Chapter 42

Wanda has seemingly decided that the only way to get me to actually relent and stay in bed until Stark and his team can figure out what is going on with me, is to lay down on the bed next to me. Maybe she thinks that by showing a general example, I'll follow. I do appreciate the thought behind it, but the two of us staring at an already not overly comfortable hospital bed, darn nothing to improve how comfortable it is going to be. Especially since I'm not even tired. Not after last night before. My night is mostly good up until I'm against the ceiling on the side of the bed but I don't move a muscle, in fear of Wanda realizing that I'm not comfortable at all and that she'll get up, if it means her staying, I'll no-no. Wait is she…

Wanda has interlaced our fingers, having joked that she'd physically hold me down should I attempt to run for it. I don't doubt that she is very aware of my body not being able to run one anywhere at the moment and that I have no intention of doing that, not as long as I'm with her. Admittedly, I'm not overly comfortable with how close I am to it. Even at some point, still extremely tired from having gotten so little back in time, and my team needs a place from this mystery to come up with reasons as to why I failed and this entire mission has gone so wrong. And how I'm going to get on both back to the current timeline and my own.

My dreams must be bleeding into Wanda's somehow, or rather Wanda's not-so-subconscious is in my dreams as I keep seeing images I do not recognize, images of an old, dark room which fills me with a sense of longing as a dark-haired woman is standing with her back to the kitchen, a small I don't recognize but makes Wanda happy:

"I liked why you think more."

"Shh. Silence."

"Only when I tell you give that one?"

"Thanks, I don't want to do anything not without the results."

"Right. And what's wrong with her?"

"I'm not sure."

"Do you think she's faking it?"

"Why would she do that?"

"I'm just trying to figure out."

"Well so am I!"

"Children, play nice."

"Tony, I'm don't want to be the pessimistic one here, but how do we know they can be…trusted?"

"Look at how cute they are!"

I make no sign of being woken up by the hushed voices I can hear. I instantly recognize the voices as those belonging to Steve, Bruce, and Stark. My heart pounds slightly faster at the realization, but I try to remain calm, reminding myself that technically, we haven't done anything wrong. Not yet. Not that I'm aware of. Not that I'm saying I can't figure out in how it is that typically, they should have been on the same continuum back in time, but they didn't. Why…

Wanda skins slightly next to me, and the tris start not so subtly hushing each other.

"Which one is the witch?" I hear Steve whisper to the others.

"Stinger-sizes over there."

"Please." Natasha hu-s and Stark chuckles quietly.

"Sorry, you can be Stinger Spice if you want."

"What?"

"What's with the face, then?"

"I don't understand," Natasha mutters. "How come we haven't heard of any witches running around before?"

"She didn't tell me anything."

"And you brought them here?"

"Wow, I took a trip Witch's and they knew, or know, me" Said we were friends Personally, I doubt that."

"Did Jarvis manage to run anything on them?"

"That one is a student at Columbia. The other one, no idea."

"And she's another key powers?"

"He did, Bell, tried."

"What does that mean?"

"There's not much to analyze. It seems they are internal, similar to energy similar to a kind of nuclear process, but there's no molecular trace."

"How did she get them?"

"I don't know." Stark admits, and I can hear the doubt in his voice.

"It can't be natural, can it?" Steve whispers.

"I honestly don't know."

"What do they want?" Natasha wonders and so one replies. "Alright, well, let's find out."

"Natasha, wait." Steve begins, but too late.

"Alright, you two. Up. Wake up. Let's go." Natasha loudly orders and I open my eyes, figuring it's time to stop pretending to be asleep.

Wanda jolts next to me, clearly having been sleeping rather deeply. She looks to me, concern and confusion in her eyes as I sit up and look to Sand she sits up, seeing Natasha standing by the foot of the bed, with Steve and Stark slightly behind her. Wanda stares at the people in front of her a little too long for it to go unnoticed.

"Do I…know Wanda Maximoff?"

Natasha cocks her head slightly, clearly noting Wanda's reaction to seeing her.

"Who are you?" She asks Wanda, all business, no trace of emotion in her voice.

Wanda hesitates slightly, clearly overwhelmed by seeing Natasha again, and being spoken to in such a cold tone. I wiggle up slightly higher on the pillows behind me and Natasha's eyes flit to me when she goes back to stare Wanda down. Wow, okay, she clearly doesn't like me as a threat.

Well, you are hooked into an Ultron's scream's voice sounds in my head and I…

"I asked you a question." Natasha speaks again and Wanda bristles slightly next to me. I don't think Wanda would ever be threatened by anyone, and yet here we are.

"I'm Wanda." She says in a little voice, unlike anything I've heard from her before.

I shoot her a questioning thought which goes unanswered. Wanda just fiddles with the rings on her hand, as if she's a small child being berated by her mother. What the…

"And why are you here, Wanda?" Natasha continues, completely ignoring Wanda's hesitancy.

"I, we-" Wanda stutters and I feel like I have to step in, it's like watching a trainwreck.

"It's my fault. We weren't meant to come back here" I explain, my voice cracks, hoping no one does it.

Natasha decides at one, now with slightly more interest, confusion flashing in her eyes. Wanda's eyes dart to me, clearly thinking I'm making matters worse, but my FBI training is kicking in somewhat. Despite feeling groggy, and so I came back. I see an accidental entry expression slip past Natasha's facade, her right eyebrow quirking up and a millimeter or so wrinkle before she slips on her unreadable mask again.

"Alright, Tony tells me you believe you're from the future. How do you travel through time?" She questions me.

"I found a gem which accidentally activated, or something." I feel Wanda's eyes scan me and I know exactly what she's thinking.

Natasha looks confused and I don't blame her. I'm sure what I'm saying is weird. I shrug, not knowing how to help her or myself in this new idea that we're in.

"Nothing's showed up in your blood work." Stark now walks up to stand next to Natasha.

"And, I'm not a physicist. Or doctor, I guess," I shrug again, feeling slightly more tired again, the room swaying slightly as if I am on a boat.

"Um. Are those your powers? Time jumping?" Steve now asks, his voice a lot kinder than Natasha's.

"I guess so." I say, feeling odd to be viewed as someone with powers/ don't like it.

"Right." Steve frowns, clearly confused, and I wish I could clear it up for him, but I can't.

"And you?" Natasha looks back to Wanda. "Stark said you peaked all less… mmmmmm, is that what you called them?"

"I a bit barbaric, they're a bit more refined than Jooooooojitsh-um." Stark interjects helpfully, then he looks at Wanda and I, and I can't swear they almost look scared. I don't blame them, but it's still weird seeing the Avengers look so hesitant.

"So? What do you do?" Natasha steers the conversation back onto Wanda, who gets uncomfortable under the attention again.

"I, uh…" Wanda looks at me quickly, as if I'm supposed to be able to describe her powers better than she can. "I can manipulate reality in my mind."

That hatred she settles on? I don't fail to note the completely omits the part about being able to read and control minds…I don't blame her. The tris looks unconvinced, but Stark seems to be the most slightly out of what "I see." Wanda lies and I have to keep myself from rolling my eyes at her bad lying.

"Right." Natasha squints at her. "And you know Stark?"

"I know all of you." Wanda's voice breaks slightly and I sneak look at her to make sure she's okay. These people were her family for so long, and all three of them are gone. She must feel so overwhelmed at the moment.

"How do we know you?" Steve asks Wanda, crossing his arms one his chest and I try not to stare. Wanda glances at me, and I nod, there's a tiny…little knowing smile playing on her lips.

"From work." I say and everyone looks slightly annoyed, except Natasha.

"Right." Natasha looks unimpressed. "You think you're funny. I don't." "Oh, wow, okay…" I say, taken aback. "Slightly rude, but okay."

"Yeah, well, I don't think it amusing when two strangers show up and insist they know us when we've never even heard of them before."

"I'm not a stranger, Natasha. I couldn't handle, of course…"

"Is that all you can do?" Natasha doesn't take her eyes is Wanda, and I can't exactly tell she knows there's more to Wanda that she's letting on.

"If you," Wanda bites