Chapter 1271 His Bet Is Too Absurd

Johanna was so angry that she suddenly felt a sharp pain in her stomach. She clutched her belly, almost collapsing from the pain.

Zephyr's face changed immediately, and he quickly carried her back to the bedroom.

The doctor, who was always on standby, received the order and hurried to the bedroom.

The doctor instructed Johanna to follow her own breathing rhythm, and once her emotions had stabilized, he gave her some oral medication to take.

But Johanna pursed her lips, refusing to take the medicine.

The doctor looked over at Zephyr, who took the medicine from the doctor's hand and told them to go ahead.

Zephyr sat down by the bed, his tone unusually serious. "If I wanted to take away your child, I could have done it while you were unconscious. There's no need to wait until now. If you don't want this child, you don't have to take the medicine."

Johanna forcefully pulled back her hand, leaning her body away to create distance between them. "If I win the bet, will you really keep your word?"

"Of course," Zephyr paused and chuckled lightly, "But I've never lost a bet with anyone before."

Johanna sneered, "Well, you're going to lose this time!"

Seeing her hand resting on her swollen belly, her desire for survival seemed to gradually return, and Zephyr's tense heart slowly eased as well.

The oatmeal on the bedside table had already gone cold, so Zephyr asked the housekeeper to bring up another serving.

Since it was food for a pregnant woman, the housekeeper didn't dare to be negligent.

The oatmeal was cooked to a thick consistency, with some raspberries added in. As they cooked and blended with the oats, a faint, pleasant aroma filled the air.

Zephyr tasted a bit to make sure it wasn't too hot, then brought it to Johanna's mouth. "You've slept for a full ten hours. You must be hungry, and so must the baby."

Johanna didn't insist any further and lowered her head to eat the oatmeal.

Zephyr soaked the dry towel in hot water, then wrung it out and wrapped it around his hand to test the temperature.

After making sure the temperature wouldn't scald Johanna's skin, they went out with the towel.

He sat down by the bed and lifted the blanket, revealing a pair of beautiful, slender legs. Ten delicate and tender toes were exposed.

Johanna had always been on the slender side, even when she was pregnant with little Asel and had fainted, she never really gained much weight.

Now that she was pregnant, most of the food she ate was absorbed by the baby for nutrition.

A few months ago, her belly was still flat, but as the sixth month approached, it finally began to show a slight curve.

Zephyr gently pulled Johanna's left leg onto his own, placing a warm towel on her foot. The comforting heat quickly spread, causing Johanna to relax and feel at ease.

Johanna relaxed for only a few seconds before her eyebrows furrowed again. "Why are you being so nice to me?"

Even though it was her first time being tied up by Zephyr, he seemed gentle with her. However, he did as he pleased, not caring whether she was willing or not. If she felt uncomfortable, it was the housekeeper's responsibility to handle it.

Zephyr knew that they couldn't stay in Jadeborough for long. After having the housekeeper help Johanna upstairs, he pulled the doctor aside and asked, “How is the child? Can she travel on a cruise ship?”

The doctor said, “As long as Ms. Joule maintains a good mood, there won't be any issues with the fetus.”

Zephyr nodded, asking the medical team to pack up their things and join him in leaving tomorrow morning.

He didn't like changing doctors frequently, fearing that Johanna and the child might not adapt well.

The doctor was hesitant at first, but when Zephyr offered a salary in Anglanduran currency, the doctor immediately agreed.

After becoming pregnant, Johanna felt quite tired and would sleep deeply. Coupled with her blindness, she didn't even notice when Zephyr took her to the harbor and carried her onto a private cruise ship.

Johanna gradually woke up from her daze only when she felt a faint tremor.

Chapter 1275 Suddenly Feeling That Life Should Be Like This

But when she touched her protruding belly, another layer of worry emerged. "I'm pregnant. Will those medicines have any effect on the fetus?"

"It won't. You don't need to worry."

"That's good." Johanna felt relieved. If the vision-restoring medicine would have an impact on the fetus, she might not take it.

This was her second child with Timothy, and she didn't want anything to happen to the baby.

Even if she couldn't see and had no way of leaving Zephyr's side, she knew it wouldn't be long before Timothy would find her.

Just like last time, she would still return to Timothy's side.

Zephyr followed the doctor out and returned after more than ten minutes, holding a small medicine bottle in his hand.

The medicine bottle was spotless, without even a label on it.

He took a capsule from the medicine bottle and handed it to Johanna along with a cup of warm water.

The sea breeze on the deck was a bit chilly. Zephyr was worried that Johanna might feel uncomfortable if she caught a cold. After she finished a bowl of cherry meat, he got up, picked up the slippers she had kicked off, and helped her put them on.

"It's time to go back, the doctor said that blowing wind for too long is not good for the eyes."

These words really hit a nerve with Johanna. She leaned on the back of the chair with one hand and stood up from her seat.

Zephyr bent down, scooped her up with his hands under her knees, and lifted her into his arms.

Johanna, afraid of falling, quickly hooked her hand around his neck. "Let go, I can walk by myself."

"We'll be going down the stairs soon, and I'm worried that you might fall if the cruise ship sways and you don't hold onto the handrail tightly." Although she was pregnant, she wasn't very heavy, and Zephyr carried her effortlessly.

Zephyr paused and said, "If you're not afraid of falling, then I'll let go."

Johanna gritted her teeth, thinking about her pregnancy and how a moment of carelessness could harm the baby. She decided not to be stubborn with him.

Seeing that Zephyr had grasped her, the corner of his mouth curled up slightly.

The clothes that Zephyr had ordered were delivered by helicopter yesterday afternoon. Johanna chose a light blue long-sleeved dress and tied her hair up.

She was not tall, but her well-proportioned figure and delicate bone structure made her look youthful.

If it weren't for the bulging belly indicating pregnancy, just looking at that palm-sized, fair and delicate little face, she would appear to be in her early twenties.

Pure and passionate, innocent and captivating.

Seeing the waiter pushing a cart in, Johanna said, "I'd like to go to the restaurant to eat."

Zephyr waved his hand, signaling the waiter to leave.

After changing his clothes, he took Johanna to the restaurant and sat by the window. Outside the window was the shimmering sea and blue sky, creating a stunning view.

To cater to Johanna's taste, Zephyr specially invited two senior chefs who are skilled in various cuisines.

The meatballs are made of pure pork filling with a thin skin. After being cooked, they look crystal clear and translucent. Paired with the de-oiled mushroom soup base, the dish tastes incredibly delicious.

After eating a few meatballs, Johanna felt a warm sensation in her stomach, which greatly improved her mood.

Chapter 1278 So Enchanting

Johanna, feeling a bit bored, adjusted her sun hat and followed a group of tourists into the psychic shop where fortune telling was offered.

After the previous visitor left with their tarot card, Johanna stepped forward, closed her eyes, and shook the card deck. A long tarot card fell out from within.

Zephyr glanced at the tarot card on the table and couldn't help but laugh, "Do you still believe in this?"

In Zephyr's view, anything divine or religious is nothing more than a mental crutch that people have imagined in order to seek peace of mind.

The world is like this, full of cunning, bloodshed, and disgust.

Johanna ignored him and walked to the side with her tarot card. She searched for the symbol on the card among rows of small drawers marked with capital symbols.

Soon, Johanna found the symbol, but the drawer was quite high, and she couldn't reach it even on tiptoes.

Just as she was about to call for help from the staff, Zephyr had already walked over, pulled open the drawer, and took out a folded piece of paper from inside, handing it to Johanna.

Johanna distanced herself from him and walked to the corner to unfold the paper.

After going down the stairs, Johanna immediately distanced herself from the female tourist and turned to walk in the other direction.

The interior of the psychic shop was somewhat intricate, but there were signs along the roadside at regular intervals. Following these signs, Johanna quickly made her way out of the Sanctity Oracle Psychic.

Today is the weekend, and there are many tourists out having fun.

Some tourists took a tour around the Sanctity Oracle Psychic and planned to leave. At a junction about two hundred meters away from the main entrance of the Sanctity Oracle Psychic, there were quite a few taxis parked and waiting.

Johanna's footsteps quickened, her breathing becoming more rapid.

Walk a little faster.

As long as she gets on the taxi, she can go to the Jetroina Embassy, and she'll be safe once she arrives.

Johanna's eyes were fixed on a taxi a hundred meters away, not paying attention to her surroundings. Suddenly, a male tourist wearing a hat walked up quickly behind her and reached out to grab Johanna's ear.

In the next moment, Johanna felt a tearing pain in her left ear, causing her body to lurch forward two steps, almost tripping her.

Zephyr lowered his gaze to look at her. After a few seconds, he let go of her hand, stood up, and walked out of the hospital room. Outside the room, there were two bodyguards dressed in suits.

Upon seeing Zephyr emerge, their bodies immediately straightened up.

“Mr. Juksford.”

Zephyr instructed, “Go to the Chanaean Cuisine restaurant and get some food, then buy a set of silk bed sheets and pillowcases.”

Although it was a private room, the bed sheets and covers were provided by the hospital, carrying the smell of disinfectant and not of great quality. He was worried that Johanna might not sleep comfortably.

“All right,” one of them responded.

Additionally, the other bodyguard handed a pair of clean pearl earrings back to Zephyr and asked, “Mr. Juksford, how should we deal with that person?”

They knew about Zephyr's ruthless methods and also knew how to deal with people they caught.
