

The First Heir novel Chapter 1703

Hearing this, Levi shuddered and felt utterly creeped out.

Was that not the same as using the life of the next of kin to open this door?

Connor looked at Levi who was trembling slightly and asked, "Are you afraid?"

"N-No, I just think that this door sounds a little evil," Levi said.

Connor laughed. "You can understand it that way, but it's not what you think."

"Grandpa, the world behind this door, what exactly is it like? Is it the same as those weird and mysterious places in TV shows?" Levi could not help his curiosity and asked.

Connor shook his head and said, "No. If you really want me to describe it, you can understand it as a secret realm, a treasure trove left to us by ancient beings. This treasure trove requires the corresponding key to open it. For example, those lost civilizations that disappeared in ancient times were excavated and researched. Then, the corresponding documents were generated and constituted the development of organizations, departments, and a group of forces just to guard over it. This was how the door was created."

Levi nodded, still a little baffled.

According to his grandfather's explanation, the door was a place with a civilization that ordinary people could not access. It was excavated through human means, which later formed a unique group of forces. They were constantly recruiting talents to expand their power.

"For an existence like this, won't it have an impact on the entire world's structure?" Levi pondered briefly and asked.

Connor smiled, got up, stood in front of the large French window. He said, "The current world structure is nothing more than the rules set by the strong. When you enter the door one day and become one of the strong, you'll understand a lot more things. The door is not something you can touch now. There are too many powerful people inside, too many existences and mighty elites beyond your imagination. Generally, they don't come out because the presence of these people can pose a threat to the world. Therefore, there's an agreement made between the doors and the countries. Once every few years, they'll come out and select some talents to study behind the doors, thus promoting the development of world civilization. Of course, the countries will also need to pay a certain price."

Levi was dumbfounded and had some new perceptions about the door.

Following that, Connor suddenly turned around and asked, "Are the test results for Wynn out yet?"

Only then did Levi remember this matter. He quickly took out a report and said, "The results are out. According to the data, Wynn's XD factor in her blood content has reached a concentration of 30%, exceeding the 10% requirement. Grandpa, the child in her stomach is qualified to enter the door!"

Connor took the report and read it carefully several times. With an uncontrollable smile on the corner of his mouth, he said, "Indeed. Hahaha, my branch family is about to rise! Levi, this matter must be kept secret. When we get out, immediately have someone put her under house arrest. She must be closely guarded until she gives birth to the child!"

"I understand, Grandpa. But do we really want to do this?" Levi asked with faint worry in his eyes.

After all, doing so would completely offend the main Clarke family, as well as Philip and Roger.

Connor's eyes were ruthless as he said coldly, "Those who achieve great things won't be concerned about trivial matters, let alone betrayal and kinship! You have to remember that you are the young master of the branch Clarke family and you represent the branch family! All our hopes rest on your shoulders!"

Levi trembled inwardly, clenched his fist tightly, and nodded as he said, "I understand, Grandpa."

Connor looked at Levi and thought inwardly that his grandson seemed to not be ruthless enough. He had to hone his temperament.

At that moment, the door of the suite was pushed open and Philip swaggered in with a chilly face. He stared at them and said gravely, "What are you going to do to Wynn?"
