

The First Heir – Chapter 1759

All the medical staff of Uppercreek Municipal Hospital was shocked by this scene!

Terrifying!

The people in front of them were all iconic figures in the domestic medical field. At this moment, they were so respectfully bowing to the young man in front of them.

For such a lineup of medical personnel, it would be almost impossible to find another group of people in the country who could be compared to them. Moreover, there was still a hovering helicopter above their heads!

For a while, all the medical staff looked at Philip with awe and suspicion. The identity of the young man in front of them was definitely something special. He obviously looked so ordinary, though. How could he have the means to gather such a team of medical experts in such a short time?

Philip left the hospital and appeared in Victor Bell's office.

Victor had stayed up all night as he dared not be negligent at all. Due to Anne's accident, he dared not be careless and had sent all his men to search the entire city before they eventually caught Angus and his gang.

Moreover, he was still troubled over Hector Dunley's matter.

After all, the other party had already escaped from Uppercreek and was heading straight for Charbury. If he returned to Charbury, he would be beyond Victor's reach.

The waters in Charbury ran too deep for Victor to intervene. Although Victor was one of the three underground lords of Uppercreek, he was no one in Charbury.

Philip stood in front of the large French window with his hands behind him. He was looking at the night view outside that was filled with neon nights.

Victor stood behind Philip and said in a solemn tone, “Young Master Clarke, Charbury is a complicated place and the Dunley family is an old family in Charbury. Their power there is second to none. I’m afraid that it’ll be difficult to capture Hector Dunley with our current means.”

Philip frowned. The window reflected his unpleasant expression as he asked, “How so?”

Victor immediately explained, “Charbury is different from Uppercreek. Charbury is a large district with eight sub-districts. Moreover, Charbury is a large ancient town with a thousand-year history. There are many powerful families and localities there. Even now, the families in Charbury are related to each other. Since ancient times, the Dunley family has been a big family in Charbury with the largest number of people and the strongest clan backing. Although Hector belongs to a branch family, he’s still a descendant of the Dunley family, after all. They won’t leave him in the lurch. If we target Hector, the Dunley family will not sit idly by.”

Hearing this, Philip’s expression darkened before he sneered and said, “Are you saying that if we capture Hector, we’ll inevitably clash with the Dunley family? And at that time, we may even make enemies out of the entire Charbury?”

“Yes, Young Master Clarke. Although this is unlikely, it’s difficult to say for sure. After all, none of us knows where the Dunley family stands,” Victor said solemnly.

It was obvious that Victor did not want Philip to go to Charbury and offend the entire Dunley family just to deal with Hector Dunley.

It was just too risky.

It was not as simple as dealing with an individual person or a company. The families in Charbury had very complicated relationships. Dealing with one family might cause seven or eight other families to jump in. If they wanted to deal with the seven or eight families, they could very well end up having to face all the families in Charbury!

Philip remained indifferent after hearing this and merely said, "Okay, I understand."

After that, he took out his phone, dialed George Thomas' number, and said coldly, "George, help me contact Hector Dunley's father."

"Yes, Young Master. I'll make the arrangements now." George immediately agreed.

Soon, George found the contact number of Hector's father and sent it to Philip.