

Wife 56

Chapter 56

When Ruby said that, her voice softened, and her bravado faded.

“Allen, let’s go to your house and talk things over there,” Liam suggested everyone go to Allen’s house and have a proper conversation.

Just then, Bailey looked toward Mark. Liam immediately introduced him and Clara.

Bailey’s expression softened. She said to Mark with an apologetic tone, “Mr. Fowler, I’m sorry. Uncle Liam brought you all this way only to have you witness such a scene. If you don’t mind, please come to our home for a cup of coffee.”

She knew that Liam had brought Mark because he suspected she and Allen were under some supernatural influence, which was causing them to treat Ruby poorly.

She also realized that Mark might be there to mediate their family issues.

Since losing her eldest son, Louie Mcleod, eight years ago, Bailey and Ruby had been locked in a bitter feud. Over the years, Ruby’s family had brought in numerous mediators, including Allen’s sister, but none had succeeded in resolving their conflicts. (w)wW.NoVélwøŔM.(c)om

Mark agreed to go. “Alright, let’s go then.”

Allen and Bailey led Mark forward while Liam walked with Ruby.

Clara followed Katrina, hoping to learn more about the situation from her.

Mark had always said he wished to pass on his knowledge, even though his understanding might be limited in the eyes of true mediums. Unfortunately, Clara wasn’t interested in learning.

Clara believed in the concept of karma. As the saying went, “You reap what you sow.”

Sometimes, karma could be intertwined with past and present lives.

In Ruby’s case, it was clear that her actions had led to the current situation. She had disappointed Allen and Bailey, which resulted in her current suffering.

“Mrs. Anderson, is Mrs. Mcleod a hot–tempered person?”

“She is, but she’s not unreasonable. You’ll see for yourself when you talk to her later. To be honest, I think she brought everything upon herself.” Katrina pointed at Ruby’s back.

“Liam had no choice. She’s his sister, after all. Their parents passed away early, and he and his two brothers were raised by their three wWw.noVélwøŔM.com elder sisters, so he’s particularly close to them.”

Ruby was basically like Liam’s mother.

After becoming successful, he supported her financially. The amount was so substantial that it was impossible to track everything.

If Katrina hadn’t intervened, Liam would have continued giving her even more money.

She blamed Liam for giving Ruby so much money that she could keep gambling even after losing it all. Ruby’s gambling addiction led to her neglecting Louie, resulting in his early death.

Allen and Bailey had only one son and one daughter. The loss of Louie was a devastating blow to them.

At that time, Bailey cried hysterically and fainted several times while holding Louie, who had already lost all vital signs.

She lost her son. Who was to blame?

Ruby was responsible, along with Liam and his siblings, who contributed indirectly.

Chapter h

After a moment of silence, Clara asked, “How did the child die?” wWw.(n)OVêl(w)øŔm.com

Katrina sighed and said, “He drowned in an uncovered well outside someone’s house.”

She recounted, “At that time, Ruby had gone to Allen and Bailey’s supermarket to get something to eat. While leaving, she saw Louie playing outside. For some reason, she decided to be kind and told Allen and Bailey that she wanted to take Louie out for a fun outing.

“Bailey didn’t want her to take him, but Ruby insisted she’d only be gone for a short time. Before Bailey could come out, Ruby had already left with Louie. Bailey said she was busy with customers at the counter, and by the time she finished and went outside, Ruby and Louie were already out of sight.

“Since Louie was already with Ruby’ and she was his grandmother Bailey had no choice but to let her take him out for a while.”

www.ñoVélwøŔM.(c)M