The First Heir – Chapter 1650

Charles tried to interrupt several times but was stopped by Martha's glare.

"Mom, that's enough! What nonsense are you talking about?"

Wynn got anxious. She glared at Martha before looking at Philip and said, "Philip, I'm sorry. My mother..."

Philip smiled, shook his head helplessly, and said, "It's fine..."

After that, he said to Wynn, "I think it's better to let them know about some things."

Wynn was startled and fell silent. Her expression seemed torn with hesitation.

Charles and Martha panicked when they heard their words and saw their actions.

"Wynn, what is it? What are you hiding from me? Tell us!" Martha was anxious. She could tell that Wynn was keeping something from her.

After thinking for a long time, Wynn said with hesitation, "Mom, don't get too angry when I tell you."

"Okay, fine, just tell me quickly." Martha was flustered now.

Wynn looked at her father and said, "Dad, Uncle Martin and Uncle Bernard embezzled Beacon and even charged me with a false accusation of misappropriating the company's funds. A few days ago, Lynn brought a lawyer with her and wanted me to hand over all the shares. Philip is the one who helped me resolve the issue. Moreover, my two uncles also occupied First Palace by force. You can't return to Riverdale anymore. Philip went back a few days ago to deal with the company's affairs."

Boom!

Hearing this, both Charles and Martha's heads buzzed as if an explosion just occurred.

His second and third brothers actually did such a thing?

"Wynn, are you telling the truth?" Martha was extremely anxious.

"Was the company gone? Was the villa gone?"

"That damned Martin Johnston and Bernard Johnston! How dare they take advantage when others were down?"

Charles clutched his chest angrily, his breathing growing heavy as he fell on the sofa.

"Dad, what's wrong with you?" Wynn was anxious.

Philip quickly stepped forward and patted Charles on his back, doing deep breathing exercises with him. It took a long time for Charles to calm down. He drank a big glass of water in one gulp before clenching his fists tightly while cursing, "I can't believe there are two thieves in the household! I didn't treat them badly but they actually did such a beastly thing to me!"

Martha was angry and cursed, "Charles, just look at this! The company is gone and the house is gone. I could tell that your two brothers weren't good people. I didn't expect them to strike out at us like this!"

Seeing his angry in-laws, Philip said lightly. "Dad, Mom, don't worry about this. I've almost taken care of the matter. I just need to tie up some loose ends. In a few days, I'll get someone to send you back."

Hearing this, Charles excitedly took Philip's hands and said, "Really? Have you really solved it? What about Martin and Bernard?"

Philip's face went cold as he said, "Dad, I've already taught them a lesson. If they refuse to repent, I won't be kind to them. I'm here today to give you a heads-up about this. After all, they're your brothers and Wynn's uncles. If the two of them did anything unfavorable to any of you, I won't go soft on them."
