

FBI Detective 81

Chapter 81 New Clues

Roan, Mona, and Lacey had just stepped out of the elevator when they saw August who had just walked to the door of the No. 5 investigation team.

Seeing the agents behind him, Augustus immediately stopped and asked:

"How is Ryder doing now?"

"It's nothing serious."

Roan briefly described the doctor's diagnosis, and Augustus heaved a sigh of relief.

Waved his hand to signal the agents to return to their seats, what to do, Augustus pulled Roan to his team leader's office again.

"You did a great job this time! Roan!"

As soon as Roan's * sat on the chair, Augustus grinned and exposed his back molars. He didn't elaborate on the contents of the meeting, but Roan heard the final result clearly:

Double the salary of other agents this week! Quadruple your winnings!

And the Hyena gang's affairs are completely over. After those people are sent to prison, the No. 5 investigation team will receive a thank you money, which is about 500,000 US dollars, and Roan can get part of it.

Not only that, Augustus also got a guarantee from Verenice:

As long as Luo An can solve two cases in a short period of time, Luo An will be promoted immediately and become a senior detective.

Roan didn't care about the promotion, after all, the salary didn't increase much after the promotion.

But the bonus and the money he could get in the future made his eyes light up instantly:

"Thank you sir!"

"This is what you deserve."

Augus waved his hand and didn't say much, then suddenly put away the smile on his face, looked at Roan solemnly, and said in a deep voice:

"Roan, according to the news sent to me by Verinis, recently our FBI New York branch plans to launch a 'Star Agent Project'."

Hearing what Augustus said, Roan was taken aback. Can the words agent and star be combined?

Seeing the doubts on Roan's face, Augustus began to explain in detail:

"You also know that the crime rate in New York has always been high. Although our FBI solves a lot of cases every year, there are more cases that we fail to solve.

This makes the New York media have always had a low opinion of us, always saying that we are a waste of taxpayer money. "

Although the New York Police Department is also scolded, because of the size of the case, most of the people who scold the New York Police Department are ordinary people.

However, most of the cases handled by the FBI are relatively special, and they often communicate with the rich and powerful, so the cases were not solved, and most of the people who scolded the FBI for their incompetence are these people.

Roan understood what Augustus said, but he still didn't understand how the words star and agent were combined.

Could it be that the top management intends to establish an image of a detective who can solve the case 100%?

"No one dares to say that they can solve the case 100%."

Luo An wondered: "I don't believe that the high-level officials of the FBI don't know this truth."

"certainly."

Augus nodded, of course the higher-ups knew this, so they didn't intend to establish a 100% image of solving the case:

"This 'Star Detective Project' actually intends to select a few good-looking detectives and let them be responsible for telling the outside media about the process of solving the case. Those detectives who actually solve the case will not appear in front of the media. "

"What?"

Hearing this, Roan was shocked:

"Are the higher-ups crazy? Let these vases take the credit from the detectives who really succeeded in solving the crime?"

When this kind of thing happened, Luo An didn't dare to pat his chest to guarantee that he could solve every case, but he could pat his chest to assure that those so-called 'star detectives' would be 100% blacked out after get off work.

"You think too much, Roan."

Hearing Roan's words, Augustus rolled his eyes on his * face. Of course, it was impossible for the FBI's senior management to do so, so he continued to explain:

"These so-called 'star agents' are just a facade to deal with reporters, do you understand?"

They will not say that they broke the case themselves, but they will stand in for some detectives and answer questions in front of reporters. "

"What about the credit and rewards after solving the case?"

"Naturally, the detective who actually solves the case will get it."

After listening to Augustus' narration, Roan rolled his eyes, the whole plan sounded full of mistakes and omissions.

Those detectives who really successfully solved the case, although they got their own rewards, were deprived of the right to be interviewed by the media. When they saw a little boy on TV instead of themselves, and talked about the process of solving the case, the ghost knew what was going on in his heart .

Will you find an opportunity to shoot the opponent quietly?

And what's the use of such a thing?

Shouldn't the core problem to be solved be to improve the success rate of solving crimes?

Augus also felt that this kind of thing was unreliable, so he mainly reminded Roan today, and said with a serious expression:

"Because your recent performance is very outstanding, and your height is about the same as mine, so you have been targeted by some people.

They may invite you to join this "Star Detective" program, and they may even want you to shout the slogan "100% solve the case" and become a real "Star Detective," rather than a facade. "

It turned out to be to remind myself not to be deceived, not to be fooled by those people.

Roan suddenly realized, and understood the real purpose of Augustus telling himself this matter.

"Thank you, sir."

Roan nodded with a smile, got up and poured Augustus a cup of coffee:

"I just want to solve the case quietly, make money quietly, and don't want to be famous at all."

"Good."

Augus nodded in satisfaction. He could tell that what Roan said was true.

In the vast land of America, there are many lunatics, or people with abnormal brains.

If the FBI really establishes a "100% case-solving" agent, then these people will definitely kill people in different ways, kill a lot of people, do all kinds of weird and terrifying cases, and then let this agent go detect.

Especially the group of "uncrowned kings" on American land, for the sake of ratings, they dare not say anything except some sensitive topics, and it is not impossible to blow this agent into Sherlock Holmes.

But if the detective didn't solve any case, or made some mistakes in the process of handling the case, then...

It's scary to think about it.

Roan just wanted to solve the case, earn bonuses and thank you fees, and enjoy the life of this life. He had no idea of fighting wits with those lunatics.

Making a fortune in silence is the kingly way.

Boom boom boom—

There was a knock on the door of the team leader's office. Roan and Augustus turned their heads and saw that it was Lacey.

"The suspect Sean has been sent to the interrogation room."

"OK!"

Hearing Lacey's words, Roan nodded towards Augustus, got up decisively and left the team leader's office.

But before he reached the door of the interrogation room, a phone call came in suddenly.

Roan saw that it was Agent Norton.

"Hello?"

Pressed the answer button, Luo An chuckled and said:

"Thank you for your hard work. Our No. 5 investigation team successfully received the suspect Sean. He is now in our interrogation room."

Roan thought the other party was asking if he had successfully received someone.

"When we were interrogating the prisoner just now, we learned a new piece of news, Roan."

Norton on the other end of the phone grinned, with a strange voice:

"Your investigation team, are you investigating a serial bank robbery recently?"

Chapter 82 The Sixth Robbery

"What's the meaning?"

Hearing the words on the other end of the phone, Roan was taken aback. The case you mentioned cannot be .

"It's the robbery case where the duo in black clothes and black pants robbed six banks in a row."

Norton only knew that the bank robbery was under the jurisdiction of the investigation team Roan, but he didn't know the conflict between Roan and Brosen.

In addition, he and Roan are relatively familiar, so after learning the clue, his first reaction was to tell Roan the news.

"That's right! There is such a case!"

Hearing Norton's description, Roan nodded decisively, then asked with a smile:

"Did you directly catch the gangster who robbed the bank? The Hyena Gang also expanded the business of robbing the bank?"

"No, but got some clues."

Hearing Roan's laughter, Norton also laughed, and said directly:

"Come to the interrogation room of our investigation team now, this suspect can be handed over to you for interrogation first."

Roan's eyes lit up, and he agreed decisively:

"OK, I'll be right there!"

Hung up the phone, Roan turned his head to look at Lacey, then looked at Sean with broken eyebrows who was sitting on a chair in the interrogation room, with his hands handcuffed on the beam of the table, and said after a second of silence:

"Lacie, leave this person to you and William for trial. The evidence is complete, just go through the process, and there is nothing to talk nonsense with him."

"OK."

Lacey agreed, and just about to turn around and call William, Roan suddenly frowned:

"Is the camera on?"

Lacey subconsciously shook her head and replied, "Not yet."

"very good."

Hearing the affirmative answer, Roan walked to the side station, picked up a book, pushed open the door of the interrogation room and walked in.

Then, under the astonished gazes of Lacey and Sean, Roan directly placed the book on Sean's back, and punched him.

boom!

"you"

"This punch is because you attacked my teammate with flour and almost killed him."

The huge impact made Sean's internal organs tremble. In addition, he was hit by the shock bomb just now, and now his chest hurts so much that he almost spewed blood from his mouth.

The back was hit hard, and Sean slammed into the table in front of him. The severe pain made him growl angrily, but he was powerless with his hands handcuffed.

Roan's eyes flickered coldly, he grabbed Sean's face and stared into his eyes, and said coldly:

"This punch is for Dani and the families of the victims."

"F"

Just as Sean started swearing, Roan picked up the book again and put it behind his back. When the strong wind hit, he punched it down again.

boom!

Because of being hit by the impact of the shock bomb before, Sean, who was already unwell, felt severe pain in his internal organs when he was hit by this heavier fist.

In the end, he couldn't hold back, a mouthful of blood spurted out from his mouth, his body softened, and he sat on the chair and passed out.

"snort."

Roan, who originally wanted to punch Sean again, saw this scene, snorted coldly, and strode out of the interrogation room with a book.

After watching the whole process, Lacey spread her hands, pointing to the blood on the table, she was speechless:

"Can't you clean it up with your hands?"

Lacey didn't have any opinion on Roan's beating.

Anyway, the other party is a serial murderer.

They are the FBI, and they have the final say on entering here.

Moreover, Lacey knew the whole story about Ryder being sneaked into the hospital after being attacked by Sean. Even before Roan did it, Lacey had already prepared to give him a big memory recovery when he and William interrogated each other. surgical plan.

"Sorry, Lacey."

Luo An put the book back to its original place, apologized casually, then walked to his desk, picked up the documents related to the bank robbery, and grabbed Mona who looked confused, strode out of No. 5 investigation Group.

"Fu-k."

Lacey raised a * towards Roan's back, then called William over, pointed at the scene in the interrogation room, and patted him on the shoulder:

"I leave it to you to clean up."

William: "."

Organized the Criminal Investigation Section.

"You are Agent Luo An."

As soon as they entered their territory, a muscular white man with glasses strode towards Roan and Mona, slapped Roan on the shoulder, and said with a grin:

"Sure enough, it is exactly as Augustus said, handsome enough!"

Roan smiled slightly, stretched out his hand and shook Dillon:

"Thank you, sir, for your compliment."

Turned to greet Mona again, an agent suddenly came over and whispered in Dillon's ear, Dillon nodded, stopped talking nonsense, pointed directly to an interrogation room not far away and said:

"Norton is in that room, you go, if you have any questions, just ask Norton."

"Okay, thank you sir."

After speaking, Dillon turned around and left with several agents. Roan glanced around the somewhat messy Office of the Organized Crime Investigation Section, exchanged glances with Mona, and walked towards the interrogation room.

Mona walked beside Roan, hugged the laptop on her chest, tilted her head and said in doubt:

"Roan, didn't you say you didn't plan to get involved in this bank robbery?"

"That's what I said yesterday, not who I am today."

Roan grinned, knocked on the door of the interrogation room, and walked in.

Whether to intervene in this bank robbery depends on the chances of catching the robber. Roan doesn't want to get punished if the case is not solved.

But the clues still need to be investigated, because only when the clues are obtained, Roan can judge his chances of catching the robbers.

"snort."

Hearing Roan's perfunctory words, Mona wrinkled her nose and followed her into the interrogation room.

In the interrogation room was a white young man who seemed to be in his twenties. He didn't react when he saw Roan, but his eyes lit up when he saw Mona.

Mona ignored him completely.

"I didn't expect that we would meet again not long after we separated."

Roan smiled and stretched out his hand to shake Norton. Norton also smiled, nodded to Mona and motioned for the two to sit down, then directly handed over the interrogation record to the two, and walked out of the room by himself.

He still has a lot of things to deal with.

According to the interrogation records, the white young man in front of him is named Robert. He is 29 years old this year. He has joined the Hyena Gang for two and a half years, but he is one of the grassroots leaders of the Hyena Gang.

According to the normal situation, people like Robert dare not tell the information about the Hyena Gang, fearing that their family members will be retaliated afterwards, so Norton will just interrogate him casually, and then hand him over to the judge to send him to prison.

But I didn't expect that when Robert was interrogated today, the other party said that he really couldn't tell the information about the Hyena Gang, but he knew information about other cases.

So Robert's request is simple: I can tell you about other cases, but I want a reduced sentence.

"So, you say you know who the bank robbers are?"

After reading the interrogation record, Mona also called up all the information since Robert's birth. Roan glanced briefly and asked in a concentrated voice:

"I agree to your commutation agreement, but the specific time of commutation should be judged according to the value of the case information you described."

"OK."

Robert nodded without any nonsense, and said directly: "Then let's sign the agreement."

According to federal law, when signing the commutation agreement, a lawyer must be present.

So ten minutes later, there was another middle-aged white lawyer in a suit in the room.

Under the witness of the lawyer, the two parties signed their respective names on the agreement, and then Robert crossed his legs and said directly:

"I don't know about the previous bank robberies, but the sixth case was done by the owner of a laundry in Queens."

"What?"

Hearing this, Roan and Mona were stunned.

Six robberies, not by the same gang?

Chapter 83 is just economic behavior

Seeing the surprised look on Mona's face, Robert grinned and asked with a smile:

"You FBI, you don't always think that these six bank robberies were done by the same group."

Roan tapped the table with a pen with a blank face:

"You said the case was done by the laundry owner, do you have any evidence?"

"certainly!"

Robert nodded and said directly:

"The last time I went to his store, I happened to see a set of black clothes and black pants in a laundry basket."

The Hyena Gang also knew something about this case. After all, one of the banks was in their territory, so they knew that the gang of robbers were dressed in all black.

Hearing this, Roan was a little speechless:

"It's normal to have black clothes in the laundry. Are the black clothes you mentioned the same as the clothes worn by the robbers?"

Robert spread his hands and leaned back:

"That's your FBI's problem, how do I know?"

Seeing the other party's actions, Mona frowned and was about to speak, but Roan waved her hand to signal her not to be angry, and then said with a smile:

"Very well, I like your attitude.

But I hope you can always insist on saying this, anyway, I am not the one who went to prison in the end. "

Hearing Roan's words, the expression on Robert's face suddenly froze.

After a few seconds of silence, Robert coughed twice and sat up straight, and began to speak seriously:

"The name of the owner of the laundry is Erken. There is a couple of elderly people in the family who need support. One daughter is about to go to college. His wife has a car accident and her right foot is disabled."

Hearing Robert's narration, Roan turned his head to look at the computer in Mona's hand, and found that the information about Erkin on it was exactly the same as the other party's narration.

Roan nodded, stretching his hands forward:

"continue."

Robert crossed his hands on the table and continued:

"Because there is only one laundromat in the family, and because the family needs money everywhere, Erken's life is very tight.

It happened that his daughter was admitted to college some time ago. Although she can apply for college loans, the high interest rate of college loans is not good news for the family.

After being recommended by some people, Erken later got to know our Hyena Gang and had some

Um

Economic behavior! "

Hearing that usury was described as an economic behavior, everyone present rolled their eyes. Robert didn't care, and continued:

"We thought that after a while, the laundry would be ours if Elken didn't pay.

But I didn't expect that only a week later, Elken took a lot of small change and banknotes, and returned all the money to us with interest. "

Hearing this, Roan and Mona glanced at each other, and they both realized that something was abnormal.

Robert raised his legs again when he saw this, and said:

"Our Hyena Gang is an honest organization, and Erken paid back the money with interest, so we didn't embarrass each other.

I just went to Erken's laundry that day to find out how he made his money. "

At that time, Robert thought that Erken went out to buy flour secretly, because only by selling flour can the money come so quickly.

And that area is the territory of the Hyena Gang. Selling flour there privately is an act of smashing the market, so after Robert learned of this, he immediately took his younger brother to the laundry.

Speaking of which, Robert's tone was a bit strange:

"Elken was taking a black suit out of a washing machine when we entered the laundry.

At that time, the TV hanging in front of the laundry shop happened to be broadcasting the sixth robbery at a nearby bank. "

Others in the interrogation room: "."

Roan twitched the corner of his mouth and asked:

"What time is that day?"

"Wednesday last week."

That day was indeed the time when the sixth bank robbery occurred. Roan turned to look at Mona, and motioned her to check the surveillance video of Erkin's house and his laundry.

"There is no surveillance near Erken's house, and the laundry shop is only on the upper right of the gate, and there is a networked surveillance directly facing the gate."

Mona fluttered her fingers and tapped on the keyboard, then said in a low voice:

"According to the monitoring, on the day of the incident, Elken's laundry did not open as usual in the morning. It was not until the fourth hour after the incident that Elken entered the laundry with a brown satchel."

Roan raised his eyebrows, looked up at Robert, and was about to continue asking, Mona suddenly reached out and pulled his arm, pointing at the computer screen and whispering:

"When Erken's daughter came to help in the laundry, her face was not very good-looking, but after ten minutes, her daughter suddenly rushed out of the laundry in high spirits."

"OK."

After listening to Mona's description, Roan blinked, then looked up at Robert again, and asked:

"Any other clues?"

"No leads, but some ideas."

Robert straightened up, looked at Roan and Mona with a smile, and said:

"Money robbed from the bank, for safety reasons, many people will not choose to spend it directly most of the time."

So I guess these bank robbers have a way of laundering money."

Robert chatted a lot, and the more he talked, the more outrageous he even began to suspect that the gang of robbers came from the KGB. Roan interrupted him with a wave of his hand:

"Okay, Mr. Robert, your clues are very useful to us, but guessing is fine, do you have any other clues?"

"Gone."

"Good."

Roan nodded, got up and was about to take Mona away, Robert immediately shouted:

"Mr. Detective, the clues I said are all true, you must commute my sentence! My wife is about to give birth, and I promised her to go to the hospital to accompany her!"

Roan's mouth twitched, and he strode out of the interrogation room without replying, but Mona glanced at him when she got up and left her seat.

But seeing the other party raised an eyebrow at her, Mona gave the other party a hard look, then followed Roan away without looking back.

Walking out of the interrogation room, Roan exchanged pleasantries with Norton for a while, then walked out of the office area of the Organized Crime Investigation Section, and walked into the elevator with Mona.

In the elevator, Mona tilted her head and asked:

"Do you believe that the owner of the laundromat is a bank robber?"

Roan shook his head: "Probably not, but this is a clue, you can check it out, and it won't delay anything if you check it out."

Mona nodded and continued to ask:

"What should I do next?"

"It's easy."

Roan rubbed his arm, tilted his head and smiled:

"If you have something to do, go to the chief."

dong dong dong

"Enter."

Hearing the cold voice in the conference room, Roan pushed open the door and walked in.

Looked up and saw that it was Roan, Verniss didn't talk nonsense, and continued to lower her head to write the document:

"sit."

"Hello, sir."

Roan sat down on the chair, and before he could speak, Verenice threw him a folder:

"Look at the information inside first."

Opening the folder, Roan frowned when he saw the contents inside.

Chapter 84 Brosen's Efforts

In the folder, there is the general situation of Bruosen's investigation of the bank robbery in the past few days.

Among the six bank robberies, except for the third bank which had a hidden camera installed in a fire sprinkler, the cameras of the remaining banks were all smeared with black spray paint by the robbers as soon as they entered the bank.

So this hidden camera that recorded the whole process of the bank robber's actions became an important guide for Brosen and the others.

According to the video recordings in the camera, Brosen judged that the two bank robbers were a group of veterans, or had served in the army, so the whole operation process was very capable and straightforward.

When they asked passers-by and bank staff who were trapped in the bank for business at the scene of the second crime, Brosen and the others got another piece of news that there was a snake-like snake on the right wrist of one of the bank robbers. Patterned tattoo.

Because the transparent document bag handed to the bank staff by the robber contained their personal information and family member information, Brosen also began to investigate the bank staff's interpersonal relationship and family situation, and checked whether anyone had inquired about them recently.

When the robbers entered the bank, they shot upwards first, and Brosen did not forget to check the bullet casings left at the scene, and took the bullet casings for ballistic analysis.

Obviously, there is no major problem with Bruosen's investigation direction and experience judgment, but unfortunately, these clues did not allow Bruosen to find the robbers.

The location of these banks is not the affluent uptown area. There is a large area around them, and there is no complete surveillance video.

So after the two robbers finished the robbery and escaped from the bank, Brosen only found the backs of the robbers in a few old cameras that were not connected to the Internet, and judged that they were fleeing eastward, and then the figures of the robbers disappeared completely.

Snake-like tattoos After investigation, it was found that only a few tattoo parlors in New York would draw this pattern, but after investigation, the owner of the tattoo parlor and the person who drew this pattern had alibi on the day of the incident.

Checking the family situation of the bank staff did not yield any clues.

As for the six bullets analyzed by ballistics, they judged that the gun was not the same pistol, but the pistol was of the same model. There were too many black guns of this model strayed out, and it was impossible to investigate for a while.

So until today, Brosen has not found the exact information of the murderer.

After reading the information, Roan frowned, and put the file back on Verinisi's desk.

Verinis didn't look up, she continued to lower her head to write the document, and asked at the same time:

"Any thoughts?"

"Broosen is an experienced old FBI, and there is nothing wrong with the direction of the investigation."

Roan nodded, then changed his tone:

"The entry point of the investigation is wrong."

Hearing this, Vernis stopped writing and looked up at Roan:

"explain."

No nonsense, Roan directly described the interrogation process just now to Verinisi, and finally said:

"Obviously, because the camera was blocked by black paint, Brosen could only judge the murderer based on the camera footage of the bank where the third case occurred and the testimony of witnesses at the scene of the six cases.

However, in the six cases, the two robbers were about the same height, and the witnesses' descriptions of the robbers also focused on the same clothes and the same mode of action.

The witnesses will inevitably neglect some details after being frightened, and the murderer did not speak during the robbery, and used the recordings in the mobile phone to direct the actions of everyone in the bank, so... "

"So there is a high probability that Brosen believes that the six robberies were committed by the same group."

Verinis threw away the signature pen, leaned back, and continued following Roan's words.

"Exactly."

Luo An nodded. No witness was unlucky enough to run into the robber twice while doing business at the bank, so the witnesses at the scene of the six robberies would only tell about the robbery they experienced just now.

In the six robberies, the crime process was exactly the same, the clothes were exactly the same, and even the pistol they held was the same model.

"You just said that you have found the robber in the sixth case, didn't you?"

Hearing what Verenice said, Roan shook his head:

"No, sir, it's just possible. I can't guarantee this until I find concrete evidence."

Roan didn't find any big loopholes in the hyena gang Robert's description.

But except for some special cases where large memory recovery techniques can be used to force prisoners to confess, evidence is still required in ordinary cases.

Roan would not talk nonsense until he found the robbed banknotes in the hands of the laundry owner, or other direct evidence.

Hearing Roan's words, Verinisi was silent for a long time, then straightened up, crossed her hands on the desk, looked at Roan seriously, and said in a cold voice:

"The three-day time limit set by Brosen at the meeting to solve the case, there are still 6 hours before the end of the time.

After 6 hours, if Brosen has not succeeded in solving the case, the case will be taken over by one of our remaining team leaders.

If we solve this case, then I have the opportunity to go one step further, and you also have the opportunity to be promoted to a senior detective in an exceptional way, and at the same time, you can get a lot of money as a thank you from the bank. "

Roan nodded. Verenice had told him about this before, and he knew it.

Eyes moved slightly, Verenice continued:

"Assuming that Brosen didn't solve the case within the specified time, then before the case is handed over to us, we can analyze the clues of the case first, starting from the owner of the laundry shop.

If the owner of the laundry shop is not the real robber, or if Brosen has locked the arrest warrant for the owner of the laundry shop, then consider this incident as never happened, and think about whether to take this case after 6 hours.

If during the investigation it turns out that the laundromat owner is a bank robber, and Brosen doesn't discover this, then in 6 hours, I will take the case in the hands of my superiors. "

The owner of the laundry shop may be a bank robber, and the news that the six bank robberies may not be done by a group of people, Vernis did not intend to inform Brosen from the beginning.

Not sure whether the news is true or not is one thing, but the main reason is that the man behind the serial murder case to the media is targeting Brosen, who is in the five investigation teams under Verinisi.

If Roan hadn't solved the case quickly and successfully rescued the hostages and killed the murderer in front of everyone, Verence would have been severely punished.

If Vernis wants to erase the punishment, she will definitely pay a high political price.

And the foundations that Bruosen and Verence entered are different.

Political struggles have always been life and death.

Vernice originally thought that if Brosen failed to solve the case, she would push him out of the headquarters building of the FBI's New York branch.

But she didn't expect Roan to bring her good news, giving her the opportunity to drive Bruosen out of the building directly.

Thinking of this, Verniss throat moved, and she looked at Roan with complicated eyes.

After listening to Verenice's words, Roan licked the corner of his mouth, his eyes flickered coldly, and he understood the meaning of the words.

To be honest, Roan also wanted to take this opportunity to drive Brosen out of his sight forever.

When I was a trainee agent at the beginning, after a certain operation failed, because of the existence of Brosen, the three-person team only deducted points from Roan.

Follow-up, after Roan and Mona successfully arrested the Park Murderer, Brosen still targeted Roan at the meeting.

If Roan hadn't prepared in advance and took away the notebook from the murderer's arms, the scene that night would have made Roan very embarrassed.

In addition, the case was leaked to the TV station later, when we met in the elevator, the eyes became colder every time, and the biting dog didn't bark.

To be honest, if it wasn't for the fear that during the investigation after the death of the team leader, if the cause of death was found to be abnormal, it would cause the anger and investigation of the FBI's senior management.

Thinking of this, Roan no longer hesitated, nodded to Verenice decisively, and grinned:

"Okay, sir, I know what to do."

Virnis was very satisfied when she heard this, and after briefly explaining some arrangements, she asked Roan to leave the office.

Back to the site of the No. 5 investigation team, Sean has been interrogated by Lacey and William and sent away here, Roan touched his fist that was not punched enough, turned and walked into Augustus' office.

Describe Verence's arrangement to Augustus. Augustus did not hesitate after hearing it, and agreed decisively. At the same time, he said to Roan with a serious expression:

"During the process of investigating and collecting evidence, you must be careful."

"Okay, thank you sir."

Roan grinned, poured Augustus a cup of coffee, turned and left the team leader's office.

Sitting back at his desk, Roan was about to ask Mona, but Mona asked calmly:

"Is it to investigate the serial bank robbery?"

Roan was taken aback for a moment, but then smiled:

"Exactly."

"I knew it."

Mona glanced at Roan, pointed to the computer and said:

"When you went to find Vernis just now, I checked all the network monitoring in the area near the laundry. On the day of the incident, I didn't find any suspicious figure of the owner of the laundry, Erken."

Surveillance video can only prove that Erkin opened the door late for business on the day of the crime, and his daughter entered the laundry to help with a sad face, and ran out of the laundry happily. These have nothing to do with the bank robbery.

"All right."

After listening to Mona's narration, Roan nodded, thought for a moment and asked:

"What about the consumption records of the Erkin family? Is there anything unusual?"

"Do you know why gangsters like to open laundromats? Because there is a lot of change there, which is convenient for money laundering."

Mona replied casually, pouting and typing on the keyboard:

"With elderly parents, a disabled wife, a daughter going to college, and Elken himself with an old laundry, do you think he'll use things like credit cards a lot?"

Roan's mouth twitched. Just as he was about to say something, Mona nodded, pointed at the computer screen and said:

"Really will."

Sorry, I just heard the boss chanting, the update is half an hour late, I am very sorry!

Chapter 85 Start investigation

Following Mona's fingers and looking at the computer screen, Roan saw the consumption records of a high-end restaurant.

"On the fourth day after the sixth bank robbery, Erkin took his family to have a big meal at this Michelin one-star restaurant."

Mona moved her ten fingers slightly, and the surveillance video of the lobby of the one-Michelin-star restaurant appeared on the computer screen. After a slight adjustment, a moment later, the video of Erkin's family eating that night appeared in their eyes.

Obviously, this was a family celebration banquet held for Erken's daughter to get a letter of recommendation and enter university. During the period, Erken even allowed his daughter Serena to drink a little less wine.

Throughout the meal, the Erkin family was warm and harmonious, and enjoyed themselves happily.

After watching the surveillance video, Roan next to the computer scratched his head, Mona shrugged her shoulders, envy flashed in her eyes, but she said without emotion:

"It's an important thing for my daughter to go to college. It's normal to come to this kind of restaurant to celebrate."

I don't know if it's because of sympathy for the life experience of the Erkin family, or envy of Serena. In short, Mona's mood is very complicated now.

"Let's go to the scene to investigate."

Until the truth is investigated, Roan won't say much.

Lacey hasn't come back yet, and Ryder is lying in the hospital, so the only one who went out with him this time is Mona.

Seeing that Roan had the same set of combat uniform + plate armor vest + smoke bombs + shock bombs + two Glock 18s + ten extended magazines, Mona sighed speechlessly, clutching her forehead.

She is now very sure that Roan's lack of security is extremely serious.

The jet-black SUV sped down the roads of New York and soon arrived at the laundromat in Queens.

Jingle Bell-

Pushing open the door of the laundromat, Roan walked in with Mona.

Several machines in the laundry shop were busy, and one of them seemed to be malfunctioning. A thin white woman was kicking the machine, cursing in a low voice while preparing to make a call.

"FBI!"

After entering the laundromat, Roan took out the golden FBI badge and showed it to the skinny white woman, then asked:

"Where is the owner of this laundry?"

"I am!"

Seeing Roan in full armor, the thin white female Zoe twitched her mouth, took a step back, and her face was a little nervous:

"What are you looking for me for?"

"Are you the boss?"

The words of the woman in front of him made Roan frown:

"Isn't Elkin the owner of this store?"

Hearing that Roan didn't come to find her, Zoey immediately breathed a sigh of relief, put her hands on her hips, raised her eyebrows and began to curse at Erken:

"You are right, Mr. Detective, the previous owner of this store was indeed Erkin, but he sold this laundry to me at a low price the night before yesterday.

I have known Erken for many years. I thought that Erken was an honest man, but I didn't expect that the laundry he sold to me had a lot of problems with the machine. I have been repairing it since morning. machine"

Hearing what the woman said, Roan and Mona glanced at each other, and both realized that something was wrong, so they quickly interrupted each other with a wave:

"Airken sold the store to you the night before yesterday, why?"

"how could I know?"

The corners of Zoe's mouth were hooked down, his face full of displeasure:

"Probably because his daughter is going to a college in another state, so he is not going to work here."

Could it be that he took this opportunity to run away from New York?

Mona turned to look at Roan, just about to ask, Roan moved his eyes, and continued to ask:

"When Erken sold the shop to you, what was his demeanor? Are you in a hurry?"

Luo An had some other guesses in his heart.

Zoe shook her head, indicating that she had a bakery at the end of the street. When Erken came to look for her at home the night before, she was not in a hurry, and the two parties negotiated the price of the shop for a long time before negotiating.

Hearing this, Roan frowned, and the thoughts in his heart were dispelled.

"OK, thank you for your cooperation."

Asked a few more casually again, seeing that there was no other useful information, Roan and Mona turned around and left the laundry without talking nonsense.

With one foot on the gas pedal, the SUV rushed out towards the road.

On the co-pilot, Mona's ten fingers were flying on the keyboard, her brows were furrowed:

"There is no record of the Erken family buying air tickets to leave New York, nor the checkpoints set up by NYPD on the highways around New York, nor the record of the Erken family leaving in a car."

"So they should still be in New York."

Roan nodded. He originally thought that Erken was under some kind of coercion, so he was in a hurry to sell the laundry, but the state of Erken described by Zoe just now did not look like he was under coercion.

The SUV soon arrived at the community where Erken's family was located, an old building.

Take the elevator to the third floor, Roan and Mona walked along the corridor to the door of Erken's house, and began to knock on the door.

Boom boom boom!

"Is anyone home?"

Roan yelled, but no one in the room answered.

Mona tilted her head when she saw this, and just about to speak, Roan moved her nose, her face changed slightly, and hurriedly waved her hand to signal Mona to hide aside.

The two took out their weapons, looked at each other and counted down to three, Roan decisively kicked the door open, and shouted:

"FBI!"

Roan and Mona held guns in both hands, and quickly checked every room in the house in a vigilant posture. After confirming that no one was there, Qiqi said:

"Safety!"

"Safety!"

Putting the pistol back into the pocket, Roan and Mona walked towards the living room with serious expressions.

The living room is not big, with a TV and a sofa.

But at this time, the left side of the yellow-brown sofa has been dyed black by the deep red blood.

"What the * is going on here?"

Mona frowned and looked around. Although there was blood left in the living room, it didn't look messy as a whole, and it didn't look like a murder had happened.

Roan also looked dignified. He checked several bedrooms in the house and found that the clothes in the closets of the parents and daughter were tidied up and the beds were clean.

But the room of the two elderly people was very messy, and it looked like it hadn't been tidied up. When the closet was opened, the clothes inside were also torn everywhere.

Go to the kitchen and open the refrigerator, and find that there is no short-term food in it, and it is full of food that can be stored for a long time.

"It seems that Erkin is planning to send his daughter to college with his wife."

After a brief observation, Roan walked back to the living room, folded his hands on his chest, frowned and pondered:

"The two elderly people stayed to watch the house, because it was inconvenient for them to go downstairs to buy things, so Aierken left them a lot of food."

Hearing Roan's analysis, Mona nodded and didn't say much. She also made the same judgment after a week of observation, but she was still a little confused. What happened to the blood on the sofa?

"have no idea."

Roan shook his head, the first time he saw the blood, he wanted to call his colleagues from the trace inspection department to come here for inspection.

But after thinking about it, this time, I and Mona belonged to a secret operation, and it might not be appropriate to call the trace inspection department.

"Go back to the car and check the surveillance video of the surrounding roads to see where Erken's car went."

Silent for a long time, Roan searched the house several times, but did not find any clues, so he turned his head and said to Mona:

"I didn't see Erken's car downstairs just now. It was most likely driven away by the Erken family."

"OK."

Mona nodded, got up and prepared to leave with Roan.

The two had just walked out of the door of Erken's house. When Roan was about to fix the door again, the elevator not far from the corridor opened, and two young white men walked out from it.

Seeing Roan in full armor and the white FBI words written on Mona's body armor, the two white youths were taken aback, looked at each other, and walked towards the stairs not far from the elevator.

After fixing the door, Roan tilted his head to see this scene, took out the Glock 18 calmly, protected Mona behind him, and shouted loudly:

"You two, don't leave yet..."

The next second, the two white youths who had just walked to the door of the stairs decisively drew their guns, and pulled the trigger in the direction of Luo An without aiming.

Just as the two white youths stretched their hands into their arms, Roan's eyes flickered coldly, and while pushing Mona back into Erken's house forcefully, he raised his hand and shot, hitting the center of the back of the white youth on the left.

boom!

boom! boom!

"ah-"

"FU-K!"

Three shots were fired, and Roan hid sideways into the room unharmed.

One of the two white youths screamed and fell headfirst down the stairs, while the other yelled and ran down the stairs, ready to help his companion up and take him to run away together.

"Roan, are you okay?"

Mona, who was pushed to the ground by Roan, quickly got up from the ground, her face was full of anxiety, Roan turned her head and grinned:

"I'm fine! Don't worry."

The moment he fired the gun just now, Roan felt that although his reaction speed was not as quick as when he was in the basement, it was still a little faster than before.

Thinking of this, Roan no longer hesitated, and decisively rushed out with the Glock 18 in a fighting posture.

Mona followed closely after seeing this, but what shocked her was that the time difference between her and Roan going out was less than two seconds, but as soon as she walked out of the room, Roan rushed to the end of the corridor.

"Shit!"

Mona cursed secretly in her heart: "Why is Roan so fast?"

Roan didn't know what Mona was thinking. The moment he rushed to the stairs, Roan decisively threw a shock bomb towards the corner of the stairs.

Boom!

The moment the shock bomb exploded, the eyes of the two young Caucasians were filled with white light, their ears hurt sharply, and their heads were dizzy.

Roan raised his mouth slightly when he saw this, raised his hand and aimed the Glock 18 at the arms of the two white youths, and pulled the trigger without hesitation.

boom! boom! boom! boom!

"ah-"

The arm was hit by a bullet, and the pistols in the hands of the two white youths fell to the ground in an instant. They subconsciously prepared to pick it up, but Roan had already rushed in front of them amidst the incredible faces of the two.

A gust of wind hit, and the two young Caucasians were hit * the face. The bridge of their noses collapsed, and they fell to the ground with their heads up.

By the time Mona rushed to the stairs with a gun, Roan had already handcuffed the two together.

Mona: ".FU-K!"

Chapter 86 The Truth About the Laundry Owner

"Roan!"

Ignoring the two white youths who were paralyzed on the ground and screaming, Mona searched them for guns, ammunition, driver's license and other items, looked deeply at Roan, and said angrily:

"You were too fast just now, it's very dangerous! What if you get hit by the other side? We're just the FBI, not the SWAT action team!"

When Roan rushed to the stairs at a very fast speed just now, Mona was first shocked by the speed of the opponent, and then became extremely uneasy, very worried that when she rushed to the stairs, she would see Roan lying on the ground.

Luo An is indeed fully armed, but the bullets have no eyes. Who knows if a bullet will hit Luo An's vitals at a strange angle.

This kind of thing has happened many times in the vast land of America.

"Okay, not next time."

Seeing the serious expression on Mona's face, Roan smiled and didn't make any more sophistry, and then changed the subject, hoping that Mona would check the identities of the two white youths based on their driver's licenses.

Mona glared at Roan, but turned around and went downstairs to get her laptop from the SUV.

Immediately afterwards, Roan stepped on the shot arm of the white youth on the left, and asked sharply:

"Tell me, what are you doing here? Why are you shooting at us?"

"F"

This white youth was shot in the back by Roan just now, and was shot in each arm. The pain was already unbearable.

Now Roan stepped on the arm that was shot, and just said the first letter of the beautiful words, and passed out from the pain.

Roan sneered when he saw this, and turned to look at the white young man on the right.

The white young man on the right was trembling because of the gunshot wound on his arm. When he looked up and saw Roanna's cold eyes, and the other party had no intention of calling an ambulance, his body trembled even more.

Seeing the hesitation on the other party's face, wanting to speak but not daring to speak, Luo An had some guesses about the identities of the two, so he said in a cold voice:

"Don't say it, you will see God 100% in a few minutes. Say it, maybe you will see God after you die of old age."

Hearing this, the white youth on the right was stunned. They shot first. Even if they died here a few minutes later due to excessive blood loss, the FBI would most likely be on administrative leave afterwards, so he hurriedly said:

"My name is Harry, and his name is Dominic. We are only here today to find someone. We didn't intend to conflict with your FBI. It's just that you stopped us just now, and we shot subconsciously because we were afraid. Please call the ambulance immediately." Telephone"

"Would you be so nervous about finding someone? Faced with the FBI's inquiry, choose to shoot directly? Lying to the FBI agent is a felony!"

Hearing this, Roan frowned slightly, took out his phone and shook it in front of Harry, and said in a cold voice:

"You better think it through."

Harry is 21 years old this year. He has not received much education since he was a child.

When it was really about his own life and death, Harry trembled in fear, and then recalling Roan's previous words, he immediately explained everything:

"We're just looking for money from the Erkin's family!"

Harry said that he was a member of a small gang in a few streets nearby, the "Black River Gang". He had just joined the gang for less than three months, and one of the gang's businesses was to borrow money from outsiders.

Airken borrowed a large amount of money from them a few days ago, and today the boss of their gang sent the two of them to urge the other party to remember to repay the loan when it was due.

As for the shooting at Roan and Roan just now, Harry said that Dominic was the leader of the two, and he had a life in his hands. Just now, he subconsciously shot at Roan and Roan because he heard Dominic asked him to shoot. gun.

"Airken borrowed money from you?"

Hearing the news, Roan was taken aback, and then asked:

"When did this happen?"

"It was last week!"

Hearing this, Roan narrowed his eyes slightly, thinking that Elken had also borrowed money from the Hyena Gang before, and at the same time repaid it quickly, Roan understood.

Erken is playing with loans to support loans!

But Roan was very puzzled, why is Erken so courageous, and dare to play like this with the money of the gangster?

This is very inconsistent with Erkin's usual personality and performance.

"At first you said you were here to find someone, but later you said you were here to find money."

Roan tilted his head and found the inconsistency in Harry's words, so he grinned and asked:

"Which statement is true?"

"The latter sentence is true!"

Feeling his body trembling more and more, Harry said with trembling lips:

"Last night in a nearby supermarket, Erkin clashed with a member of our gang and was accidentally shot by a member of our gang with a pistol.

People from our gang who were nearby this morning accidentally discovered that Erken actually brought his parents into the car, so they guessed that Erken planned to run away with the money.

After the boss found out, he sent someone to stop their car halfway, and took the family back to our bar. Then not long ago, the boss sent both of us to Erken's house to find money."

The more Harry talked, the more ugly his face became, and at the end he was already pale, as if he was about to fall into a coma.

Seeing this, Roan immediately pressed his phone and sent a message to Mona.

After a while, several medical staff came up with a stretcher, put the two on the stretcher, carried them back to the ambulance and took them to the hospital.

In fact, when Mona went downstairs with their driver's license to check their identities, Roan had already asked Mona to call the ambulance from the nearest hospital, telling them to come here as soon as possible to pull people.

The ambulance left quickly. Mona sat on the co-pilot of the SUV, tilted her head and looked at Roan who notified the New York Police Department, and asked:

"The other party has explained everything?"

Roan nodded, this story is not complicated.

Recently, for some unknown reason, Erkin began to borrow money from gangsters, and even borrowed money from a gangster, the Hyena Gang and the Black River Gang had borrowed money.

What's even more outrageous is that Erken actually used the money of these gangsters to play with loans to support loans.

This is the first time Roan has heard of this kind of thing in two lifetimes.

When the sixth bank robbery happened, Erkin was borrowing money from the Black River Gang.

In the previous video surveillance, Erkin returned to the laundry with a brown bag four hours after the sixth robbery.

Actually, according to Harry, the brown bag contained money actually borrowed by Elken from the Black River Gang.

The night before yesterday, Erken chose to sell the laundry for unknown reasons.

Last night, on his way home, Erken clashed with members of the 'Black River Gang' again, and was shot by the opponent's pistol.

Erken didn't know that the other party was an accidental injury, and thought that his behavior of using loans to support loans was discovered by the "Heihe Gang". The plan to drive his daughter to school was temporarily interrupted, and he chose to drive with the whole family instead. road.

As a result, he was detained by the boss of the "Heihe Gang" on the way.

"Then what do we do next?"

After listening to Roan's narration, Mona's eyebrows trembled. She had never seen such a bold person.

Dancing her ten fingers on the keyboard, Mona quickly found the bar of the 'Heihe Gang', which is a ten-minute drive away.

"Call Norton at the Organized Crime Unit and ask him to contact SWAT."

Roan rubbed his temples speechlessly. He originally thought Elken was a 'bank robber', but he didn't expect that the other party was 'supporting loans with loans'. When the bank robbery happened, Elken was actually borrowing money from gangsters.

This gap between the front and rear is a bit outrageous.

Mona nodded, then frowned slightly: "So, this case has nothing to do with that bank robbery, and we came here for nothing?"

"No."

Roan shook his head, turned to Mona and smiled:

"We had the opportunity to rescue Serena, a prospective college student, from the gangsters. It was not in vain."

Roan felt Mona's envy for Erkin's daughter Selina before, and thinking about what he had learned about Mona's family before, he also had a little understanding of Mona.

Sure enough, upon hearing Roan's words, Mona paused slightly with her head down while typing on the keyboard, and the corners of her mouth slightly raised.

Chapter 87 New Analysis of Bank Robbery Cases

The No. 5 investigation team can actually take care of the gang affairs, but Roan and Mona are acting in private this time and can't attract too many people's attention, so they called Norton of the organized crime investigation team.

Tell Norton clearly what happened. After Norton learned that the "Black River Gang" was just a small loan shark gang, he immediately led the SWAT action team here, and took advantage of his unpreparedness to make a quick surprise attack and kill this small gang. Easily destroyed.

"Thank you for your hard work this time."

Roan glanced at the main gang leaders who were stuffed into the car by SWAT, smiled and extended his hand to shake Norton:

"I didn't expect that I just destroyed a big gang in the morning, and I will smash a small gang in the afternoon."

"No hard work."

Norton was overjoyed, pointed to the reporter who appeared from nowhere not far away, and whispered to Roan with a smile:

"Thank you very much, Roan, for giving me another chance to be on the news."

As far as the United States is concerned, cracking down on gangs is not easy. Law enforcement agencies not only need physical evidence that can accurately convict gang leaders, but also witnesses who can testify in court.

It so happened that the Erkin family was trapped in the bar at this time, and the most difficult witness evidence had already been obtained, and the remaining physical evidence was not a problem for the FBI at all.

As far as Norton is concerned, this gang is entirely the credit given to him by Luo Anbai.

At this moment, Norton wished he could pull Roan into his investigation team on the spot.

"You're welcome."

Roan smiled and waved his hand. Because he helped Norton in the morning, Norton gave this clue to himself. After he investigated it clearly, he sent the criminal back to the other party.

On the surface, it seems that Roan is at a loss, but Norton is an organized crime investigation department, and he has dealt with gangsters all year round. No one knows what clues they have in their hands.

A gangster doesn't matter, but the Organized Crime Investigation Bureau has 80% of the gang information in the entire New York area, and these gangs radiate the entire New York area, plus undercover agents

It doesn't matter that the clues provided by Norton this time are useless in the process of solving the case. Next time, the clues provided by Norton may be used at a critical moment.

Multiple friends and multiple paths, Roan already has a good understanding of Norton's character and personal situation, so Roan is more optimistic about long-term investment.

Without delaying Norton's interview with reporters, Roan turned around and went to the Elken family.

Besides because Mona comforted Elken's daughter Serena in that direction, there is another reason.

That is, Roan really doesn't understand why Erken, an ordinary New Yorker who has worked diligently for half his life, dares to use gangster money to play with loans to support loans recently?

"Because I'm too eager to make money."

Hearing Roan's question, Erken, who lost four fingers, looked at his wife and daughter Selina who were almost sold by the gangsters, and the elderly parents who sat there trembling, with regret in his eyes. tears:

"Some time ago, when I was chatting with a middle-aged man who often washed clothes in my laundry, the other party told me that he had borrowed some money from a gangster a few streets away some time ago.

Later, the gangster was dealt with, and the money fell into his pocket forever, and no one asked him to pay back the money. "

Hearing this, Roan frowned, as if he understood something.

Sure enough, Erkin continued:

"When I learned that my daughter got a letter of recommendation to go to college, I was proud of her but also very anxious, because I couldn't afford the money to send her to college. I could only see her choose the one that would carry her for at least 20 years. Expensive college loans.

After thinking for a long time, I decided to imitate the middle-aged man who often came to my laundry shop to wash clothes, and went to the nearby hyena to borrow money. "

Roan frowned slightly, and said in doubt: "The premise of this kind of borrowing is that you can be sure that the gangster will be dealt with in the near future. The Hyena Gang was still very strong before today, you."

Erken whispered: "The laundry has been here for more than ten years, and I know a lot of people, besides NYPD, DEA, and even your FBI."

Hearing this, Luo An sighed silently in his heart.

Sure enough, in the United States, secrets are meant to be revealed, and this is indeed true.

In Erken's description, he learned from some people some time ago that a small gang nearby would be dealt with in the near future, so he tentatively borrowed dozens of dollars from that small gang

A few days later, the little gang was really dealt with, and no one really came to him afterwards to ask him to pay back the money.

Since then, Elken has paid more and more attention to the gangs in various urban areas of New York, and the amount of borrowed money has also begun to increase a little bit.

Erken also paid back the money several times during this period, but his repayment was just to borrow more money next time.

Backing to investigation team No. 5, Mona sat back on the chair and stretched her waist.

Roan sat on a chair, looked at the file folder of the serial bank robbery, and stroked his chin in thought.

"What's the matter, Roan?"

At this time, Mona was in a good mood. Seeing Roan's pensive expression, she immediately tilted her head and asked:

"Isn't this case solved? Although it's not a bank robbery, the laundry owner has nothing to do with the bank robbers."

"No, Mona."

Hearing this, Luo An narrowed his eyes slightly, shook his head slowly and said:

"There is a relationship between them."

Mona froze for a moment, tilted her head in confusion: "What do you mean?"

Roan didn't answer Mona's question directly, but put the folder of the bank robbery in front of her eyes, and asked in a low voice:

"Mona, do you think the six bank robberies were committed by the same gang?"

"Um?"

Mona was puzzled, looked at the folder carefully, and raised her head to ask:

"Isn't it?"

Before Robert stated that the owner of the laundry shop was responsible for the sixth bank robbery, but now it is confirmed that the other party is not a bank robber. At the time of the incident, Elken was borrowing money from the gang.

The black clothes in the laundry shop, after recalling it, Erken said that they were just the ordinary clothes of the owner of the restaurant next door. Roan and Mona just went to check the owner of the restaurant next door to the laundry shop and found that it was indeed the case.

In this case, why does Roan think that the six robberies were not committed by the same group?

Hearing Mona's question, Roan explained solemnly:

"It was the word 'imitation' mentioned by Erken just now, which reminded me."

Actually, Roan doesn't think that Bruosen has the ability to solve the case. Just from the situation of solving the case, Roan admires Bruosen very much.

It is a failure to be a human being.

But the other party has not solved the case until now. In this case, there are only two possibilities:

First: This gang of bank robbers has become so cunning that even an old FBI like Brosen can't find a trace of them.

Second: The direction of Brosen's investigation is wrong.

Comparing the two situations, Roan believed in the second more than the first.

If the real situation is really the second one, then carefully observe the several directions that Bruosen's process of solving the case is aimed at, the most important one of which is:

The six bank robberies were committed by the same group, and they were a group of veterans, or had served in the army, so the whole operation process was very capable and straightforward.

After listening to Roan's analysis, Mona covered her mouth and said in surprise:

"So, you're saying that the six bank robberies were not committed by the same gang, and that they didn't have any experience in the military?"

Chapter 88 takes over the case

"Just a possibility."

Roan rubbed his temples. The folder in his hand was just a general overview of the bank robbery, and there was no testimony from witnesses at the crime scene.

The documents that Verinisi gave him before were just the general process of Brosen's investigation of the bank robbery, and there were no details.

So Roan's judgment on this case is just a reasonable speculation.

"Okay, Roan."

Seeing Roan frowning and thinking, Mona turned around, and tapped the keyboard again with her fingers flying:

"We're not in charge of this case. Didn't Vernis tell you just now that she won't take over this case?"

Before the two returned to the Jacobs Federal Building, Roan had called Vernis and said that after their investigation, the owner of the laundry shop was not actually the robber in the bank robbery.

Vernis didn't say much after hearing the news. She first said that Roan had worked hard and asked him to go back to the Federal Building to rest, and then said that she was going to hold a meeting with the team leader soon, and she would elaborate on it after she finished the meeting. this matter.

The meeting Verinisi participated in was one of the group supervisors, Brosen, who arranged the meeting after failing to find the bank robber within the stipulated time.

"No, Mona."

Sitting on the chair, Roan leaned on his chin and meditated for a long time. He thought carefully about what had happened in the past few days, and then grinned:

"Verinis should take this case."

"What?"

Hearing this, Mona's expression changed immediately.

Because of the existence of William, she more or less knew about the punishment of Brosen after he failed to solve the case. In this case, Vernis took the case...

"It's okay, Mona."

Seeing the worried expression on Mona's face, Roan chuckled and comforted:

"We are different from Brosen."

Mona was stunned:

"What's the meaning?"

"Because our No. 5 investigation has never done anything to drag people behind their backs."

Roan pursed his lips, and the corners of his mouth slightly raised, thinking clearly about the matter.

It stands to reason that bank robberies are nothing more than bank robberies. There are many incidents in this simple and honest place in New York, and many of them have not been detected.

Under such circumstances, Bruosen was actually asked to set a time to solve the case this time, and I always felt that something was wrong.

However, as long as he thinks about the fact that Brosen secretly contacted the reporter behind his back when he cracked the last kidnapping case that escalated into a serial murder case, all this makes sense.

Their 14 investigation teams are the front-line operations department. The higher-ups are not blind, so how could they not see this kind of blatant dragging down of teammates.

The superior is very angry, and the consequences are serious.

Verinis once told Roan that Brosen joined another foundation, so it was inconvenient for the superior to expel Brosen directly.

But afterward, it was assigned to the newly established No. 14 investigation team, and Brosen was appointed as the team leader of that investigation team. This kind of thing is easy for the superiors to do.

The second step is to find a case with variable results afterwards, hand it over to the No. 14 investigation team, and then use words to force Brosen to set a time to solve the case...

Thinking of this, Roan laughed.

If Roan didn't solve the case at that time, and Brosen recommended himself to handle the case, then the superior had to bear with it in order to deal with the reporters outside. While punishing Vernis, he would also give some of the investigation team in her hands to Brosen. .

Then think of a way to deal with Brosen.

But Roan successfully solved the kidnapping case that escalated into a serial murder case... This is the knife that was really stuck in Brosen's chest and gave the superior a reason to do it.

It is also the real reason why Brosen hates Roan so much that he wants to die. Because without Roan, he has succeeded.

After thinking about things here, Luo Anming realized a lot.

If he guessed correctly, Brosen will be punished 100% during the meeting, because this has been decided before.

But after the case is handed over to someone else, the punishment after the failure to solve the case is probably far less severe than that of Brosen.

Sure enough, half an hour later, Roan's phone rang.

Roan pressed the answer button, Vernis' cold voice came from the other end of the phone:

"Come to me, immediately."

"Okay, sir."

The corners of Luo An's mouth curled up slightly, and he agreed decisively.

Although Verinis's voice didn't change much, Roan could still hear the hidden excitement in his tone.

"sit."

After knocking on the door and entering Verinisi's office, the other party still didn't talk nonsense. After letting Roan sit down, he raised Erlang's legs, leaned back, and said in a cold voice:

"Roan, I've taken on this serial bank robbery."

"Okay, sir."

Roan nodded with a smile, showing no other expressions.

This made Verinisi pause in what she wanted to say. After carefully looking at Luo An for a long time, Vernisi pursed her lips slightly:

"You have a quick brain."

Without waiting for Roan to speak, Vernis directly pulled out a folder from the desk and handed it to Roan:

"This is the handover report of the serial bank robbery case. The No. 14 investigation team will hand over the case with your No. 5 investigation team."

"OK."

Roan nodded, and after receiving the file, he didn't speak, just smiled and looked at Vernis quietly.

Seeing this, Verinisi didn't make any excuses, and said directly:

"At the meeting just now, the special agent chief scolded Brosen after learning that he hadn't solved the case within the stipulated time, and then announced on the spot that he would be transferred to the suburban branch of the FBI's New York branch."

Hearing the news, Luo An suddenly grinned.

Sure enough, the head of the special agent shot Brosen.

Seeing the expression on Roan's face, Vernis was also in a good mood, and continued with a hook at the corner of her mouth:

"After Brosen left the meeting room, the special agent supervisor asked our four team supervisors who could take over the case.

Of course, the time limit to solve the case is one week.

After the failure to solve the case, the punishment still exists, but it is only the punishment of our team leader, and has nothing to do with the grassroots detectives. "

Seeing the corner of Vernis' mouth raised, Roan knew that this so-called punishment must not be severe, otherwise the other party would not have such an attitude.

And the other party specifically stated that it had nothing to do with the grassroots agents...

Think about Brosen who was dispatched...

Luo An instantly realized that the superior had told him this on purpose.

"If the case is successfully solved within a week, the time to solve the case may even be shorter than a week."

Putting away Erlang's legs, Verinisi's uneven body leaned forward slightly, crossed her fingers on the table, licked her lips, and looked at Luo An with narrowed eyes:

"There is a reward."

Hearing Verinisi's short words this time, and seeing the expression on the other person's face, Roan was slightly startled, and then a smile appeared on his face.

According to the habit of the East in my previous life, the fewer words, the bigger the matter.

The Federation doesn't talk about this, but Vernis herself has always been straightforward and straightforward.

The other party's words are so short this time, so the reward after the event...

Reminiscent of Verinisi's superior, Roan stopped talking nonsense, and immediately nodded with a smile and agreed:

"Okay, sir, I will definitely do my best to investigate this case."

"Good."

Verinis nodded, she likes a talent like Roan who knows a thing or two.

Chapter 89 Investigation Direction

After returning to the office area of the No. 5 investigation team, Luo An decisively...

get off work.

Anyway, Verenes told him just now that the stipulated week starts tomorrow.

And during today's day, Roan and Ryder participated in the activities of suppressing gangs in the morning, went to the Organized Crime Investigation Section to participate in the interrogation of Robert at noon, and went to investigate the truth about the owner of the laundry in the afternoon.

After a busy day, there was no overtime pay for overtime work, so Luo An decisively chose to leave work.

But this time Roan's plan to go to Mona's apartment to have a meal fell through.

After thinking for a while, Roan was invited by Lacey to visit Ryder in the hospital with her.

After confirming that the other party is fine, she can be discharged from the hospital tomorrow and go to work the day after tomorrow, Lacey wanted to invite Roan to investigate the customs of New York, but Roan refused.

Because the decoration company responsible for decorating the apartment sent another design drawing to Luo An, hoping that Luo An would go and check it out.

"h"

The next day, sitting at his desk, Roan stretched and yawned a lot.

"Good morning! Agents!"

With a big belly, Augustus pushed open the door of the No. 5 investigation team office area, walked in with Mona, and then shouted loudly:

"A new day has begun! We have a new case in our hands! Everyone, cheer me up!"

A slap on the table in Lacey's station woke her up. Augustus looked at William and said loudly:

"William, tell me about this serial bank robbery!"

"Okay, sir."

William stood up with a lot of things on his desk, picked up the top folder, and read aloud to everyone:

“From the beginning of last month to last week of this month, several banks were robbed a total of 6 times in Queens, Bronx and Brooklyn in New York City...”

After briefly introducing the situation of the case to everyone, William began to distribute a lot of things on the desktop to everyone in the No. 5 investigation team:

"These are the surveillance video of the bank where the incident occurred, the statement of the bank staff and related witnesses, and the surveillance video of the area near the bank."

Looking at these items, Roman frowned. It seemed that they were all brought by William from Investigation Team No. 14.

"Good."

Augus nodded on the side, looking very satisfied, took a brief look at the testimony in it, and tilted his head to look at Roan:

"Roan, what do you think?"

Seeing all the agents of the No. 5 investigation team looking at him, Luo An sighed, picked up the whiteboard marker, and walked to the front of the office area.

"First of all, the first problem, we don't know where the robbers fled after robbing the bank."

Everyone in the No. 5 investigation team nodded. According to the data, the areas outside the banks were seriously lacking in monitoring, and the robbers disappeared completely after they escaped from the banks.

After only one of the robberies, the surveillance at the corner of a street east of the bank recorded the robbers fleeing.

"The second problem is the most important one."

Roan held the whiteboard marker and continued writing while saying:

"The moment the robbers entered the bank, they smeared the bank's camera with black spray paint.

Except for the third bank robbery because the bank had a hidden camera that recorded the whole process of the robbery, in the remaining five robberies, we can only restore the robbery at that time through the testimony of various eyewitnesses in the bank. The whole process of robbery. "

"Exactly."

All the agents nodded when they heard Roan's words. Augustus seemed to understand something, and asked in a concentrated voice:

"Any problem?"

"Exactly."

Roan pointed to the writing on the whiteboard and said:

"The time the robbers robbed was actually only two and a half minutes.

During this period, the robbers asked everyone inside the bank to lie on the ground without raising their heads.

So the testimony of these witnesses after the event, most of them only talked about the clothes of the robbers and the robbery process, but they had no real contact with the robbers. "

"No, Roan."

Hearing this, Lacey held up the folder in her hand and said:

"In the six robberies, except for the first and the sixth, the other four robbers took a female hostage in front of them and used them to threaten the bank security to let the security put down their guns, so the four women were actually contacted the robbers."

"You're right, Lacey."

Roan nodded, but then shook his head and said:

"But you did something wrong. In fact, it was the robbers who took the initiative to contact the four hostages, not the four hostages who took the initiative to contact the robbers."

Hearing Luo An's words, everyone present frowned, not understanding what the words meant.

Seeing this, Luo An explained in a deep voice:

"When the robber forcibly took the four female witnesses as hostages, the four female witnesses were all terrified, and their mental attention was not on the robber at all, but on the security guard of the opposite bank.

In addition, they turned their backs to the robber and did not see the appearance of the robber clearly. The robber just pointed a gun at their heads and did not touch them personally, so they only knew that the robber was a man with great strength. Through the eyes of the mask, it is known that the other party is white and other information.

But this information is not very useful for us to identify the robber.

Once we catch the robbers, this information could be used in court. "

"All right."

After listening to Roan's words, Lacey tilted her head and thought for a moment, but she didn't find any problems. After she nodded hesitantly, Mona looked up and asked:

"So, Roan, what do you mean by saying so much?"

"The meaning is very simple."

Roan stepped forward, put aside the testimony of all witnesses, and put aside all the surveillance videos, and then said in a deep voice:

"The investigation process of the No. 14 investigation team is mainly based on large-scale investigations, such as the investigation of the robber's tattoos, the investigation of the monitoring near the bank, and the questioning of relevant witnesses.

The surveillance video of the bank, except for the hidden camera video of the third robbery, the surveillance videos of the other five times were not carefully analyzed because of their average quality and short duration.

We need to do the opposite this time, and focus more on these five surveillance videos, witnesses' testimonies, etc., which can be put behind. "

"What?"

Hearing Roan's words, Mona frowned suddenly, pointed at the computer screen and said:

"You also know that the quality of the surveillance video of these banks is mediocre, and the whole process from the time the robber entered the bank to the moment the robber smeared the camera with black paint took less than ten seconds. With just such a few video clips, how could we catch the bank robber with them? bandit?"

Augus, Lacey, William and others also frowned at Roan, and they didn't understand why Roan did this.

"Two reasons."

Roan did not talk nonsense, and explained with a serious face:

"First, large-scale investigations of such things require a lot of manpower and material resources.

Bruosen's investigation team on the 14th was not many people. The reason why they were able to launch a large-scale investigation in a short period of time was mainly because Bruosen mobilized his many years of contacts in order to solve this case regardless of the cost.

Our No. 5 investigation team has only ten people, and while it is impossible to launch a large-scale investigation, no one has such contacts. "

Augus frowned, his contacts were all in the Criminal Justice Department, and he really couldn't help this case.

After listening to Roan's words, Mona and Lacey looked at each other, tilted their heads and asked:

"What about the second?"

Chapter 90 Before entering the bank

Hearing Lacey and Mona's question, Roan coughed lightly and continued to explain:

"Second point, in the surveillance video, we can see the most realistic physical performance and behavior of the bank robbers, rather than the secondary narrative of the witnesses at the scene.

This is the most relevant and authentic information we can really rely on when looking for robbers.

Of course, we are only temporarily focusing all our energy on the surveillance video to see if we can find any clues that the No. 14 investigation team has overlooked.

We will not give up other evidence, and we will check them one by one later, it is just a matter of the order of checking. "

"OK."

After listening to Roan's words, everyone nodded in understanding. Augustus didn't talk nonsense, and just waved his hand, telling everyone to return to their workstations and start checking the surveillance video.

There were a total of 6 bank robberies. Two robbers dressed in black, from opening the bank door to entering the bank lobby, and then one of them took out black paint and smeared the surveillance video. The whole process took less than ten seconds, even the fastest time. , only seven seconds.

Seeing this scene, Mona's eyelids trembled, and the rest of the people also had complicated expressions, and they all turned their eyes to Roan.

The eyes of everyone did not affect Roan in any way. After carefully checking the surveillance video of the robbers entering the bank in the six cases, he was silent for a while, and tilted his head to look at Mona:

"Mona, can you put these six videos on the same screen and let them play together?"

"It's possible, but if you do that, the video will be completely unreadable."

Mona shook her head. It was 2005, and the computer screen was only that big. Six videos were put together, and the portraits on the screen were very crowded.

Not only that, but the quality of the surveillance video of these banks is also very average, far from the clarity of the later generations. If you zoom in a little bit, the characters in the video will be blurred.

"All right."

Roan nodded, did not continue to dwell on this problem, and then began to slow down the video on the computer.

At the same time, Roan also took out a notebook in his hand, and played the video while writing and drawing.

Seeing that Roan was addicted to the surveillance video, Augustus patted his belly and picked up a file folder.

"Lacey."

Augus briefly flipped through it for a while, then turned to look at Lacey, and asked:

"In addition to the hostages held by the robbers, the bank staff who were frightened by the information in the transparent folder also had close contact with the robbers. Did they mention the robber's face or pupil color?"

Hearing what Augustus said, Lacey took out the confession folder and flipped through it. After a careful look, she shook her head and said:

"Several bank employees did mention the color of the robber's pupils, but they can be any color, brown, black, dark brown, they all mentioned it.

As for the face, several bank employees said that through the two holes in the eyes of the black hood, they saw that the other person's skin was white. "

"It seems that the threat of Mr. White Robber frightened these ladies."

Augus shook his head when he heard Lacey's words, but didn't say much.

Those bank staff are ordinary people without professional training, and it is normal for them to have memory confusion after being frightened.

Especially the robbers threatened their families.

"Um?"

Thinking of the robber's transparent file bag containing information about the family members of the bank staff, Augustus suddenly thought of something, tilted his head and asked:

"Have you investigated the robbers, how did you know the identity information of the family members of the bank staff?"

"The No. 14 investigation team has already checked."

Hearing what Augustus said, William next to him pulled out a folder and spread his hands:

"When the robbers threatened the bank staff, the bank staff's family information provided was simply name, contact information, and home address.

If you want to check this information, you can get it from many sources, such as hospitals, post offices, schools, restaurants, etc. The scope is too wide, and we have no way of knowing where the robbers got this information. "

The United States has always boasted that it attaches importance to citizens' privacy and protects citizens' private information.

But in fact, the United States is one of the countries that leak personal information most seriously in the world.

"OK."

After listening to William's words, Augustus frowned, patted his stomach, and found the direction he could think of. The investigation team on the 14th seemed to have thought of it and conducted investigations, but in the end they didn't find any results.

In the final analysis, there are too few surveillance videos in the peripheral areas of the bank. As long as the robbers leave the bank, they will disappear completely.

"I don't know if this is a clue."

After a long time, Mona suddenly made a sound, which attracted the attention of the three:

"I found six robberies where bank robbers pushed open the door of the bank, some by pushing it in, some by pulling it out."

Hearing what Mona said, Augustus and William glanced at each other, and both saw the doubt in each other's eyes, but Lacey nodded:

"You want to say that in one, two or four cases, the robbers pushed the bank door inwards, and in three, five or six cases, the robbers opened the bank door outwards, right?"

"Exactly."

Mona nodded, then tilted her head and explained to August William and others:

"Roan had previously speculated that these six bank robberies were not committed by the same group of robbers."

Seeing the doubts in the eyes of Augustus and Lacey, Mona briefly introduced to them what they went to investigate the laundry owner.

"this..."

After listening to Mona's introduction, William was shocked by Erken's courage, while Augustus thoughtfully, tilted his head and said:

"If the six cases were really not committed by the same gang, it would explain why Brosen failed to solve the case."

If there is a deviation in the direction, no matter how hard you try, you will not get the answer you want.

Augus' words reached Lacey's ears, she frowned, and called up the surveillance video in the computer with a serious expression:

"In the six cases, the way the robbers opened the door of the bank was different each time. Some pulled back and some pushed forward. Judging from this situation alone, one, two, four cases were a group of robbers, three, five, six The case was a group of robbers.

But if you focus on the actions of the robbers spraying the camera with spray paint, 146 cases are left first and then right, and 235 cases are right first and then left..."

Ignore the dress and other things, just from the perspective of the robber's actions, in the six cases, although the robbers' overall crime methods are the same, there are many differences in the details of the actions, and each time there will be a new arrangement.

A lot of actions and a lot of permutations and combinations, it is impossible to deduce which group is responsible for which case.

"this..."

After listening to Lacey's words, Mona and Augustus frowned.

Beside the few people, Roan didn't say a word, but the notebook in his hand had already written several pages full of text.

The video screen on the computer was still playing slowly. Suddenly, Luo An's pupils shrank, and suddenly he forcefully drew a circle on one of the lines of text on the notebook page.

Mona on the side saw Roan's movements, and hurriedly asked:

"Roan, did you find anything?"

"I found a few small details."

Seeing that several people were looking at him, Roan didn't hide anything. While adjusting the video in the computer to the corresponding position, he said:

"Watch carefully"