

Fire 1515

Chapter 1515

Early morning, the alley was quiet.

Kisa followed the man in silence. She quickened her pace, hoping to walk shoulder-to-shoulder with Gilbert, but he matched her speed.

'Well, he hates me to the core now, so it's a miracle he even took me out. So why would he bother with me?' she thought to herself.

After passing through three small alleys, they emerged onto an old street with food vendors on either side.

Gilbert wordlessly bought a few sandwiches and two cups of orange juice.

When the sandwiches and orange juice were handed over, Kisa was overjoyed and smiled at him, "Thank you."

Gilbert avoided eye contact and replied in a monotone voice, "I'm just worried about my child going hungry."

He then walked toward a small pharmacy not far away.

Kisa pursed her lips and smiled, quickly following him.
