Chapter 1071 Being Sold

Zoe was covered in bruises, her eyes full of fear.

Her body is shivering.

Her mouth, duct-taped shut, could not speak.

Her eyes are constantly in tears.

All this time, through the conversations of these men who were guarding her, she could vaguely hear what they wanted to do to her.

She knows that she will soon be sent to a remote mountain area and sold to a mountain bachelor.

Perhaps even, in this life, she will never be able to return to Flento City or to Robert's side.

She really wanted to run, but there was nothing she could do.

At this moment, how she wished she had a pair of wings and could fly away from this horrible hellhole.

It's really not a human life here.

She was beaten almost every hour.

The reason was that Robert's mother looked at her with displeasure because she had seduced her son.

She wanted her to be taught a lesson.

She really hated the woman she hadn't met.

She wondered why that person had to be so malicious towards her.

She had clearly agreed to leave and had shown her attitude and determination.

However, they still refuse to leave her alone and must drive her to extinction.

She really missed Robert every moment of every day.

She thought that Robert should be thinking of her in the same way, perhaps even in a worse mood than she was.

Just thinking about it made her feel like she was going crazy.

She tried desperately to speak, to plead for help, but to no avail.

If she didn't escape immediately, she could foresee her life and Robert's as well.

It was at this moment that two men in black walked up to her.

One of them roughly untied her.

She hadn't eaten since she got here and she had no energy left in her body.

Chapter 1072 Trying to escape

The four men looked mentally unhinged and lax, looking at her with lustful possessiveness inside their eyes.

Soon they all burst out laughing.

The voice was harsh and eerie.

It made Zoe feel bad.

Soon the man in his eighties came up to her.

The next second the man removed a crumpled wad of money from his pocket and shoved it into the arms of a man in black.

Zoe saw that it was about three thousand.

It turned out that she was only worth three thousand in the eyes of Robert's parents.

The man in black didn't say anything, he just silently took the money away.

They then left Zoe on the ground and turned to leave.

Intense fear spread throughout her body.

Zoe was tempted to scream.

But her mouth was firmly gagged and there was no way out.

Her body, too, was bound tightly with straw rope and she was not allowed to move at all.

There was no second way out for her now, except to wait here to die.

She was really scared.

She felt that in but a moment, she had been pushed from a great height to the ground in one fell, falling to pieces.

The whole world around it is like a dark bottomless pit.

It makes her wonder when the end will come and when the light will be seen.

Looking at the way the father and sons looked at her, Zoe knew even better where she was going to end up.

A bunch of people in the same family share one woman.

There are countless families who buy wives in such mountainous areas.

No!

She doesn't want that.

It was at this time that the four men walked up to her.

Several of them looked at her from above, with the desire for a woman in their eyes.

Chapter 1073 Where Is His Zoe

She didn't like him drinking much when Zoe was around before, but he just loved it.
He had pretty much given up drinking for the sake of Zoe.
He really rarely touches it if it's not, for example, a gathering between friends where alcohol is necessary.
But lately, he's been drinking every day
Without the numbing effects of alcohol, he felt he would probably have died of heartache.
Because of this, he seems to have developed a serious addiction to alcohol.
Whenever he doesn't drink, he gets panicky and short of breath.
Opening the bottle of wine again, he once again began to drink.
Once upon a time, wine was drunk for enjoyment.
But now it's just about venting.
He doesn't care the smell of red wine or the age, .
It's good to get him drunk anyway.
After drinking another bottle, Robert once again repeated his original action and viciously smashed the red wine bottle on the ground.
The ground was once again a mess.
But Robert, however, was still not drunk.
His mind, still awake as hell, was awake enough to play, every moment, the story of his former relationship with Zoe.
Every moment, thinking Zoe now is suffering, his spirit once again broke down completely.
He leaned back helplessly on the sofa and looked at the ornate ceiling with a helpless, bitter smile.
He burst into tears, tears almost blurring his vision.
If he hadn't been in the hands of his parents and couldn't have acted rashly himself, he thought he would have, even if they had been his own mum and dad, gone and killed them.

It's really too much.

Chapter 1074 Escape

In a small cottage in a dilapidated mountain village, Zoe is tied up and imprisoned on a cold earthen bed.

She was alone in the corner, shivering.

In the room, it is dark, four men were sleeping beside each other.

At this point the three men were snoring frantically, one after the other, making it more and more annoying.

They rarely bathed, and the whole space was thick with the smell of men's bodies and the stench of their feet, which was disgusting.

The cold wind, streaming in from inside the broken window, made her shiver with cold.

She had nothing on her at the moment but her own clothes.

She had been here for a month and had not changed her clothes or even left the dirt floor except to go to the bathroom.

Several of them watched over her day and night.

At night, the three of them slept and one watched her.

Even during the day, there was always someone who watched over the house.

They even gave her only half a bowl of rice and no vegetables for two days just in case she had the strength to escape.

Water is given only half a glass of water for two days.

Now she is weak and unable to move at all with someone watching her every day.

She wanted to leave, but every moment she was tied up and watched, she had no way out.

This darkness almost broke her spirit.

But even so, she still knew that she could not sit back and wait for death.

She must not, like the women here, resign herself to a lifetime of captivity as a tool of the men.

She is leaving.

To return to Flento City.

To find Robert.

Inside the cracks in the grass, she could clearly see, many, many lights, bobbing about.
Zoe's heart raised to her throat.
This may be her last chance.
If she is taken back this time, they will inevitably keep a stricter eye on her.
That family was not quite mentally fit.
That husband of hers, in particular, goes crazy on a regular basis.
A family like that could do anything.
She was really going to be scared.

It was the first time in her life that something like this had happened to her, the first time she had been reduced to such a situation.

To avoid shaking herself madly, she bit down hard on her lip.

Tears fell indefinitely.

Fear, anxiety, all sorts of emotions intertwined like a beast with its bloody mouth open, almost completely consuming her.

She must not be found out.

Closing her eyes, she began to pray constantly in her mind -

"God, please overshadow me, don't let me be found out, don't."

She does not want to go back and be raped by that heartless madman.

She needs to get out of here!

She doesn't want to let her life, just like that, be ruined.

She could not resign herself to her fate.

At this moment, the hatred in her heart for the two elders of the Moore family rose almost to the extreme.

She really hated them.

"Where the hell did this bitch go? Let's split up and search for her."

It was the eighty-year-old man who spoke.

Also, the same man who had raped her.

The thought of it made her even more disgusted.

"Okay, everyone split up to find her, I just don't believe it, with the dark lights, that bitch can get out that fast for sure."

Another person spoke up.

Chapter 1076 Hiding in a Cave

Gritting her teeth hard, Zoe sees a mountain path.

It is not far away.

This means that she will soon be running out of the village.

By running out of here, she would escape, at risk of being surrounded by villagers.

She continued on her way, unconcerned.

Terrified, her eyes kept flowing with tears.

Tears blurred her vision, but she kept running, not daring to stop at all.

Desperate situations always inspire endless potential.

Zoe ran like mad.

And the men behind were chasing like mad.

Although Zoe ran fast, in the end, she was not as fast as the men.

Ten minutes later, the distance between them had only about fifty metres remained.

And by this time, Zoe had run up the hill.

The mountain roads are well connected.

She had no idea where she was supposed to run.

She could only take a random right turn by luck, while continuing all the way.

And the men were still in hot pursuit.

She had no shoes on her feet.

She doesn't know when, but her feet has been bloodied and bruised by stones, and various tiles.

A pair of feet that look as hideous and gruesome as if they had just walked over coals.

It hurt, but she couldn't care less and had to keep going.

Turning back again, she saw the men only about twenty metres away from her.

She had to speed up again.

Otherwise, she's toast!

She must, to get her physical strength, win over those people!

She instantly bit her lip hard and picked up speed again.

Her stamina, in itself, is very bad.

Plus it's been a while and not supplemented.

By now, she was beginning to feel weak all over.

Chapter 1077 Wedding

Looking back on her own experience of escaping from the village to this place, even now, Zoe still feels scared.

She really dreaded to think what it would have been like if she had, at that moment, not hidden in the hay and been caught straight back.

She dreaded to think what would have happened if she had not decided to go up the mountain.

Has she been taken back long ago?

It was all God's blessing, she thought.

After eating the pile of grass she had pulled from outside, it was dark outside.

She is still waiting.

After waiting a long, long time, she walked out of the cave from where she was.

Tonight is different from last night.

It was cloudy last night.

Tonight, the moon is clear and the stars are sparse.

By the light of the moon, she could probably see that the world.

Truly God, she thought, was helping her.

She is halfway up the hill.

Standing here, she can take in the world below in broad strokes.

Finding no one in sight, she descended the hill carefully, barefoot, and walked along the path.

Looking over the hill just now, she could not see which way led out.

But that doesn't matter.

She believed that if she kept following a path, she would find the main road.

By the time she found the main road, she would be able to meet the car.

She had just refreshed herself, and although it was cold, she was full of energy.

Robert, wait for me.

Since, the two elders of the Moore family refused to let her go.

Then she won't leave, just go back.

This time, she had completely seen that, in all the world, only beside Robert was the safest person to be with.

Only Robert can protect her.

She should not care so much.

Chapter 1078 What to compare with others?

It was late at night and the night was extraordinarily cold.

All she had on was the thin, tattered cotton jacket and trousers that the group of father and sons had given her to change into.

The cold wind has long since blown through.

She shivered in the cold.

She was still holding on, not daring to stop for a moment.

Because she knew that she wasn't really safe as long as she didn't actually leave the place.

Her Robert is waiting for her.

She must hurry back.

She really regretted now that she had listened to the threats of the two Moore family elders.

If she hadn't listened then, she would have had a different outcome.

Biting her lip hard, Zoe continued on, not daring to stop.

It was a long walk until dawn, when Zoe just couldn't walk any more.

This time, she saw the road.

It was a tarmac road, except that on the road, there were no cars at all.

In the distance, there is a road sign.

It says, directions to M City.

This is a hundred kilometres from it.

This place, which she knew, was a poor city far away from Flento City.

So, she had been sold to the mountain village below this city.

At this point, she was hungry and tired.

Grab a handful of dried grass at a random roadside and hold it in her hand.

She eats as she walks.

Trying to maintain their stamina.

She knew that she was not, as yet, absolutely safe to sit down and rest.

The intense exhaustion made her eyes giddy and her feet heavy as if they had been filled with lead.

The policeman's eyes were full of consternation, "What's the matter? Are you afraid I'll dirty your place? Why are you suddenly not going in?"

He had been excited to go in and have a look around.

It's a long way to go.

Being in a small place like that, he had really never seen such a nice place.

Zoe shook her head, "No, I don't want to go in, can I beg you to take me to the Minha neighborhood?"

The policeman was still full of consternation, "Why don't you want to go in?"

Wouldn't a normal person, after something like this, be expected to go home immediately?

Why did she pass through the house without entering?

And even cry?

Zoe, however, wiped her tears, forcing her heart to ache, and said, "There are reasons, please."

The policeman nodded slightly, before taking a fond look at the Dream Garden and leaving with a direct kick of the accelerator.

As she drove down the road, Zoe saw a black Bentley Coupe driving towards where she was.

The number plate, which was familiar to her, was a series of 9.

That is Robert's car.

Inside sits Robert.

Thinking of this, she immediately plopped down on the car seat, afraid that Robert would see her.

Soon, the police car and the Bentley Coupe brushed past each other.

Inside the Bentley, Robert was on the phone with his men, scolding them, "It's been so long, and you still can't find Zoe, what are you doing? If you do this again, get the hell out of here!"

The moment he brushed against the police car, noting that the police car is not local, Robert inadvertently glanced at it, but his eyes did not stay much.

Soon the two cars brushed past each other.

After a while, Zoe rose and sat back down.

Through the rear view mirror, she could clearly see the black Bentley drifting away from her.

Both feet tingled with water and the swelling got worse.

Yet, she felt nothing.

At this moment in the living room, Winson was sitting on the sofa, sorting through the medicines inside the handy bag.

The bags and the medicines all look brand new.

It seems that just now, when she was taking a bath, Winson went out to buy it.

The sight of this scene warmed her heart once again.

Taking a deep breath she walked over to Winson and asked, "Did you go and buy it?"

Winson nodded, "Put your foot on my leg, I will apply medicine for you. Your foot looks like it is not lightly injured, just in time, you tell me what is wrong with you."

Zoe appeared covered in bruises, both mentally and physically, and was out of sorts.

His instincts as a police officer told him that something must have happened to Zoe.

Could it be domestic abuse?

Thinking of this, Winson immediately took it more seriously.

When she met Winson's eyes full of concern, Zoe burst into tears.

When she was in a bad mood, what she feared most was this look from the people around her.
