Chapter 891 Josephine

Immediately after, Romeo sat down.

All the farce, all at once, is over.

The people watching around couldn't help but give the woman a blank stare.

"Really think her man is invincible?"

"What is he in front of the McCall family?"

"This time, she has offended Abel's people, then she has offended Abel, and when it gets big, the one behind her will definitely kick her out."

"Yeah, she is just a mistress, When it really comes to that point, naturally she can't avoid being kicked."

The people around started whispering.

In a moment, the woman felt even more humiliated.

Especially when she hears people say that if she makes a big fuss, her man might kick her, the woman is all of a sudden more flustered.

If it really goes badly, it will be the end of herself.

She immediately walked to Paige, ignoring everyone's gaze, and directly knelt down on both knees, "I'm sorry, I was wrong."

"Please forgive me." the woman said again.

At this moment, the arrogance that had been in her body was all but gone.

In its place, endless humility and pity follow.

The huge contrast made the crowd mutter in their hearts.

Paige, on the other hand, is as bland as ever.

Over the years, in the entertainment industry, she has been through everything.

Such drama was all too familiar to her.

This woman apologizes for what exactly she knows by heart.

However, since Romeo had taught her a lesson, there was no need to drive her to extinction.

Chapter 892 The Pheasant and the Phoenix

The cloudy sky suddenly flashed with a blinding golden light.
Immediately afterwards, thunder rumbled.
It's as if the whole world is about to be torn apart.
After the thunderstorm ended, a Lena fox, above the red cloudy sky, flew into the dark clouds.
And then it disappears.
The whole thing was so fleeting that it was too late to even take a picture.
Fast as if some were just a dream.
Looking at this image, Paige felt more and more shocked and could not even believe her eyes.
Subconsciously, her eyes widened and she strained to see the sky where the Lena Fox had originally appeared.
At this point, the sky, once again, returned to its original form.
The thunder disappeared, leaving only the original howling north wind and the snow.
What's the situation?
Was it all just a hallucination?
Or is this some kind of paranormal event?
The fox is flying?
Thinking about it, Paige found it unlikely.
In the end, she just shook her head helplessly.
She thinks she should have been blinded.
Probably during the day, reading metaphysical scripts and reading too much of them to the point of hallucinations.
After taking a deep breath and exhaling it slowly, Paige then went straight to her luxury car.
Just as she got into the car, Abel's precious blue supercar drove by.

And the moment Abel saw Paige, the original look of displeasure disappeared in an instant.

In the next second, he came up to Paige with a gentle face and looked at Paige with a nervous face and explained, "Honey, don't misunderstand, I am innocent, I parked a car, but this person got into the car by herself."

When he explained, Abel was as sincere and fearful as a child who had done something wrong and was afraid that his parents would be angry.

Looking at him like that, Paige felt very funny.

"Really, I swear, ask this woman if you don't believe me," Abel added.

Paige shook her head helplessly and couldn't help but laugh lightly, "Well. guessed it."

She knew exactly what Abel was like now.

So, without the slightest doubt.

"Really? You didn't misunderstand?" Abel continued cautiously, his eyes full of excitement.

"No."

"Good."

"What are you doing here? Didn't you say you didn't have time to come over?" Paige asked.

"Just finished an errand and thought you were here, so I'd come and pick you up and take you home."

"Alright then, I'm done here, let's go home."

With these words, Paige took the initiative to take Abel's hand and prepared to leave.

After just a few steps, Paige felt that the laces of his black Martin boots were open under her feet.

She then paused and glanced down at.

Seeing this, she then naturally looked at Abel and pointed to where her shoelaces were, "It opened."

Abel immediately knelt down on one knee and tied her shoelaces for her.

The woman, at this point, was still in place.

Throughout the whole process, Paige was like a pampered princess.

And Abel is the prince with eyes full of only princesses.

When he got into the car, Abel naturally fastened the seat belt for Paige.

Another U-shaped pillow was found and placed around Paige's neck.

Only after serving Paige comfortably did he start the car in full view of everyone and leave directly.

Turn on the heating and inside the car, it's as warm as summer.

The whole process inside the car was clearly visible to the crowd outside.

The crowd was, at this point, nothing but amazed.

"I knew Abel favored Paige, but I didn't know it was like this."

"If anyone had told me that Abel could be like this, I would not have believed them and would have told them that if Abel could be like this, I would have cut off my head and given him a bench to sit on, and now I doubt my fucking life."

Those friends of Abel's exchanged in situ.

And the two women, unable to resist, silently opened their mouths.

"I really didn't expect that he, Mr. McCall, would have a day like this."

"Yeah, I really want to interview Paige, what kind of ecstasy did she put in Mr. McCall's head. You know what? I just struck up a conversation with Mr. McCall and Mr. McCall rejected me outright, now it's really a loyal and good man."

"We used to date briefly but he didn't take me seriously at all, I always thought that the man was like that with everyone until I saw this scene today."

The two women got more jealousy in their eyes.

As women, they really envied Paige and were really jealous of her.

On the tarmac road, Abel's limited-edition sports car was moving steadily.

The roads were slippery in the snowy weather and Abel's car drove very slowly.

The roads were thick with snow and the sanitation workers were busy using various machines to clear the snow.

The whole city, as a whole, is busy.

She touched a warm and furry mass.

And that thing was still breathing.

The soft body has been rising and falling.

In her ears, she could even hear the sound of the thing breathing.

In a moment, Jocelyn felt creepy.

She then jerked her hand back, before springing up and sitting up, looking to her side.

However, the image that came to her eyes was completely unexpected.

There's nothing in front of her.

There are only snowy white sheets.

Looking around for a second, she saw even less.

What's the situation?

Could it be that just now, she was hallucinating in her sleepy daze?

But it's not right.

It just felt so real, obviously.

The warmth in the palm of her hand, and the feeling of fuzziness, is not fake.

To this day, she can still remember it all.

She got out of bed at once and searched the entire room.

Even behind the curtains, she searched for a clear view.

And yet there is nothing.

She frowned deeply and, with a heart full of doubt, returned to the bed barefoot.

The next second, she moved in her mind to see through the sheets.

Soon, she opened her perspective eyes.

She wanted to see through the sheets and see what had happened on this sheet.

Also, last time, when the maid of the house was scratched by the Lena fox, the maid had said that Lena fox smelled a strange smell when it attacked.

Combined with all that, she felt that the Lena fox, now, was inside her room.

And just now, in that moment of getting up, the thing that was touched in the palm of her hand, that was it.

Everything, really, is not an illusion.

In an instant, she felt even more creeped out.

The hand that was holding the phone subconsciously clenched it.

Immediately afterwards, she felt a brown shadow fly past her eyes.

The shadow appeared and disappeared in a fraction of a second.

She couldn't really see anything.

However, the moment the figure flashed before her eyes, the strange smell at the tip of her nose became even clearer.

Her heart, once again, raced.

Her face, which had been white and red, had turned white.

She stood up again, squeezed her phone tightly and said to Noah, "Honey. I just experienced something strange. I think I saw that thing."

"That thing, before my eyes, flashed. I saw a white shadow and smelled a strong, strange smell. Do you remember what the maid in my house said when she was scratched by the Lena fox? She said she smelled something strange."

"If this isn't the thing finding its way to the door, what is it?" Jocelyn said as she looked around.

The intense fear that wrapped her up so tightly made her feel breathless.

As soon as the words left her mouth, she once again felt a man standing at her back.

She then took a quick, deep breath again before looking behind her.

Immediately afterwards, another brown shadow whizzing past.

"I saw it again."

"Come down from the bedroom and go to the courtyard, get the bodyguard, and I will go back immediately." Noah said.

Jocelyn walked to the bedroom door before attempting to reach for it.

---

The next second, the snow stops.

Strange smell that disappears.

And the thin layer of fox fur that covered the ground followed and disappeared.

All of it, in an instant, disappeared.

It was like a dream.

The dream wakes up and it's all over.

On her, the creepy feeling, and the feeling that there was always someone behind her, soon disappeared.

The door to the room opens automatically.

At this moment, Jocelyn breathed a long sigh of relief.

What's the situation?

Is it gone now?

Was it, today, only intending to come and scare her and not to actually do anything?

She couldn't figure it out.

It is imperceptible.

After a long sigh of relief, her heartstrings soon, once again, tensed.

Today, she saw, once again, how powerful that thing was.

And once again, she realised that she was like a bubble before that thing, fragile enough to break at the slightest touch.

Humans, after all, are not as powerful as they think they are, after all.

And it was because she saw it more thoroughly that the fear in her heart, too, became more profound.

Clutching her phone once again, Jocelyn instinctively went barefoot and jogged all the way straight to the downstairs living room.

Putting on her slippers and slipping on the white wool coat hanging in the foyer, Jocelyn pulled the door open.

The moment she pulled open the door, the cold north wind wrapped in goose feather-like snowflakes, reached her face and body.

A cold, biting sensation invaded all the limbs in an instant.

The courtyard is very lively at this time.

Chapter 898 Black Mandala Tattoo

She saw with her own eyes a black mandala tattoo appear on the back of her right hand.

That tattoo is so lifelike, it looks like a real flower.

What's the situation?

Why, all of a sudden, did tattoos appear on her hands?

Legend has it that black mandala cultivated with care can be psychic. Legend has it that the scent of the flowers has magical powers and can evoke memories of the dead in life!

As she thought of this, a faint, fresh fragrance suddenly appeared at the tip of her nose.

The smell was like nothing she had ever smelt before.

Not the car perfume or the smell of her own body.

She brought the flower to the tip of her nose.

Immediately afterwards, an even stronger scent filled her nose directly.

The smell is exactly the same as the one she just smelt.

Even if a black mandala tattoo suddenly appears on the back of the hand.

This tattoo is so lifelike that it looks like a real black mandala too.

Why, this tattoo, with the aroma on it, on the contrary?

This flower, other than being lifeless, it seems to have all.

In this instant, Jocelyn once again felt creeped out.

When the driver looked up without thinking, he saw the back of Jocelyn's hand through the car's interior mirror.

The driver froze when he saw the flower that had suddenly appeared on the back of her hand.

"I didn't notice it, Miss Murphy, did you get a tattoo? It's so pretty." the driver said.

The special aroma from the black mandala tattoo is still emanating.

Soon the aroma fills the carriage.

There was nothing she could do except wait in place and die and let God take care of her.

Countless times she called, Noah, and the phone numbers associated with Noah, but she couldn't get through.

She gave up until her phone ran out of battery.

Time wanders surprisingly slowly.

Half an hour was as long as if half a century had passed.

Half an hour later, the weather returned abruptly to normal.

The snow and wind stopped and the sunshine returned.

All the extremes, all gone.

When the world came back to light again, Jocelyn saw a world in shambles.

The road was full of various broken branches and debris.

Many cars, blown, crashed directly into the wall.

Others, moreover, were blown right out of the water and flipped over.

It was just strange that it had obviously just snowed so heavily.

But now, surprisingly, there is no snow, at all, on the road.

Many of the drivers who were stuck in traffic got out of their cars.

Looking at the world before them, a world in shambles but with melting ice, everyone grew shock.

For a while, the world was talking about everything -

"What's going on? How come there's no snow on the ground now when it's obviously snowing so hard?"

"The snow that just fell, even if it didn't stay, even the original snow disappeared? It even disappeared as if it had never snowed before? What kind of fucking paranormal event is this?"

"At home, after that Lena fox stopped tossing me around, I messaged you, explained everything to you. I'm hearing this from you, you didn't seem to get that message entry, did you?" Jocelyn asked.

Noah hugged her tightly again and said faintly, "I didn't receive anything."

Jocelyn then frowned deeply, "It must have been that Lena fox who intercepted that message from me, deliberately using some strange means so that you couldn't receive it."

"Also, the fact that you and I couldn't get through to everyone before must have been because of it. It's not doing this just to toss us around and upset us, is it?"

Jocelyn continued her analysis.

Other than that, she couldn't really think of any other reason.

Then, she put the black mandala tattoo on the back of her right hand again, showing it to Noah.

"Look what it is." said Jocelyn.

Noah frowned deeply, naturally holding her hand, and put his eyes on the tattoo.

"You got a tattoo?" Noah said, "It's very nice."

At the end of the sentence, a special scent was then poured into his nose.

He instantly quipped, "A new perfume today? What is it? It smells good."

Jocelyn, however, immediately shook her head, "I just forgot to tell you about the tattoo."

She then went on to describe the tattoo directly to Noah.

Noah raised his eyebrows slightly, and a flash of consternation passed under his eyes, "What?"

Jocelyn, "It should be that Lena fox making out."

Noah's brow knitted.

He gently stroked the black mandala on Jocelyn's hand, his eyes full of worry, "I don't know."

"It is said that the scent of the black mandala is one that evokes the memories of the dead. Do you think that it is trying to evoke any memories of you and me with this scent?" Noah analyzed with a serious face.
