

Wife 15

Chapter 15 www.loveWorm.com

“I’m busy. If this is all, stop bothering me,” Yohan said before ending the call. Clearly, he didn’t want to discuss the matter of getting a divorce with Clara. Even if they were to get one, he should be the one asking for it. What gave her the right to initiate it? www.loveLWorm.CoM

He refused to accept that she wanted to leave him.

Meanwhile, Clara was a little flabbergasted.

“It’d been that easy for us to get married in a flash. Why is it so hard to get a divorce? We don’t love each other anyway, so why doesn’t he want a divorce?”

She thought that since they came from different social backgrounds and had no feelings for each other, he would be thrilled if she asked for a divorce. Only then did she recall him saying that if he got a divorce, his grandma would start hounding him to get married again. www.Nerve(1)worm.Com

Thus, Clara sent Yohan a text. “Mr. Morris, we can secretly complete the divorce proceedings. I promise your family won’t find out about it. That way, your grandma will still think we’re married and won’t urge you to meet other women.”

From the date of birth listed on the marriage certificate, she knew he was five years older than her. That made him 30 now. It wasn’t for a man his age to be nagged by his family about getting married.

As it was, ever since Clara came of age, Mark had been hinting—both subtly and overtly—for her to give marriage some serious consideration too if she found herself a good person.

He kept telling her that a woman should make the most of their youth, the prime time for love, adding that if she met a good man, she should marry him,

Yohan saw Clara’s text but chose not to respond. After pocketing his phone, he sat back down in front of Chuck and continued discussing work matters as if nothing happened. This continued until Adam came in to remind the two men that it was time for the meeting to start

Hearing that, Yohan and Chuck left the office and headed for the conference room. During the meeting, all the senior executives needed to put their phones on silent mode to avoid causing a disruption. Yohan had also put his phone on silent mode before leaving it on the table. That way, he could see the new notifications right away.

Sitting beside him were Adam, Chuck, and Justin Morris, his younger cousin.

No one answered any calls or sent out any texts during the meeting, but Yohan’s phone kept flashing. He would eye it from time to time, but he never checked the messages or notifications. Chuck and Justin ended up mimicking him and glancing at his phone from time to time.

“Yohan,” Justin whispered. “Is someone from the family looking for you?”

With a stoic expression, Yohan said curtly, “No. Focus on the meeting.”

While speaking, he flipped his phone over to hide the screen. Thus, even if he received a call, no one would notice anything..

Clara, who was still sitting in the car parked by the side of the road, kept calling or texting Yohan every few minutes. She was shamelessly pestering him just so she could get a divorce.

Alas, no matter how many texts she sent, he didn’t respond at all. Out of considération for how slow he was at typing, she even made a few calls, but he didn’t answer them. www.loveLWorm.Com

Was he genuinely too busy to take her calls, or was he just choosing not to? Clara believed it was the