

Wife 24

Chapter 24

“Oy, who are you calling a loudmouth? Me or your wife demanded Bonnie.

Yohan didn't reply to that.

Daniel, whose soul had been residing in Yohan's watch, showed up when he heard his wife's scolding. He took a seat beside Bonnie and reached out to caress her face. His hand moved right through her face.

Daniel had forgotten that he was just a ghost at that moment. He didn't have a body, so he couldn't touch his wife.

Daniel was sitting right beside Bonnie, so she felt a little cold. She assumed that was because the air conditioner was too strong, so she turned to Yohan and ordered, “Go turn the air conditioner down. You shouldn't have one in here at all. Being close to a frozen heart like yours is chilling enough.”

Yohan got up and turned off the air conditioner. ww@.\(n\)óVEIŴóRM.CoM

Daniel changed his seat to the one opposite Bonnie. He stopped staying close to her because he didn't want her to catch a cold.

Humans and ghosts weren't meant to Interact.

Daniel and Bonnie had been in love for decades, but they existed in different planes at that moment. Hence, he couldn't stay too close to her for long, or he'd affect her body and get her sick. wwŴ.ñov@ŁŴOrM.cOm

“Yohan, I like having a granddaughter-in-law like Clara.

Yohan's face showed no emotion when he replied, “I've already married her.”

“I know. I wouldn't have called her my granddaughter-in-law if you hadn't done that. Do you want to get divorced? You don't, do you? If that's the case, then move in with her. Spend time together so you'd develop feelings.”

Yohan stared at his grandmother. He finally understood her ulterior motive. She was trying to g live with Clara.

“Grandma, I've granted you your wish and gotten married. Please stop badgering me about my love life in the future.”

“Live together with her, and I promise I will stop nagging you about your love life,” swore Bonnie.

Yohan and Clara might be legally married, but they weren't living together, and to top that off, they were keeping their marriage a secret. Bonnie thought that the situation was no different from never marrying in the first place.

What she really wanted was for her grandson to have a lover to fill his heart. She wanted someone to understand and take care of Yohan in her place.

Naturally, she also wanted to have great-grandkids.

“It's fine if you don't move in with her. Just have her move in with you. The bottom line is this. If the two of you aren't living together, I will drop by every single day to nag you until you die from sheer irritation.”

Bonnie's tone became threatening toward the end, which caused Yohan to scowl so much that he maxed but. \(w\)wŴ.nðveIwσ\(r\)m.\(c\)o@

When Daniel heard what Bonnie said, his eyes brimmed with mischievous joy. He laughed and commended, “Only my wife is smart enough to deal with this stubborn grandson of mine.”

“Grandma, I am not your only grandson. Please stop focusing on only me. Justin and the others are getting older, too. You should focus more on their love lives.”

If Justin were there, he'd be speechless and say, “Yohan, what kind of a big brother are you? Dragging your siblings down like that.”

Yohan would have replied, “If I have to suffer, then so must the rest of you!”

“You're the oldest,” claimed Bonnie. “I will deal with you first before I deal with the rest. If you have a happy marriage, you will end up being all lovey-dovey in front of them every day. That would help trigger them and make them more open to the idea of love and marriage.”

Yohan didn't know what to say to that.

“Okay, it's decided then. You will go to Clara and tell her to move to your place. The two of you are legally married, so it's only right that you live together.”

“Grandma, I am not used to living with a stranger.

Yohan's house was his private territory. Aside from his family, only a handful of close friends could enter. A stranger wouldn't even be allowed to touch the doorknob, let alone live with him.

“She is not a stranger. She is your wife. The two of you are married and are legally a couple!*

Yohan replied, “We got married on a whim. There is no emotional connection there, so she is, in effect, a stranger. Besides, I don't know where she lives, so how will I find her? Also, she has already asked for a divorce. Do you think she'd be willing to live with me?”

“Stop making excuses. If you want to know where she lives, you only need to get Chuck on the case. You'd have her address in less than 10 minutes.

“Clara did ask for a divorce, but didn't you already deny her that? Also, she talked to me and listened to my advice. She told me she wouldn't talk about getting a divorce unless you brought it up.” Yohan complained internally. “Grandma, why did you have to give Clara any advice at all?”
