“You live in the mountains, Mr. Fowler, and rarely come to the city. Hence, you might not know this. Every property that Morris Corporation built, whether condos or villas, is extremely popular.

“The quality of these properties is great as well because the Morris family’s boys all live in the properties that their company built,” said Liam.

Clara murmured, “Real estate isn’t doing well now.”

“That is true. Morris Corporation no longer acquires lands to build properties. They have long ventured into other, more profitable industries,” replied Liam.

Liam scanned Clara. His gaze glowed because he didn’t expect Mark’s apprentice to be so young and beautiful.

Among all the young ladies Liam had met, Clara was the most beautiful one.

“Liam, this is my apprentice, Clara Fowler,” said Mark to introduce everyone.

Clara politely greeted..

Liam smiled as he shook Clara’s hand. After that, he turned to Mark and respectfully said, “Let’s head in, Mr. Fowler. The sun is so bright today, and it’s burning hot.”

“Lead the way.”

Mark was polite and let Liam enter first.

In the end, the two men walked side by side as they entered the hotel. Clara and Liam’s secretary followed behind them.

After noticing that Mark and Liam were having a delightful conversation, Clara secretly sent Yohan a text message. It said, “Your bodyguard says you want to talk to me. Send me a location after you’ve finished eating. I’ll go to you.” wwŵw.noveℓwOrM.©(ø)(ṁ)

Clara didn’t bother waiting for a reply after she sent the message. The truth was that she didn’t expect Yohan to reply at all. Plus, he had made it clear that he typed slowly.

Hence, Clara sent another text message that read, “I told you. If anything comes up, just contact me via WhatsApp. You don’t need to send your boys to come all the way to me.”

After sending both messages, Clara shoved her phone back into her pocket.

Meanwhile, Yohan’s expressions showed no changes after receiving the two texts from his wife.

“Did your young wife send you a message?” teased Chuck.

When he first realized that Yohan was married, Chuck was so shocked that he forgot he was a year older than Yohan. As such, he shouldn’t regard Yohan’s wife as anything other than young.

Yohan put his phone back on the table and calmly lied. “No,” said Yohan before he shot a glance at his friend. “I won’t share anything I don’t want to, so stop prying.”

“No, don’t say that,” replied Chuck. “You have to tell me everything. Yohan, you have no idea how horrible! feel now. I want to know what’s going on between the two of you. You said you went to City Hall to wait for the deities to send you a wife. So, how did they send her to you?

“Tell me the specifics. If you don’t, I will lose my appetite and get insomnia. You know how I am. Deep down, I am a gossip monger and especially enjoy hearing gossip about you.”

The former recalled how things were when they entered the hotel. Clara only glanced at Yohan, but she followed Chuck with her gaze. She spent more time staring at Chuck than she did at Yohan.

That made Yohan wonder if Chuck was more handsome than he was.

He also wondered if Chuck was Clara’s type.

Chuck noticed that Yohan was staring at his face, and that caused his smile to dissipate slowly. The former tilted his head down to check. There was nothing wrong with his shirt, so he touched his face. Nothing was on it, either.

“Yohan,” said Chuck. He reached out and waved his hand in front of Yohan before he asked, “Why are you staring at me like this? It’s giving me goosebumps. You didn’t fall in love with me, did you? Are you gay? That’s why you never dated or got married? wŴw.ŊøvElwøR©.cøṁ

“Oh no, what do I do if you’re in love with me? Do I accept your love? Or turn you down?”

Yohan’s eye twitched. He then cursed, “Shut up. You’re the queer.”

Yohan wanted to make it clear that he was into women.
