Chapter 105-2

Chapter 105-2

“Chocolat pudding with banana? Thank you,” Amle said as I handed her the bowl. Her bright smile and the happy look in her eyes as she took a spoonful of it, was the reward I needed. I placed a kiss on her hair as I sat down next to her.

“Any time,” I said. Next to Amie, Luna Beatrice seemed just as happy with her fruit and ice cream. It was nice to sit and look into the fire and enjoy the evening. I let my thoughts wander. When we were ready to start trying for a pup it might be good for me to get some advice on how to handle my need to protect Amie. It was song as it was, add a pup to it and I could see myself going slightly overboard. Fortunately I had Sam and Jake, and I could ask Amie’s dad as well. He had survived two pregnancies with her mom, he had to have some good information.

‘What are you thinking about? You are smiling from ear to ear,’ Ami asked in our private link.

‘The future, it looks good,’ I told her. She hummed and offered me a spoon full of her treat. I accepted it even though I knew I wouldn’t like it. I wouldn’t turn down when she offered me. I must have made a face because Amie giggled.

“Just say ‘no thank you’ if you don’t like it,” she said.

“I like it. Kind of,” I objected. She looked at me. “It’s the banana. It’s too sweet and sticky,” I confessed. Both Luna Beatrice and Alpha Jonas laughed. Amie just shook her head and offered me a new scoop, this time without bananas. It was much tastier.

“Thank you, sweetheart,” I told her.

As we got ready to head home two days later, we could confirm the trip had been successful. There had been four new matings. Three of the couples had decided to settle down in our pack while LouAnn had decided to move to Winter Peak pack to be with her mate. All of them had solved the move the same way as Ramses and his mate. It meant three of our pack mates would be going with the Winter Peak pack and we would get to host LouAnn’s mate for a couple of weeks. We also had a signed alliance with Winter Peak pack. We were more than happy about it and looked forward to working with them in the future. I offered to drive back to let the newly mated take the back seat. Amie sat next to me and looked relaxed and happy. She made some small talk with the two in the back, but mostly left them to themselves. When we finally passed onto our pack land, I enjoyed the feeling of being back.

“Finn, honey, is there something you forgot to tell me?” Amie asked as we got to the village. I thought about it as we parked outside the pack house.

“No, don’t think so,” I said.

“So the fact they are building an extension to our house was not something you thought I should know?” she asked, sounding more amused than angry.

“Oh. Yeah, it might have slipped my mind. I asked them to start while we were away so we wouldn’t have to live with the house in a mess for too long,” I admitted. I felt sheepish about forgetting to tell her. Amie laughed and kissed me as we got out of the car.

“Thank you. Have you picked out the wallpapers and floor as well?” she asked. I may be forgetful from time to time, but I wasn’t suicidal.

“No, I will leave that up to you since it’s your office. And if you want to change anything else while you are at it, feel free to do so,” I said.

“I like our house as it is. But we might need to repaint the living room after they made space for a new door. And thank you for letting me design my office, I have never done something like that. will be fun.” I smiled and nodded. It was one more thing that was falling into place in our new life. I was enjoying watching how our life together was changing things around us, making physical changes that served as evidence for the new way of life.
