Chapter 1201 Interrogation

Cooper then sat beside Timothy on the couch and picked up the kettle to pour himself a cup of coffee. With his lips parted, Timothy seemed as though he wanted to say something but failed to utter a word. "Is there a reason why you're here?" inquired Cooper after taking two sips of his coffee.

"Asel will be one in a few days, so I want you to take Mandy and Lucian with you to my place," responded Timothy in a hoarse voice.

When Cooper heard that, he raised his hand to rub his eyebrows. "I've been so busy recently that I've completely forgotten about it. What date is it?"

"The twenty-first."

"I'll have the twins pick out a birthday gift for her in the next couple of days. Rest assured I'll bring Mandy and Lucian over on that day..." Cooper paused for a while to glance at Sally, who was talking on the phone in front of the floor-to-ceiling window, before adding, "And also my wife."

Following Cooper's gaze, Timothy, too, shifted his attention to Sally.

Sally shifted her gaze between the bowl of grapes and Cooper. She was about to say something when the screen of his phone on the table lit up.

It was an incoming call from Bertilla.

The call was probably about work as Cooper went upstairs in a hurry shortly after answering the phone.

In order to make the grapes taste even better, he had added some ice cubes into the glass bowl.

Sally picked one of the grapes up with a fork and stuffed it into her mouth.

The sweetness of the grape filled her tongue almost instantly, and the coolness from the ice cubes only amplified its flavors even more.

Cooper was so busy with work that he remained in his study throughout the rest of the afternoon. He stepped out for a quick meal during dinner but went back to work in the study immediately after.

Sally knew better than to disturb him at a time like this, so she helped Amanda build Lego castles in the living room instead. At about nine in the evening, she brought the kids to their bedroom upstairs before returning to hers.

It was already ten by the time she was done showering, and yet, Cooper was still busy working.

After arriving at the bedroom, Cooper tossed Sally onto the couch and climbed on top of her as he delivered a barrage of kisses. Instead of shying away from his "assault," Sally reciprocated his kisses while helping him get his shirt off.

Cooper had removed the belt of her robe while smothering her with kisses, revealing the figure-hugging spaghetti-strap nightgown underneath.

The love bites on her collarbones were clearly visible under the dim lighting of the bedroom.

Cooper lifted the hem of her nightgown and wrapped her legs around his waist.

It wasn't long before Sally had worked up a sweat. Her silky-smooth, black hair was sticking to her cheeks while the strap of her nightgown hung loosely over her shoulders.

The passionate and seductive vibes that she gave off while making love formed a huge contrast with her usual cool and elegant appearance.

Cooper stopped his thrusts all of a sudden when he saw that her cheeks were drenched in sweat.

Reaching out, he caressed her rosy lips, causing them to turn even redder with the warmth of his hand.

Cooper leaned forward to lick the sweat off her face and chuckled next to her ear. "Right now, you look like a pure maiden that has been corrupted by the masses."

Sally quickly stood in front of him to block his path as she said in the most endearing tone possible, "Come on... Don't be angry, okay?"

Cooper let out a cold snort. "Why would I be angry? It's perfectly fine for you to love my eyes, but please don't be thinking of another man while having sex with me. It really turns me off!"

"I wasn't thinking about him. When I took a closer look at your eyes earlier, I realized that they don't look all that similar to his. He's a soldier, so the look in his eyes is always stern and filled with righteousness." Sally looked up and stared deeply into Cooper's eyes as she continued, "Yours, on the other hand, are gentle and kind.

That tiny difference made her realize that their eyes weren't as similar as she had thought.

Cooper yanked the towel off his head and flashed her a sarcastic smile. "If our eyes are that different, then why did you space out earlier? Don't tell me it's because I'm too skilled in bed!"

Sally's lips moved slightly, but she couldn't seem to find the right words.

The look on Cooper's face turned gloomy as he pushed her aside and stepped out of the bathroom.

She then pointed the bottle slightly downward, causing the red wine to flow out slowly and smoothly. Some of it trickled down the corners of Cooper's mouth and flowed onto his chest, staining his bathrobe red in the process.

Sally slowly leaned forward and wiped the red wine off his lips with kisses before moving down to his neck and collarbones.

Cooper couldn't help but hug her tightly as his chest heaved from the heavy panting. He was trying so hard to contain himself that the veins in his neck were bulging beneath the skin.

Sally turned her head to the side and planted passionate kisses on the bulging veins.

Her seduction efforts eventually paid off as Cooper gave in and snatched the bottle out of her hand. He put it on the nightstand and flipped her onto her back.

"You would never use such tactics on me before. Where did you learn to do something like this?" he asked while staring down at her with reddened eyes.

Instead of answering his question, Sally responded with another question, "Are you still angry?"

Before she even realized what was going on, Sally felt something cold binding her wrists.

Cooper entered the bedroom with a bowl of oatmeal

After swallowing a mouthful of oatmeal, Sally explained, "Zion was my dad's subordinate before, but he was transferred to the military district in Baxrich. After what happened to my dad, Zion was transferred back here and even got promoted."

In a light tone, she added, "Zion also went to the meeting in Baykeep."

Cooper wiped away a dollop of oatmeal at the corner of Sally's mouth. "The fact that Zion's name is on that document means that he's already on the Gaudette family's side. Are you suspecting that he has something to do with your dad's incident?"

Eyes darkening, Sally nodded. "My dad's position became vacant after he got imprisoned, so someone needs to take his place."

"It seems like Zion was not transferred back to Jadeborough by coincidence," remarked Cooper seriously. "Moreover, he was promoted. With the help of the Gaudette family, it won't be difficult for him to take your dad's position."

"But they're undergoing handover now since it's the end of their term of office. A deputy commanding officer from my dad's military district is currently in charge of his job, so the higher-ups don't have the time to promote Zion."

"But if Mr. Gaudette takes office, the first thing he'll do is to promote Zion," Cooper added.

"That's right."

After the kiss, Sally could see that Cooper's mood had turned better. "Isn't this more useful than a saint's advice?"

Cooper smiled in agreement. "To be honest, I'm beginning to suspect you signed up for a crash course to make me fall for you."

Sally did not have so many tricks up her sleeve before when it came to seducing someone.

"Consider that the truth then," Sally responded, mimicking his tone. Having eaten some oatmeal and lain in bed for a while, she felt energized. She then pushed Cooper aside and got out of the bed, but when her feet touched the carpet, a sense of discomfort spread to her legs.

Nevertheless, she ignored it and headed to the walk-in closet.

Cooper trailed after her.

Cooper chuckled again, but his laugh was laced with coldness. "So how do you plan to deal with this childhood sweetheart you grew up with?"

"He went to Ustrana a few years ago to study, so we haven't seen each other for a long time." Sally lifted her hair out of the sweater and noted, "If I suddenly approach him, he'll sense that something is wrong."

Moreover, the Carter family got into trouble after Josephine and Cooper were caught sleeping in a hotel together. There was no way Zeno did not hear about these incidents.

Since he was aware of what happened, he would naturally suspect Sally.

"Do you have better ideas?" Sally asked Cooper.

After all, he was smart and scheming.

"What idea could I possibly have? Since he's your childhood sweetheart, you must know him the best. Didn't his dad try to set you two up?" There was a hint of frostiness on Cooper's expressionless face.

Though he sounded calm, the trace of sarcasm in his voice was frustrating. It was then that Sally realized something.

"Are you... jealous?" she asked hesitantly, staring at Cooper.

“Uncle Cooper isn't wasting money. He's just doing everything he can to make you happy. Am I right, Uncle Cooper?” Amanda immediately chimed in.

Cooper caressed the girl's head and responded, “What a smart girl you are, Mandy.”

When they walked in after the waiter, Cooper happened to see a familiar figure at a table on the left side. The person was facing them, so she also spotted him upon raising her head.

“Ms. Yerton,” Cooper greeted politely since they had already met eyes. Besides, the woman was also the teacher of Amanda and Lucian.

“Ms. Yerton! What a coincidence!” Amanda waved at Tiffany.

Tiffany was eating there with her fellow teachers and didn't expect to run into Cooper's group here.

Amanda's words comforted Sally, who kissed the young girl on the cheek and said, "Thank you, Mandy."
"You're welcome," Amanda replied with a wide smile.

Cooper watched their interaction across the table and said, "What are you whispering about? The beef won't taste good once it cools."

Sally smiled wordlessly at him before stuffing her mouth full of beef.

He studied her face through hooded eyes. Her fair skin and aloof expression made her seem colder than ever. Even her lips appeared pale.

She looked like a flower that had frozen over atop a snowy mountain, glacial yet beautiful in its own way.

Cooper's gaze inevitably turned heated, and it was impossible for Sally not to notice.

With her spoon in her mouth, she looked up at him and arched a brow challengingly. "Why are you
