt, was very generic.

Rather, there is nothing that appeals to her.

The clerk opposite, hearing Paige's words, immediately rolled her eyes towards looking at Paige.

And then looking at the clerk in front of Paige, she said with her lips, "A poor woman who only looks but doesn't buy."

All this is not known to Paige.

However, the clerk in front of her saw it.

The girl just smiled blandly, and then with a serious face, helped Paige to recommend something.

"Miss, I think, you have a temperament that suits this one, take a look."

She pointed to a simple and generous two-carat diamond ring and said.

The ring is a very plain style, what is not plain is that the diamonds are very well made.

Paige shook her head.

The eye falls on the necklace, which is priced at 200,000.

At that, she immediately looked at the long-haired clerk, "Why does that name sound so familiar?"

The long-haired clerk said, "She is your idol, Ryan's agent and boss, the female president of X Entertainment."

At the sound of that, she became even more excited, "What?"

"I've seen her picture before, but didn't remember her face." she said again, her inner remorse once again increasing.

"That's the downside of not playing Weibo, look at me, I play often enough to remember some people."

At this moment, she wanted to die even more.

Paige hadn't been walking for long with her newly bought necklace when Abel followed her from behind and took her into his arms.

While following her all the way forward, Abel looked carelessly at the various signs that came into view that he wouldn't even buy, and asked, "Why didn't you wait for me at the same place? I didn't see you when I came out, so I searched you for a long time."

As he spoke, Abel noticed the bag that Paige was carrying in her hand.

He asked, "What did you buy?"

"Diamond necklace, 200,000." said Paige.

"It's so cheap." Abel said indifferently.

Without saying anything, Paige took Abel to the lift and went up to the second floor.

The first floor is devoted to the sale of women's clothing.

There are two areas in total.

On one side is the middle-aged and elderly area.

On the other side, there is the young ladies area.

Paige took Abel's hand and looked around the middle-aged and elderly section, for a long time, and eventually, helped her mother buy several coats.

Although Abel does not like it, he will buy it if Paige likes it.

Both men took out their phones at the same time.

The same news content comes to the eye.

News is popping up on Weibo News from.

[Paige's sky-high bride price.]

Paige glanced at Abel before tapping on the message.

The news, roughly speaking, is that a person who claims to be her neighbour has just tweeted the story.

It says that the Mccall family gave her family a bride price of 30 million.

This news leaked by Paige's mother.

And below this news, there is a screenshot.

The Weibo avatar was one she recognised.

It was the daughter of the old woman's family, who lived across the street from her house.

It didn't surprise her that her mother would say something about it.

When people live to their age, their favourite thing to do is, basically, to show off their kids.

This is probably one of the most unifying interests of middle-aged and older people these days.

The news, which has just been sent out, has already surpassed six figures in terms of forwarding and comments.

In the comments section, there was a lot of talk.

[Thirty million, the Mccall family is really generous. I'm jealous.]

[Is this selling daughter? 30 million? This woman is encrusted with gold, huh?]

[If you're jealous, just say so, it's useless to be jealous, the more jealous you are, the worse your life will be.]

[If a strong woman like Paige is not worth 30 million, do you worth it?]

[Someone else's fiancé, once again, didn't let me down].

Chapter 1015 Jocelyn is covered in blood

Such a feeling made Jocelyn feel an intense fear.

The cramping sensation became more and more intense, and she could even feel the two babies inside her womb, which kept rolling over and over, as if trying to break free, from her stomach.

At the same time, the hot stay in the lower body continued to roll outwards.

She was in pain and her eyes went black.

Even breathing became difficult.

Taking a deep breath, Jocelyn, with trembling hands and caution, leaned against the head of the bed and with difficulty touched the spot underneath her.

Immediately afterwards, a pair of bodies stained red with blood came into view.

She was tempted to open her mouth and go shout at someone.

However, no sound could be made.

In her ears, she could hear nothing but her own heartbeat, and the sound of her ragged breathing.

Intense fear, spreading wildly, made her heart, almost, jump out of her chest.

What's going on?

Is she going to have a miscarriage?

From the time she got pregnant until now, she has been fine.

The pulse is as steady as ever.

Every fetal test was normal.

What's more, she has always been very careful and has never done anything which a pregnant woman cannot do.

Why is this?

Heartache, accompanied by a twisting pain in her abdomen, kept wracking her, making it even more impossible for her to breathe.

Even though she had seen a lot of things, at this moment, she was as flustered as a three-year-old child.

Inside her belly were two lives.

Two babies belonging to her and Noah.

These two are still there, in their own bellies, with whom they have been living for six and a half whole months.

She had long been attached to them, and had developed a strong affection for them.

She can't live without them.

Chapter 1016 Blood Loss

A strong sense of anxiety caused his eyes to glow a piercing red.
Opening the door and crossing the snow and wind, he carried Jocelyn into his black Bugatti Veyron.
To avoid Jocelyn falling over, he used the seat belt and strapped Jocelyn on top of the seat.
Immediately afterwards, he went straight to the car from the other side.
Without bothering to fasten his own seat belt, Noah drove out of the house with a direct kick of the accelerator frantically.
Soon, the accelerator was pressed to the floor by the man.
On the flat tarmac road, the black Bugatti Veyron, like an eagle soaring over the grasslands is dominant.
Noah said while focusing his eyes ahead and looking at Jocelyn, "Jocelyn, hold on, we'll be at the hospital soon."

But Jocelyn still didn't respond at all.

On the passenger side, the pale woman's breathing grew fainter and fainter.

Like the wavering, little white flower on the edge of a cliff.

It seems as if a high wind will send her right off the cliff and into pieces.

Such an image cut Noah's heart when he looked at it.

In his life, he had rarely been afraid.

Because everything is under his control.

Besides, he had nothing to lose.

But at this moment, he was really scared.

He was afraid that something might happen to Jocelyn.

Fearing that Jocelyn will leave her forever.

Jocelyn is the heart of Noah.

If his heart stopped beating, then he would die too.

Without saying a word, Noah nodded.

Noah then looked at Marcus next to him and said, "Contact my previous blood cow, and have him come to the hospital, just in case. He has the same blood type as me and Jocelyn. "

After saying this, Noah did not wait for Marcus's response, he followed into the emergency room.

After some, rigorous disinfection work, he changed into an isolation suit and was taken to the place where Jocelyn was given first aid.

And Jocelyn's bedside was, by now, arranged an empty bed.

Without waiting for them to say anything, he laid right back down.

Turning his face sideways, he saw that Jocelyn was, at this moment, still unconscious.

The delicate face was as pale as paper.

The lips are even flushed with a faint gesture of colour.

At this moment, he was even more disturbed.

Off to the side, the nurses were ready to draw his blood.

To save time, the blood from his side, when drawn out, went straight into Jocelyn's veins.

The dean, who was primarily responsible for emergency care, looked at the nurse and said, "Be careful, in Mr. Mason's case, not to overdo the blood transfusion."

Noah frowned deeply and ordered coldly, "Don't bother me. Draw as much as you need, I just want Jocelyn to live."

The moment these words were uttered, all those present were deeply moved.

Those nurses, inwardly, deepened their envy of Jocelyn.

What more could a woman want from a husband like this?

Next, the first aid continues.

Noah clutched Jocelyn's hand next to him and asked, "How is the situation?"

With a serious face, the dean continued his work while responding, "We don't know yet."

After the blood transfusion was completed, Noah was taken out of the emergency room by the nurse.

Noah put his gaze on her face and asked, "What?"

The moment the man's eyes looked at her, the nurse just felt like she was going to suffocate.

She drew a cold breath and said carefully, "You'll be able to see the two children in about half an hour."

"Got it." Noah responded coldly before placing his gaze on Jocelyn once again.

He was concerned about the children.

But even more so, he was concerned about Jocelyn.

At this moment, Jocelyn is not awake, his heart and mind are full of her alone.

There is no time for anything else.

The nurse did not say another word, but left the ward quietly and closed the door behind her.

The world went silent as the ward door closed.

Noah slowly held Jocelyn's left hand, and placed it repeatedly on his lips, kissing it over and over again.

Looking at Jocelyn's pale face, Noah's heart still hurt.

He vowed that in his life, he would never again put Jocelyn through such pain.

Whether or not, this time, those two children would succeed in surviving, he would not let Jocelyn repeat the path he had taken before.

He can live without the whole world, but only without Jocelyn.

It was at this time that the anesthetic strength on Jocelyn's body gradually faded away.

She opened her eyes.

The moment she opened her eyes, Noah's gaze, full of guilt and heartache, came into view.

That look as if it could melt her in an instant.

"By the way, how much do our children weigh?" Jocelyn asked.
She wanted to know more about her two children.

Noah responded truthfully, "The male baby, at the moment, is only 600 grams, while the female baby is only 598 grams."

Hearing these words, Jocelyn's heart, at once, throbbed hard.

One is 600g, while the other is only 598g.

They are so small.

When they should have been inside their mothers, drawing nourishment and growing strong, they came into the world early, instead.

Two children that light, at this moment, should only be bit, right?

When she thought about it, her mind could not help but associate it with those she had seen the ultra-premature babies.

The children, all of them tiny, with tender, red skin all over their bodies.

To keep them alive, they have to live in an incubator that mimics the mother's word womb, with tubes all over their bodies, to keep them alive.

It's a scene that, when Jocelyn thinks about it, makes her heart ache.

All this time, she could not understand why, exactly, the two children had come early.

Obviously, she was really careful.

When she took her pulse in the shower, everything was still normal.

What did she do wrong?

Or, did someone do something to themselves?

"Did the doctor say why the children are born early?" Jocelyn asked.

Noah frowned slightly, "The dean who was responsible for resuscitating you, I asked him before he left, he said it was probably because of outside stimuli."

"He said that in your blood, nothing, bad for the fetus was checked, so the inference is that it should be some outward act of yours that irritated the children." Noah added.

Chapter 1020 Heart Torn Apart

They are housed in round, transparent incubators covered with small quilts and filled with all sorts of small tubes.

From a distance, the two of them seemed to be asleep at the moment, unmoving.

Because of the distance, Noah could not see either of their faces at all.

But even so, he still felt his heart, torn hard by these two children.

He would have loved, if he could, for the two children to have survived.

Growing up under the care of him and Jocelyn.

Just then, the transparent door opened slowly.

A nurse dressed in a sterile isolation suit, holding the isolation suit in her hand, walked up to Noah and said, "Mr. Mason, come in and change into the isolation suit, put on the mask, then sterilize it and you can go in to see the children."

Noah nodded slightly before entering the door.

After changing into an isolation suit and putting on a mask, the nurse then disinfected him in all directions.

It took a long time to sterilise him before he was allowed to go near the two children.

In the incubator for those two children was a warm toned light.

The true appearance of the two children in the dim light was etched into his mind.

Two small children, probably only a dozen centimetres long, look skinny.

The skin of the body wrinkled and faintly red.

They were asleep at the moment, all with their eyes closed.

The tiny figures, with their various tubes, glow in the light with a cold dazzling light.

The moment he looked at those tubes, Noah's heart, at once, throbbed hard.

He couldn't help but put his hand on the casing of the incubator, gently caressing the two children's bodies across the air.

His children were so lovely and pathetic.

He really wanted to hold them in his arms and give them all the care in the world, the most attentive care.
