

For Dinner 370

Chapter 370: The Little Friend Who Can Pick Up and Let Go

Morgan nodded, "Got it!"

"But, that uncle just now was not a bad person," Adrian Zhekova said again, "so don't avoid him because of that."

"Of course not!" Morgan was a child who could easily let go, "Uncle is quite fun!"

Just seeing Uncle crying like that was interesting!

Adrian Zhekova couldn't help but laugh, patting Morgan's little head.

Finally, the three of them went to eat.

After lunch, they went shopping for home furnishings and filled up Morgan's game room.

They also picked out tables of various sizes for displaying his Legos.

Once they had placed the orders and confirmed the delivery times, they went to the Lego store.

Morgan was very sensible. Though he now had a rich dad and could be considered a little rich kid himself, he ultimately chose only a roller coaster set.

As he handed the payment to the cashier, Morgan explained, "After I finish building the city scene, I plan to create an amusement park."

"With roller coasters, Ferris wheels, and a Disney Castle," the little guy described, making gestures.

He had thought of this before, but there wasn't enough space at home to display it all.

Now it was different; he had a rich dad and a dedicated game room.

He could buy whatever he liked.

"Today is also a housewarming for me and Morgan," Cindy Clarke said, "I'll make something delicious for you guys tonight, let's celebrate well."

Housewarming.

Adrian Zhekova thought it was a great idea.

"Okay," he nodded.

So, the trio went to the supermarket located in the basement of the shopping mall.

"What are we going to eat tonight?" Morgan asked.

He often went to the supermarket with Cindy but this was the first time with his dad as well.

The three-member family walked together, and Morgan's footsteps carried a breeze.

He had never before felt so confident about walking.

It turned out that being with the whole family like this made him feel so complete.

Cindy was also thinking about finding inspiration while looking at the ingredients in the supermarket.

They happened to arrive at the meat and frozen foods section.

Cindy had an idea: "How about Spicy Coconut Chicken Hotpot?"

Now that the weather had turned cold, eating a hot pot seemed like an especially blissful thing to do.

Just by hearing Cindy's suggestion, Morgan could imagine the delicious taste of the chicken soup and the sweetness of the coconut.

They were standing by a freezer at the time.

The slight chill from the freezer made Morgan immediately miss the warmth.

Swallowing, he quickly nodded: "I want to eat!"

"Okay," Adrian Zhekova's appetite was also awakened.

So, Cindy took a frozen chicken.

Then went to the fruit and vegetable area to get some coconuts.

Morgan wanted to drink coconut juice; it could be used as a beverage at dinner.

So Cindy took a few more.

Adrian Zhekova's house had nothing.

So, Cindy took this opportunity to buy various ingredients and fruits.

Naturally, this included the Cordyceps Flower needed for the Spicy Coconut Chicken.

With their purchases, they returned home. The car's trunk was stuffed full.

They parked the car in the garage.

Adrian Zhekova took out the bags from the trunk, trying to carry as many as possible.

But in the end, there were still three bags that he couldn't fit.

Cindy really had bought a lot.

Just as Cindy was about to take the remaining bags, Adrian Zhekova said, "Leave them here, I'll come back down and carry them up in a bit."

"There are just these three bags; they're not heavy, just save yourself the extra trip," Cindy said, quickly picking up the bags.

Truth be told, the heaviest item was Morgan's Lego roller coaster.