Chapter 1431 Leave With Nothing

With a stern expression, Henry raised his voice. "What nonsense are you talking about?"

"I know my sister's character better than you, you j*rk!" Charlotte retorted, "Have you forgotten the two billion my father gave you when you two got married? At that time, your family's company needed funds for turnover, and you couldn't even borrow that much from the bank. You relentlessly pursued my sister, trying every possible way to propose to her. My father loved my sister so much that not only did he give you two billion in cash as a dowry, but he also helped you establish your network in the business world! If it weren't for my dad's connections and that two billion, do you think your company can grow? Dream on!"

Charlotte had always been sharp-tongued, her words piercing Henry's heart like a dagger. His face darkened as if he was on the verge of exploding with rage.

Charlotte, who refused to be intimidated by his expression, glared back fiercely. "Don't think you can bully my sister just because my dad isn't here and our family is bankrupt. Listen carefully, even if you're set on divorcing my sister, I'll make sure you leave with nothing. I'll not allow that b*tch to take away anything that belongs to my sister."

As Henry listened, his anger intensified, and his embarrassment turned into rage. Without hesitation, he raised his hand and slapped Charlotte across the face. The force was so intense that it caused her to stagger backward several steps, nearly falling over.

The slap mark soon appeared on her delicate cheek.

Once Jessica came to her senses, she charged at Henry like a mad woman, grabbing his clothes and hitting him. "Henry, son of a b*tch! My father has never laid a hand on my sister from the day she was born! How dare you hit her?"

Half of Charlotte's face was constantly throbbing with numb pain.

After steadying herself for a moment and seeing Henry push Jessica to the ground, she instantly picked up a chair and hurled it at him.

As a man, Henry had an advantage in height and strength. Fueled by anger and infuriation, he decided to show no mercy toward the sisters. During the fight, Henry kicked Charlotte away when she attempted to protect her sister. Unfortunately, her head hit the sharp corner of a glass coffee table, and immediately, blood was everywhere.

As Charlotte woke up, she felt her head throbbing with a faint pain.

Jessica had been keeping her company the whole time. Hearing Charlotte gasp, she quickly got up to check on her. "Charlotte, do you have a headache? I'll call the doctor over."

Shortly after, Jessica left the ward, and within two minutes, she returned with a doctor in a white coat.

After a thorough examination, the doctor confirmed that Charlotte did not suffer any side effects from the concussion. The headache she was experiencing was a natural occurrence as her wound was still healing.

The doctor also removed the bandage on her head, as it was time to change her medication.

Since she bumped her head against the corner of a table and broke the skin, the doctor had to shave off a patch of her hair to stitch up the wound. The result was an unsightly scar resembling a centipede, with five or six sutures.

It was a good thing Charlotte could not see it herself. Otherwise, she would have had a meltdown.

Once the doctor had done applying medicine to Charlotte's wound and replacing the bandage, he left the ward. Jessica poured Charlotte a cup of warm water to soothe her throat.

Upon hearing this, Charlotte knew that Jerry was serious, which instantly infuriated her.

That day, she braved the terrible weather to return to Jadeborough, all for the sake of celebrating Jerry's birthday. She even went to retrieve the ring. But who would have known that Jessica quarreled with Henry while the children were present?

She could make up for Jerry's missed birthday but would be at a loss if Henry hurt Jessica.

“Fine, if he wants to break up, let's break up! Who the h*ll cares? I can't be bothered to waste my breath explaining!” Charlotte coldly spat into the phone. “Tell him this. I won't give him second chances!”

Joash was terrified by Charlotte's furious words over the phone.

He had been by Jerry's side for a long time. During that period, Jerry and Charlotte had a happy and harmonious relationship with no conflicts, nor did they give each other silent treatments.

It seemed that their relationship began to change a few months ago.

Jerry became increasingly concerned about the men appearing by Charlotte's side. He couldn't bear her entanglement with her ex-boyfriend. It seemed as if this was why the two were constantly arguing and giving each other the cold shoulder.

Joash didn't know what Jerry was thinking, but now that he had returned all the gifts from Charlotte, it was clear that he was disheartened.

Charlotte was so furious that she couldn't utter a word. Like a madwoman, she rushed forward, grabbing Sophia and slapping her repeatedly. "You shameless old hag," she yelled. "You can't control your daughter and even steal my sister's jewelry!"

After enduring several slaps, Sophia finally reacted and tried to fight back. However, Charlotte was both fierce and ruthless in her attack, leaving Sophia unable to find an opportunity to retaliate.

The little boy sitting on the carpet burst into tears, frightened by what he saw.

The sharp cries of the child quickly alerted Regina in the bedroom. Rushing out, she was met with the sight of Charlotte violently hitting her mother.

Regina rushed over, cursing and intending to hit Charlotte.

However, Genevieve restrained Regina by locking her hands behind her back in two moves.

"What are you doing, barging into my house and assaulting us? I'm going to call the police!" Regina screamed at the top of her lungs.

Genevieve sneered, "You have two elevators for one residential unit. You can shout as loud as you want, but no one will come. Even if someone does come, we'll show them that their neighbor is a mistress."

After Genevieve let go, Regina didn't dare to rush up and fight Charlotte. She could only glare at her fiercely.

Just now, while Charlotte was fighting with Sophia, Sophia hit her healing wound, causing it to split open and bleed. A scratch was also clawed onto her face, leaving a trail of blood.

Genevieve took Charlotte to the hospital for treatment.

After the doctor finished bandaging Charlotte's wounds, Genevieve felt that Charlotte looked pitiful with the gauze on her head and face.

Genevieve said, "I've known you for many years, but I've never seen anyone hit you."

"I've never been hit by anyone before," Charlotte said, her brows furrowed in pain as her wound was treated.

She cursed under her breath. "That b*stard Henry, I won't let him off the hook!"

The two of them walked toward the hospital exit. Genevieve said, "Don't worry, Henry and Regina can't leave the country before your sister divorces Henry. I'm having someone investigate his company."

"You've really gone out of your way for me." Charlotte sniffled. "If it weren't for you accompanying me to Baykeep, I wouldn't even be able to confront that b*tch."

Genevieve smiled. "We're friends. Why the formality?"

Three minutes later, Charlotte headed downstairs to the first floor of the hotel with her mobile phone in hand.

Four men dressed in hotel security uniforms were already waiting at the door. Upon seeing Charlotte, they all greeted her warmly.

Charlotte tipped everyone and led them toward the lobby.

Henry was on the phone with Regina, soothing her with a gentle voice. He promised he would avenge her by giving Charlotte a few good slaps.

Suddenly, a cold laugh echoed in his ear. "I'm right here. Do you dare to slap me?"

Henry turned his head to see Charlotte walking toward the sofa. His face turned green as he hung up the phone. He was about to say something when he saw the four security guards behind Charlotte.

Henry said to the security guards, "I have some private matters to discuss with her. You guys should leave us alone."

“That won't do. You have a tendency to hit people.” Charlotte sat down opposite him with her legs crossed. “They all heard you just now. You even wanted to slap me. For my safety, I must keep them here.”

As soon as Henry left the hotel, Charlotte immediately called Timothy, asking him to assign a few bodyguards to keep an eye on Jessica and Sasha.

Timothy asked, “Kenneth is also on a business trip in Sparaville. Do you want to tell him?”

“No need,” Charlotte replied.

This was originally an issue between Jessica and Henry. Moreover, Kenneth's wife was pregnant with her second child and was resting at home. Hence, Charlotte didn't want to involve Kenneth and his wife in this matter.

After finishing the phone call, Charlotte continued to stay at the hotel.

On the third day, a crisis erupted at the Lambert family's company headquarters in Jadeborough. By mid-morning, the news buzzed everywhere, causing the stock price to plummet.

Meanwhile, at the Baykeep branch, employees had disclosed that an intern was sexually harassed by a superior, leading to immense mental stress and, ultimately, suicide by wrist-cutting. The company not only covered the incident but also failed to penalize the senior executive involved.

The company's Public Relations Department wanted to cover up these scandals and even spoke to those involved in releasing the news. However, due to the irrefutable evidence, it only caused a bigger sensation.

Both the official media of Jadeborough and Baykeep had noticed the affairs of the Lambert family and had reported on them extensively.

Charlotte helped Jessica find a highly secure neighborhood. After her sister finished moving, she exposed all the scandalous information about Regina and Henry's company's fraudulent activities.

Henry's company originally suffered a significant drop in stock prices due to Charlotte's previous leaks, causing shareholders to cash out and flee.

Now, Charlotte had released even more explosive news about his extramarital affair with Regina, causing the company to completely collapse. He desperately wished he could kill Charlotte.

Henry bribed the media, twisting the truth in interviews, claiming that Charlotte lacked integrity.

Charlotte revealed that when he married Jessica, Jiminy returned a gift of two billion. She also exposed his extramarital affair with Regina, which resulted in a two-year-old child, providing strong evidence to support her claims.

Jiminy was once a renowned figure on the rich list, and it was well-known that the Benson family was wealthy. No one doubted her words, and they all criticized Henry.

Henry's reputation in the business world was not only tarnished, but he was also taken to the police station for investigation due to his involvement in multiple commercial crimes. In the end, he was sentenced to fifteen years in prison due to irrefutable evidence. As for Charlotte, the scandal she released about Regina's affair led to Regina's complete social downfall.

Regina found herself unable to continue in the financial world and even lost her reliance on Henry. Furious, she called Charlotte and let loose a torrent of abuse.

Her scolding took Joash aback. He said softly, "Jerry sent me away in the afternoon, I really don't know what he went off to do..."

"He kissed another woman, right there on the main street! How could he do such a thing?" Charlotte berated.

She had always been concerned about Jerry's image. When they went out, they would choose less crowded places for their dates, never openly displaying affection on the streets.

And now, he was actually kissing another woman on the street.

Charlotte felt as if her brain was about to be burnt to ashes by her rage. She ordered Joash, "Go find him now, don't let him mess around with other women."

Joash cautiously said, "Ms. Benson, Jerry broke up with you a while ago. Isn't it normal for him to have a girlfriend now?"

Joash's words harked Charlotte back to reality.

Yes, they were broken up. Jerry returned all the gifts she had given him. Who was she to care about which woman he was kissing, much less where they were kissing?

She told Genevieve everything about the reasons and consequences of her breakup with Jerry.

Charlotte asked Genevieve, "If your sister were arguing with her husband, and he might even hit her, would you step in to help?"

"Sure." Genevieve nodded.

Charlotte brushed her long hair away from her forehead as she deadpanned, "And after I woke up, I wanted to call him to explain, but guess what? He blocked me, didn't want to hear my explanation, and even returned all the gifts I had given him in the past. He had Joash tell me that we've broken up. I really..."

Every time she thought about what happened that day, she was absolutely livid.

The only person who could push her to the point of constantly swearing and wanting to explode on the spot was Jerry.

Genevieve carefully replaced each keycap onto the keyboard, expressing her surprise, "I don't think Jerry is that immature. Could there be a misunderstanding between you two?"

"He is being immature!" Charlotte said, "Would Armand argue with you? Would he dare to block you on WhatsApp and not answer your calls?"

"Hmm?" Genevieve stared at Charlotte, dumbfounded for quite a while.
