

The First Heir – Chapter 1753

‘Force their way through?’

Hearing this, Angus turned his head, slapped the underling on the back of his head, and yelled, “Do you want to die? Force our way through? Open your eyes and see what kind of people they are!”

The underling rubbed the back of his head and said aggrievedly, “If we don’t force our way through, are we just going to sit here and wait?”

“That’s right, Angus. What should we do next? Even the only rural road out of Uppercreek has been blocked.”

“Angus, you have to think of something. You know a lot of people. There must be a way!”

At this time, the underlings could not hold back any longer and kept talking. They were afraid that Angus would abandon them.

Just when Angus was hesitating, two black SUVs with alarms pulled up at the intersection. Five or six heavily armed people came down from the car!

They were very heavily armed!

Seeing this scene, Angus was completely dumbfounded!

“Even the combatants are here?! What the hell is going on?” Angus cursed and added, “Drive and get out of here. Let’s head back first before we make other plans.”

The driver hummed in assent and the rest also kept their mouths shut. However, their faces carried a look of panic and trepidation. Who would have thought that things would progress to this point?

They had just knocked out the nanny of the other party yet this Philip Clarke actually kicked up such a big fuss!

Did he not only know Heath?

What means could Heath have?

Even Victor Bell... Could he do this?

Angus kept thinking about it but could not figure it out. His underlings were sullen and kept quiet. Since they had chosen to follow Angus, they could only follow him to the end now.

It seemed that the situation had gotten very serious. They did not want to be captured just like this. Once captured, they would definitely be miserable. Soon, they returned to the city and stopped at the car wash in the western suburbs of Uppercreek.

The neighborhood was sparsely populated and belonged to a development zone. A large area around it had been demolished, so there were very few people here.

Angus chose this place because he had an old house here that could be used as a temporary hideout. After a while when everything had died down, he could then get ready to leave Uppercreek.

Since they had to hide for a while, they had to buy some daily necessities. Hence, he and his men wore masks before sneaking into a nearby convenience store. He wanted to buy some food, drinks, and toiletries.

However, when they were checking out, they saw that the owner was intently watching TV. What was playing on the TV was none other than a reward notice!

On the screen, the female anchor was saying seriously, “Half an hour ago, a vicious assault occurred in a hotel in Uppercreek. After an investigation by relevant authorities and confirmation from the surveillance on site, the following people are suspected of committing major crimes.”

While saying that, the pictures of several people appeared in the upper-right corner. It was Hector, Angus, and the rest.

Immediately after, the female anchor continued, “As the perpetrators are now at large, Uppercreek will offer up to five million in cash rewards to individuals or units who provide clues or information that lead to the successful arrest of the suspects!”

Seeing this, Angus and the others were all dumbfounded! They were on TV but it was a wanted notice! Moreover, the reward amounted to five million dollars! Angus’ right eyelid jumped. He never thought that he would one day be so valuable!

Furthermore, he seemed quite photogenic.

At this moment, an underling next to him pointed at the TV and exclaimed, “Angus, look at the TV! We’re on TV!”