Chapter 481 A Chance to Make Money

She was really curious as to how Joseph really felt at that time after knowing all that.

And what exactly was the handhold that Gloria was holding that could actually make Joseph even put up with something like that.

He even continued to stay married to her.

However, although curious, she did not want to investigate.

Because whatever it was, it didn't matter.

To this day, it was time for the feud between her and Joseph and Gloria to come to an end.

The two of them had long since received the punishment they deserved.

Joseph now has nothing, and even has to tangle with a woman he hates for a long time because he was under control.

And that was bad enough.

She felt that enough was enough.

For both of them, she wasn't going to give any more looks either.

Because everything had ended for the best.

It was time for her to let it go.

The scum is no longer worthy of her eyes.

Nowadays, she has too many things to worry about.

For example, the development of her career, such as Noah's illness.

As long as the scum and the bitch stop acting like demons, everything will end here.

She turned on the music in the car.

It's only been a few hours since they separated, and she missed him.

The red Maserati, whistling all the way, attracted many people's eyes.

Soon, she arrived at the Murphy Group.

Just as she was about to enter the office, she saw Robert's phone call in.

Chapter 482 Aubrey

"Have you read this book yet?" Robert asked.

"Yeah."

"In this book, there is a character of the fairy Aubrey, you know it, right?"

Jocelyn nodded.

In the original book she was the most beautiful woman of the three sisters of the celestial human demons, captivating.

God's own daughter.

Her role was small, but impressive.

In the original book, it is written that when she smiles, all beings in the three worlds fade away.

In the book, her scenes are few and far between, only a few chapters.

Aubrey had once, three hundred years ago, secretly descended to earth and fell in love with a mortal man, falling in love with him so passionately that she broke the rules of heaven.

God was furious and ordered the mortal man to be beheaded and took her back to the heavenly realm, where he drew a prison for her in her bedchamber and punished her for three hundred years not to leave.

So she could only pass the time of solitude by making pills and healing her love wounds.

During the three hundred years, she kept thinking of her lover.

In the book, the heroine, in the process of slaying demons with the hero, accidentally falls for Eroding Powder.

This poison can only be cured by Aubrey in the three realms of heaven, man and devil, so the hero sneaked into the heaven and reached her bedchamber to beg her for the medicine.

And unexpectedly, the hero was exactly the same as the man she had loved three hundred years ago.

She then deduced the past life and present life of the hero and found that he was the man's past life.

However, because of the lesson she learned three hundred years ago, she did not dare to identify with the hero, let alone awaken his memory.

So, the antidote was given to the hero and he was simply let go.

Chapter 483 The Masked Man

Only a young man with a pale face was lying on the ground not far away.

Beside the man, there was a beautiful, youthful girl kneeling with a double ponytail.

At this moment, the girl was pushing the man with an anxious look on her face, her face was streaked with tears.

Seeing this scene, Jocelyn stepped forward, half kneeling on the ground and taking the man's pulse.

Looking closer, the man's face was pale with a few hints of blue.

His lips were white and bloodless, the dark circles under his eyes were heavy, and his body was slender and slim.

But even with his poor complexion, he could not hide his handsomeness.

From his pulse and the colour of his face, Jocelyn was certain that he had been poisoned.

Moreover, it seemed that he had been poisoned by a high concentration of sodium cyanide.

Sodium cyanide was extremely toxic.

There was only a few minutes, to ten minutes, of optimal resuscitation time after poisoning.

Once missed the chance, death is possible.

There are only two ways to detoxify cyanide poisoning.

One is a herbal antidote, but, at the moment, it is impossible to find one, and even if one is found, it will be too late.

Another way is to administer an antidote such as sodium thiosulphate intravenously, combined with the vasodilator isoamyl nitrite.

And these, too, were not available here, so he had to go to the hospital.

It occurred to her that on her way here, she had seen a hospital.

That hospital was just a hundred meters from here.

"Miss, how is he?" The girl asked as she cried, her eyes filled with panic.

"He is poisoned with sodium cyanide, he must be taken to the hospital to be detoxified, there can't be a minute's delay." After saying that, Jocelyn waved her hand towards the bodyguard beside her, "Hurry up and carry the person to our car."

The bodyguards then quickly lifted the man up and took him out.

After Jocelyn returned to the jewellery show, she bought a lot of her favorite jewellery.

After shopping for a while, she saw that it was getting late outside, so she took her bodyguard, and left the exhibition centre and got into her car.

Sitting in the back seat of the fluffy car, Jocelyn unhurriedly took out the small mirror for make-up from her bag and checked her make-up.

After making sure her make-up was fine, she dialed Noah with joy.

The call was answered in almost seconds.

On the other side of the phone, Noah was in a large conference room, holding a meeting with a group of senior executives from the K City branch who were sitting upright.

The moment he picked up the phone, his originally serious face instantly melted away, "Honey, what's up?"

"Can't I call you if there's nothing wrong?" Jocelyn asked.

Noah stood up in full view of everyone, pulled open the conference room door, leaned against the wall, and responded in a soft voice, "Of course you can."

"What are you doing?" Jocelyn asked with a smirk.

Hearing his voice made her miss him even more.

Although it had only been a few short days apart.

But it was as long as if centuries had passed.

The same was true for Noah.

"Me? I'm in a meeting at my company here in K City."

Chapter 485 Relief from the pain of longing

Jocelyn heard it all clearly.

The sound that filled her ears made her feel harsh.

However, she was still waiting quietly.

She could understand the reaction of these people.

It must be that, here, there were often people posing as the president's wife, trying to barge in and hit on the president.

They had seen too many of them, and that was why they were like that.

Jocelyn inadvertently raised her head, and the few bodyguards who were blocking her then neatly fiercely glared at her.

She raised her eyebrows lightly and continued to look down, playing with her phone.

About two minutes later -

Noah, accompanied by Tom, walked out of the exclusive lift.

As soon as he stepped out of the lift, Noah walked straight to the door.

Noah was wearing a straight white shirt with black trousers.

Without a tie, the front two buttons of his shirt collar were naturally open.

The cuffs were rolled up to the elbows, giving him a reserved and clean look.

The perfect proportions of his body were unmistakable, and all his legs were below his neck.

The moment she saw Noah, Jocelyn's face burst into a bright smile, and at this moment, all the pain of longing was relieved.

As soon as Noah appeared, the air around him chilled down.

The powerful aura caused the employees watching the scene to all subconsciously shiver their bodies.

At this point, everyone was all dumbfounded.

Could it be that this woman's call just now was really to Noah?

"Good day, President!" The few employees who were watching, nodded their heads respectfully and shouted in unison.

The security guards heard the voice, then turned their heads to look at Noah, and subconsciously made a way for Noah, and then respectfully and neatly shouted, "Good day, President!"

The people at the scene all looked dumbfounded.

One by one, they did not dare to say a word, but only looked at the person beside them for a while, and then at Jocelyn.

Under everyone's gaze, Jocelyn also felt embarrassed.

She nodded slightly towards the crowd, and then smiled politely and greeted, "Hello everyone, I am Jocelyn, Noah's wife, sorry for disturbing your meeting, you guys continue, don't mind me."

The decent speech, the gentle tone, and the stunning face instantly pulled countless good feelings for her.

The executives instantly liked this gentle and generous beautiful woman, and smiled towards Jocelyn.

"Tom, go buy dinner for everyone, later we will eat while meeting. Order another cup of milk tea for everyone." Noah said as he looked at Tom who was at the side.

Tom nodded respectfully.

"What do you want to eat?" Noah asked.

"Anything Will do", she couldn't think of what she wanted to eat.

"Go ahead and order the steak. Hers to be medium rare, then a cup of milk tea each." Noah looked at Tom and seriously ordered.

"Yes!" Tom responded respectfully, followed by leading a large group of bodyguards and leaving the conference room.

At this moment, the people in the conference room were even more confused.

It was common knowledge that the president especially hated other things when people were in a meeting, especially if they were eating, that was even more not allowed.

This was all simply too perverse.

And it was clear to everyone that the source of the perversity was this president's wife.

Their president was really different to his wife.

He had actually broken all his conventions for his wife.

"Alright, the meeting continues." Noah coldly looked at the crowd and said.

"After eating, it didn't take long to fall asleep."

"Oh." After saying that, Jocelyn then naturally wrapped Noah's neck, and then looked at the bodyguard behind her with embarrassment and said, "Put me down, I can walk by myself."

"Later." Noah had absolutely no intention of putting her down, his gaze was always on her face, and there was endless tenderness in his eyes.

Jocelyn didn't say another word, allowing him to hold herself, enjoying herself to the fullest his warm embrace.

"Want to eat anything else?" Noah asked.

"Do you want to make me fat as a pig? I just finished dinner and you want me to eat again." Jocelyn whined softly.

Noah hooked his lips, "I am afraid you'll be hungry."

Jocelyn, "I'm not a pig, how can I get hungry so easily?"

Noah, "Oh, okay, shall we go home?"

Jocelyn instantly nodded, "Sure."

Then, she naturally rested her head on his chest.

His warm body heat, through the thin clothing, stained her face.

From such a distance, she could clearly hear his strong heartbeat.

Noah didn't say anything, he just quickened his pace.

The fleet of black luxury cars soon drove to the city centre, Sweet Dreams high-end neighborhood, under building 8.

After the car was parked, Jocelyn once again looked around.

This building, with a very open view around it and huge gardens in front and behind, looked very nice.

In the early summer season, the various flowers in the small garden were all open.

Hearing these words, Jocelyn was instantly dumbfounded.

Her brain went blank.

She couldn't believe her ears at all.

Two days ago, Gloria was still screaming that she would deal with her in the future, how could this be dead?

And Sara actually also died all of a sudden together?

"How did they die?" Jocelyn asked.

Noah could vaguely hear the conversation as well.

His face, instantly, went serious.

He didn't say anything, he just sat up and came over to Jocelyn's side, listening carefully to Allen's words.

"Gloria committed suicide, Sara had a sudden cerebral hemorrhage. They died yesterday." Allen said again.

This sudden news still made Jocelyn a bit unbelievable.

She really didn't expect that the two of them, in the end, would actually end up like this.

That day, when she saw Gloria, she hadn't even slightly tried to kill herself.

She had even gritted her teeth and said that when she got out, she would get back at Jocelyn.

However, she didn't have any extra emotions inside her other than shock.

Right now, she was most worried about her own father, "Dad, are you alright?"

"I thought I hated them to the extent that I wouldn't care if they even died, but it turns out not. They suddenly died, it was hard on my heart. "Allen did not hide his feelings.

"Dad, I will go back to you now."

Chapter 489 Strange Characters

The Stewart family looked very sad, only that tears could not be seen in their eyes.
Jocelyn knew very well in her heart that the family's grief was nothing more than an act.
In the Stewart family, there was not a single person who would really be sad for Gloria.
But even so, she still did not feel sympathy for Gloria.
Everyone had to take responsibility for what they had done, and once she had been unkind to people when she was alive, she would not receive kindness from others after her death.
Allen didn't say a word, just listened quietly to the Stewart family's words, his eyes vacant as he looked at the posthumous photos of the two.

It was a difficult moment for him.

Although he hated both of them, he was still in pain at this moment, looking at their coffins and their posthumous photos.

Looking at her father in such a state, Jocelyn's heart was also hard to the extreme.

Jocelyn hugged Allen tightly and carefully comforted him, "Dad, don't be so sad."

Allen nodded, but still did not speak.

The Stewart family let out a long sigh of feigned sadness, and then together, they retreated to the side and stood there quietly in silence.

After they left, Noah also silently squatted down and patted Allen's shoulder, comforting him, "Dad, don't be too sad."

Allen nodded once again.

After a long time, Allen looked at Jocelyn and Noah's faces and said, "Jocelyn, you're all I have left now, you must live well. Noah, please protect my Jocelyn well."

Jocelyn and Noah said in unison, "Okay."

"Dad, don't be sad, it's hard for me to watch you like this." Jocelyn added.

Allen let out a long sigh, wiped his tears and said, "How can I not be sad? Jocelyn, you and Noah go and help me entertain the guests, I'll sit here alone for a while."

Jocelyn nodded, and then, together with Noah, went to the side to greet the guests who came and went.

Jocelyn walked to the injured maid, half-kneeling on the ground, and took the lead in examining her right wrist.

The maid had a very thin silver needle stuck in her wrist, the needle was only half in, the other half was still outside.

Her skin was already starting to turn black where the needle had been stuck.

It was obvious that the silver needle was poisonous.

When the other servants saw this, they also gathered around, everyone was stunned.

Jocelyn looked again at the box she was talking about.

It was a large Victorian style carved square chest with a combination lock on it.

Obviously, there was a mechanism on the chest.

And this servant had accidentally moved the mechanism, and that was why she had been stabbed with a silver needle.

In the next second, the maid who was stabbed by the needle fell straight to the ground, bleeding from her seven orifices and completely unconscious.

Seeing this, Jocelyn's heart was lift straight to her throat.

She put her hand on the tip of the maid's nose.

But she found that she was already dead.

"Ah!!! She is dead!"

"Ah!!! Someone, someone ! ! ! ! "

The maids, who were gathered around, began to shout frantically.

Jocelyn, on the other hand, did not say anything, and with a serious face, she put her finger to the tip of the maid's nose, and felt it.

At this moment, the maid had completely lost her breath.

afterwards, she took the maid's pulse again.

There was no pulse at all.

This meant that the person was dead.

In the next second, the place where the maid had been stuck by the needle began to turn black rapidly.
