

Chapter 16

"Enough, you're just as pompous as you ever were but before you talk about our flaws then you should take a look at yourself and look where you ended up with all your knowledge. It doesn't seem like you ever learned about what happened to you in the past." Sil pointed out the fact, hoping that her words would tarnish Eva's confidence.

"It's very concerning when you couldn't spare your sister from your fury and bullied Christine when she was only trying to be nice to you." Reah remarked.

Eva scoffed with a raised eyebrow, "I understand if you're trying to protect your friend. However, you should know that Christine would have been kneeling on the cold hard floor on her two knees and be in a pathetic state already if I was truly bullying her. You should be aware that isn't an understatement since I'm very famous for that and you have also experienced it for yourself in the past." Eva revealed, locking gaze up to Reah's face with an intimidating look. Reah gulped in fear, unable to say anything to counter Eva's words.

"I know there is still some sort of animosity between us but I don't think you should drag both Reah and Sil into it, Sister." Christine proposed in order to make her image the saint and Eva the villain.

"Indeed, you're right about that. It was why I didn't want to get into an argument with you in the first place." Eva remarked, defiantly disagreeing to be branded as the villain in this conversation.

Damien tilted his head to look at the Manager with his eyebrows burrowing into a deep frown. "Mr. Manager, I expect you'd take proper care of this situation." He uttered as he pointed at both Sil and Reah.

"I'm sorry for disappointing you Mr. Cross, it's just that these ladies are regular customers here in the boutique." The Manager quickly explained.

"People as troublesome as these women who keep causing trouble in the boutique shouldn't be shopping here for the inconveniences they are causing to the other customers." He remarked coldly.

The Manager gulped when he heard Damien's words, because he knew what Damien meant and even though he didn't want to he had to do it because Damien was right next to him.

"Ladies," he called out gesturing to both Reah and Sil, since they were the major people who were causing a lot of trouble in the boutique.

"As a violation to our boutique policy and causing our other customers discomfort, you are banned from shopping in our boutique in the future from this moment onward. I would suggest that you comply with our boutique's simple request of ours as it would be considered as trespassing if you ever step foot in this place again." The manager said, giving both Reah and Sil a warning in case they tried to refuse him. 1

"W-what? You can't be serious, I mean you...you can't do that. We are regular customers here in this boutique. Are you going to chase us out because of them!?" Reah yelled in anger, refusing to comply with what she just heard.

"Miss, there is nothing to change at this point. Your useless tantrum is disrupting my business so I'd advise you to take your leave now to avoid further embarrassment." The manager said without bothering to hold back. He couldn't afford to allow their silly tantrum to ruin his business not when Damien was next to him, plus Nathalia was someone he would want to offend either too.

"W-what is the meaning of this? How could you treat us like this?" Sil complained in uneasiness as the entire situation wasn't turning out the way she had expected.

"I would not give you two ladies any warning if you don't take your leave now." Damien suddenly spoke. His voice was extremely cold as he had a dark and intimidating facial expression on his face.

Sil swallowed the rest of her words back when she saw the dangerous and intimidating aura as he glared at her. Even though she wanted to go against the fact that she would be banned from the boutique because of the humiliation it would bring to her if the news was heard that she got kicked out of a boutique because of Evangeline. However, she couldn't afford to handle the consequences if she refused Damien's words. Everyone knows how ruthless and cruel this man was, he even had the infamous name among the society as the 'Devil' no one wants to get on his bad side and this was what Sil wanted to avoid too.

It was because they wanted to embarrass Eva in public, but the entire situation shifted on both she and Reah and they were being kicked out of the boutique. Sil gritted her teeth in anger.

"Manager, I don't want to see them step foot here again." Damien stated.

"Ha, of course Mr. Cross. Please take your leave now." The manager demanded as he pointed his finger towards the exit.

"I'll make sure that you pay for this humiliation you've caused me Evangeline and wipe that victorious grin off your face." Sil clenched her jaw and swore with determination before she walked away being pulled from the scene by Reah who was extremely anxious to get out of the place.

Eva scoffed in mockery because she considered Sil's words as empty threats that could possibly mean nothing and cause any harm. 1

"Bye bye, it was extremely nice seeing you again." Eva remarked in order to rile Sil and Reah up, she waved at them with a pleasant smile.

Everyone present could tell that Eva was indeed mocking the two ladies and she wasn't as sincere as she made it sound, but they couldn't voice out their thoughts, not when the dangerous Damien Cross was present.

Witnessing what just happened, Christine clenched her fist tightly as her plan to embarrass Eva was ruined. It wasn't like she expected both Sil and Reah to easily accomplish the task since Eva wasn't an easy person to begin with but she was still slightly disappointed.

"Sister, I'm sorry for what happened just now. I didn't know both Sil and Reah would say such things to you, they were just trying to protect me otherwise I would have stopped them earlier." Christine revealed with a guilty look on her face.

"It's okay, after all they both each have their grudges against me in the past." Eva waved her hand and replied casually.

"I hope to spend more time with you but I have to go. I didn't tell Mark that I would stay long in the boutique." Christine said purposely mentioning Mark's name in order to rub it on Eva.

Eva had a blank facial expression when she heard Christine, knowing full well what she was trying to do. "It's okay."

"Let's go, Trish." Not getting any reaction from Eva, Christine pursed her lips together before turning to take her leave. Eva turned her gaze towards Trish when she heard Christine called her name.

Trish had been watching the whole scenario from the sidelines and saw how both Sil and Reah got kicked out of the boutique. When she noticed Eva's gaze on her she turned and glanced at her, although she didn't have any grudges against it. In fact Eva could be considered as her savior that was why she chose not to say anything to her.

Trish gave Eva a small smile and a nod to which Eva returned with a slight nod before she walked away to follow Christine.

"That Sly bitch!!" Nathalia muttered as she watched Christine walk out of the boutique.
