The First Heir – Chapter 1649

Wynn raised her eyebrows, looked at Philip, and said with a faint smile, “No. If you want to tell me, I’m willing to listen. If you don’t want to, then don’t. I’ll wait for the day you’re willing to tell me.”

Philip was taken aback. He looked at Wynn and watched as she played with Mila with her bulging stomach. A strong feeling suddenly surged in his heart.

He walked over, hugged Wynn from behind, and leaned on her shoulder while saying, “Wynnie, one day you’ll know that your husband is not a wastrel. On that day, you’ll be the happiest woman in the world. This is what I promise you.”

Wynn smiled, her small fair hand grasping Philip’s big hand. She said tenderly, “I know. All along, I’ve known in my heart you’re not what they say. I’ve been waiting, hoping that this day will come soon. In fact, even if you’re really worthless, you’re still my husband and Mila’s father, do you understand?”

Philip nodded and said, “I understand.”

After being intimate for a while, Philip took Wynn and Hazel out for dinner at a high-end restaurant nearby.

That night, Hazel went back.

Philip did not ask her to stay since he knew that she was busy with a lot of family affairs at home. It was already after eight when they returned to the hotel suite.

As soon as they entered the door, they saw Charles and Martha waiting in the room.

“Philip, where did you take my daughter again? Don’t you know that she’s very weak now? Why are you still running around with her? If something happens, can you afford the consequences?” Martha glared at Philip fiercely and cursed as soon as she saw him.

This damned Philip! Wynn had just returned from the hospital and he took her out again. Did he want her to die?

After saying that, she quickly yelled at Charles to help Wynn take a seat.

Philip was helpless and did not want to say anything.

However, Wynn said, “Mom, don’t talk to Philip like that. I’m fine. You guys are just making a fuss out of it.”

“What’s fine about you? You’re now just two months away from your due date and still carelessly running around with him. If anything goes wrong, you’ll regret it then.”

Martha was fierce, but it was also for Wynn’s sake.

Therefore, Philip chose to be silent.

In the past, she had tried all ways and means to make him and Wynn divorce.

Seeing that Philip was not speaking, Martha grumbled a bit more before asking, "Philip, let me ask you, when will you let me and your father return to Riverdale? What do you intend to do by leaving us here? Are we under house arrest?"

When Charles heard this, he also asked, "Yes, Philip, your mother and I should return by now. After all, we still need to handle many things at home."

Philip thought about it and said, "Let's wait a few more days. I'll take care of the affairs in Riverdale first."

"A few more days? Why is it taking so long to deal with the matter in Riverdale? Are you thinking of putting me and your father under house arrest and then taking Beacon for yourself?"

Martha shouted sharply in annoyance.

What was Philip's intention in keeping them in Uppercreek?

Hearing Martha's words, Wynn looked dissatisfied and said, "Mom, what nonsense are you talking about? How can you think of Philip that way? He has been helping me to take care of the company's affairs."

"What do you mean he's been helping you? I think he doesn't have any good intentions. He's been with us for so many years but never had any major achievements. He only wants to take advantage of us. Wynn, don't be fooled by him. Do you think he's sincere just because he has a little money and treats you well? I think he's just trying to scam you. Then, he'll take Beacon for himself, cash it out, and run away."

Martha cursed fiercely and felt very upset.
