Chapter 901 Buildings

In the middle of nowhere, it is snowing and the sky and earth are pale.

The mountains that come into view are very high.

All the flowers and trees on the mountain have faded and there is snow everywhere.

As far as the eye can see, the yellow colour, full of dead silence, is intertwined with the cold white, making the whole mountain look lifeless.

The mountain is probably only about 100 metres high, and is high in the hilly area of Flento City.

At the top of the hill, a white building can be seen faintly.

Because the distance was so far away, Jocelyn couldn't even see what exactly it was.

After looking around for a while, Jocelyn became more and more curious about the purpose of Noah bringing herself here.

She finally failed to hold down her curiosity and placed her gaze on Noah's face, "So, what did you bring me here?"

Is it going to be in that building on the hill?

Noah smiled shallowly before gently stroking her hair, "You'll know when you go up there."

Jocelyn nodded obediently, as meek as a noble white Persian cat.

The sunlight fell lazily on her face, reflecting her skin in an extraordinarily natural way.

Noah was the first to get out of the car, and then he opened the door for Jocelyn as a gentleman.

Immediately afterwards, those bodyguards inside the bodyguard cars behind them got out of the car and walked behind the two of them, neatly, standing in two rows.

It was a spectacular scene.

Noah tenderly extended his hand towards Jocelyn, "Come with me."

Jocelyn put her hand on the palm of Noah's hand, and then hold it naturally, following him, all the way up the mountain.

The bodyguards followed close behind.

Chapter 902 The Cycle of Cause and Effect

This is a church.

From the outside, the place looks very shabby.

The footprint of the church is not very large.

It looks twice as small as the average church.

A black plaque hangs over the door of the church.

The plaque reads - Green Cloud Church.

At this moment, at the entrance to the church, a deacon was plowing the snow.

He is a middle-aged man.

Seeing the two of them, the deacon instantly greeted them both towards them.

And Jocelyn and Noah, along with the bodyguards, were bowing the same way towards the deacon.

Soon, the deacon walked up to them.

"What brings you here?" He asked.

"I have an appointment with priest Orion," Noah said.

"Please follow me." the deacon bowed respectfully towards several of them once again.

And then they were led into the interior of the church.

And Jocelyn did not say anything, but only silently took Noah's hand and followed that deacon into the interior of the church.

It was inside, as she had seen in the TV series, those dilapidated churches, not half as different.

The place looks clear and cold, and there are not many worshippers.

Jocelyn did not continue to ask Noah anything, because the purpose of Noah bringing her here was already clear.

Obviously, he wants to find which priest Orion to help think of a way to deal with that Lena Fox.

Orion, however, shook his head helplessly, and then said faintly, "Some sins can be washed, and some sins cannot."

"You guys take care of yourselves." Orion said, and then disappeared.

He disappears like a gust of wind.

Just all of a sudden there is no trace of it.

The image in front of her shocked Jocelyn.

What's going on here?

Is he not a human being?

Why can he disappear into thin air all of a sudden?

Why it is possible to know everything about both of their past lives just by touching their hands?

She clearly had so many more questions to ask Orion.

However, Orion didn't give themselves that chance at all.

At this moment, her mind was filled with all sorts of doubts.

She wanted to know exactly what Orion had seen after she had touched their hands.

And she wanted to know if Orion is human or not.

If not man, then is it God?

So many, many questions lingered in her mind.

And aside, Noah, at this moment, still had a deep frown on his sword.

On the surface, although he could not see any shocked expression, but inside, he was full of questions about all this.

If it weren't for the fact that everything just now was so real, he would have thought that it was just an illusion of his own.

Taking a deep breath, Jocelyn looked at Noah next to her and said, "Honey, do you think Orion is a human being, or is a god?"

Noah shook his head, no extra expression on his face, "I don't know."

And there was a noticeable change under Noah's eyes.
Noah frowned deeply and placed his gaze on the face of one of the bodyguards who had spoken and asked, "Did you just come up here?"
The bodyguards then looked at each other.
The question "Is the Mr. Mason retarded?" was in everyone's eyes.
"We are just coming up. what's wrong, Mr. Mason?" A bodyguard responded respectfully.
The crowd couldn't help but mutter in their hearts.
What was the Mr. Mason thinking?
Noah and Jocelyn then gave each other a quick look.
And then both people tacitly chose not to pursue the matter further.
The answer is clear to the two.
It is what they guessed it would be.
The memories of this group of bodyguards have been cleansed.

Little did they know that they had just actually come up a long time ago.

Still less did they know that there was a church on the hill.

And they themselves went into that church.

"Let's go." Noah gave them an indifferent look before he naturally hugged Jocelyn and headed down.

Once again, the bodyguards looked at each other in disbelief.

"What's the deal? Did Mr. Mason bring us here just to climb the mountain?"

"We don't know, and we're afraid to ask."

"This church, which Tom inquired about, is said to have a deacon who deals with some psychic events and is very powerful." Noah said.

"So, this means that Green Cloud Church has been here for a long, long time."

"Why there is a church here?" The questions in Jocelyn's mind at this point were more than ever.

Orion is really unreadable.

"It's not clear, I'm afraid only he himself can explain it." Noah frowned deeply.

Jocelyn nodded gently, "Green Cloud Church, which has existed here for so long, suddenly and inexplicably disappeared. If those who originally knew about this place came here and saw that church inexplicably gone, I wonder what would happen."

Will it be in the news then?

Noah, "Since he can wash away the memories of the bodyguards, he can naturally wash away the memories of the others as well."

Jocelyn nodded.

To put it mildly.

Just at this time, Noah's mobile phone vibrated.

Seeing that it was Tom calling, Noah then held his Bluetooth headset with one hand and pressed answer.

"Where are you, Mr. Mason? I have an urgent document that needs your signature."

"I'll be right back."

"Okay."

"Tom." Noah wanted to say, but then stopped.

Inside the chairman's special assistant's large office, Tom stood in front of the floor-to-ceiling window, holding his phone, and asked, "What's wrong?"

"Do you know the Green Cloud Church?" Noah asked.

"Green Cloud Church? What kind of place is this? I don't know." Tom's eyes were full of questions.

He wondered why Mr. Mason suddenly ask him such a brainless question.

It lasted less than a second.
She then subconsciously rubbed her eyes and looked at the two crosses once more.
However, there was no more response.
Did she misread it?
She doesn't think so.
Everything just got real to the extreme.
She did not say anything, but took one of the crosses and placed it around Noah's neck.

For the other, put it on herself.

Finally, she only looked at Noah and said, "One for each of us. He gave us two, he should just want us to share."

"I'm sure he won't harm us, this must be good for us."

"It's just that, we probably won't know yet what the benefits are." Jocelyn added.

Noah, however, took his cross and held it out.

And then he put it on to Jocelyn, "All for you, if there is really any benefit, then you can have double the benefit if you take two."

It was a small gesture, but it warmed up the deepest part of Jocelyn's heart.

Her man, at all times, will always put her first.

For all good things, he was, thinking of her first.

Even now, in the midst of such a great hardship, his mind is still filled with only her safety.

"What if, for example, this is what will keep you safe at a critical time? You gave it all to me, what are you going to do? Don't you want your life?" Jocelyn asked.

"As long as my Jocelyn is alive and well." Noah hooked his lips shallowly.

With those words, he caressed Jocelyn's hair with deep affection.

Chapter 907 What are you then?

At this moment there is a group of black-clad men wearing black sunglasses gathered in the mining area.

Arguing about something with her workers, and with Hector and the others.

"Aren't you going to apologize for hurting someone? What kind of attitude do you have?" This was Hector's voice.

At this moment Hector was coldly, looking at the people in black standing in front of him, a bald, fat man in his thirties talking.

And that bald fat man, at this time, his face was full of displeasure, "I can apologize, why are you being arrogant here? With this attitude, I won't apologize."

"If you don't apologise, today, you won't be able to leave this mine." Hector said again.

Hector's face was full of anger.

Under his eyes, there is a heavy hostility.

And the other party pointed at Hector's head, "Okay, just try it. What are you? How dare you talk to me like that?"

Hector frowned deeply again, "And what are you?"

"I'm the father you can't afford to mess with." the man cursed back, "Do you believe it or not, I can make it impossible for you to open this raw stone mine!"

"Try it. I will see if you will be, in time, shattered by our Miss Murphy."

"What's that Miss Murphy of yours? I have the ability to make her shout at me as daddy." the bald man was still arrogant as ever.

Hearing this, Jocelyn couldn't help but hook her lips.

Hector was just about to curse back and he saw Jocelyn.

He then bowed his head respectfully towards Jocelyn.

Chapter 908 Unless he is a fool

What she just saw, the old man with white hair, with those young men in black, came to her mine.
The old man, who was now standing on top of the deep, bottomless mine shaft, looked around.
On his face, there was an air of profundity all over.
It was a face that felt very unfamiliar to Jocelyn.
She then walked up to him and asked, "Hello, old man. I am Jocelyn. I wonder what you want to do here with me?"
The old man smiled benevolently, "Hello, I am Issac, I came to visit my relatives around here, so I came up the mountain to see."
"Is this your mine?" Issac asked.
The name, it seemed to Jocelyn, was very familiar.

But she can't remember exactly where she heard it.

Just looking at the old man's aura, and the way he was dressed, she could sense that this was no ordinary person.

"Are these all what has just been mined up?" Issac pointed to the side, the raw stones, and asked.

Hector nodded, "Yes."

"As far as I know, this raw stone mine of yours, some time ago, produced high quality stuff."

"I really didn't expect that, now, what's mined out is actually just this low quality. You guys have been driving here for a long time, right? You've been driving down to a few hundred meters, right?"

"If it's a raw stone mine, either, the further down it is, the better it is, or the further down it is, the worse it is. This one of yours should be the second one. Usually if it's one of those good veins, if the good stuff is mined above, it should be better below."

"So, if you believe me, don't keep driving down. The deeper you drive, the more money you waste." Issac had a look of confidence.

Jocelyn, however, did not say anything, but only silently glanced at Issac, and then put his eyes on the mine shaft mouth.

She is not going to argue with them about the goodness of the raw stone ore down there.

This smile from Jocelyn caught the attention of the man with hoarse voice.

The man with hoarse voice fixed his gaze on Jocelyn's face again and asked with a smirk, "Why does she look so familiar?"

Jocelyn smiled, "And who are you, please?"

"My name is Shabbie, I am the oldest disciple of this old man." Shabbie said with a smile.

Jocelyn nodded and politely extended her hand towards him, "Hello. I'm Jocelyn."

Shabbie dawned on it, "No wonder I think you look familiar, so you're that Jocelyn who often appears in the hot search."

"Pleased to meet you." Shabbie added, "This raw stone mine, is it yours?"

Jocelyn nodded, "It's mine."

Shabbie, "Listen to my advice, don't continue, or you will only lose money."

Jocelyn once again smiled, "I want to continue."

As soon as Shabbie heard this, he couldn't help but laugh, "Believe me, you won't get anything. The quality of the raw stone ore now determines the quality underneath."

"If I'm right, underneath, it'll be granite or something like that." Shabbie added.

"But I just want to continue." Jocelyn continued to insist.

Shabbie put on a caring retarded expression, "Are you okay? You have a lot of money, but you can't just spent it at will."

"Hector, continue to lead the men go down and mine further." Jocelyn once again put his eyes on Hector's face.

Hector then nodded respectfully, before taking the men and going straight down into the mine.

After they all left, a familiar figure appeared in front of Jocelyn's eyes.

Bella felt very irritated by Jocelyn's ignorance.
She was seething with rage at this point.
What she hated most was Jocelyn, who was calm.
It seems that whatever happens, it doesn't cause Jocelyn's mood swings.
It was as if Jocelyn was born to be in control of everything.
Today, she really couldn't wait to tear away Jocelyn's apparent calmness and make Jocelyn kneel at her feet without any dignity.
People like Jocelyn deserve to be trampled on.

Because Jocelyn is nasty.

A nasty person deserves to be trampled into the mud.

Why, after so many people have died, only Jocelyn can be okay alone?

Bella was going to upset Jocelyn today.

Disgraceful in front of everyone!

Issac did not pay any attention to Bella, but continued chatting with Jocelyn about the topic he had just discussed.

Jocelyn is knowledgeable about minerals and has dabbled in them.

So, she and Issac both had a conversation.

Issac very much enjoys talking to Jocelyn, who is good looking, and intelligent and knowledgeable.

For him, talking to Jocelyn is the ultimate pleasure.

And because of this, Issac, too, got more involved in the conversation.

He told many, his own unique secrets, to Jocelyn.

Issac was so professional in everything he said, Jocelyn listened carefully.
