Chapter 117-2

*It is, ft  Amie said. I looked in the rearview mirror and she fill a soft smile on her lips at the lonked out of the window. When we pulled up in front of the pack house, Matilda, Medow and Shelly stond waiting with Martins and Rose. We got out and Amie introduced he parents to them. It was cleat my Hunt and Amie’s mother hit it off from the start

“We have a meal waiting for you and then you can rest for bit” mevant told we.

“Oh, I think I may have stuffed myself full of snacks,” Amie said. “1 sorty” My aunt smiled and patted her on the arm.

“I would prefer that you eat food, but if you were hungry, it’s better that you eat then starve. We will put some aside for you.”

“She is right.” Amie’s mom agreed. I happily put my arm around Amie as we walked into the dining hall. The more people who spoiled her, the better. We ate in the almost empty dining hall. Jake and Sam were happy being home with their mates and pups and after a while, Cadence and Mari joined us as well. After we had eaten Amie and I took her parents and showed them our house.

“Oh, this is amazing, Amie’s mother said as we stood on the back porch, looking out over the garden, the meadows and the creek.

“Did you build the town from scratch?” her father asked.

“Yes. When we arrived here, about nine years ago, there were only forests and mountains,” I told him.

“Impressive. Nine years isn’t that long to get a village running.”

“We were motivated and it was important for us to feel at home. I think it helped that the first of us who came here had been part of the same pack for a long time. We were used to working together. We had picked up a new member or two on our way here, but it was mostly wolves from the old pack,” I said. Ron nodded and hummed.

“We have made up the guest room for you. I hope you will like it,” Amie said.

“I’m sure it will be fine,” her mom said. We decided to rest for a couple of hours. Then we would take a walk around the village. As Amie and I got into our bed, after making sure her parents had settled in, I enjoyed being back home with Amie snuggled up against

1. me.

“We need to think about a new sleeping arrangement soon,” she said as she found her spot.

“Why?” I asked, feeling a little upset at the thought.

“How long do you think I can sleep on my belly?” she asked. It made sense when I thought about it. Her pregnant belly would soon be an issue for her sleeping like she always did.

“We will just flip you around and you can sleep on your back,” I suggested and kissed her nose when she scrunched it up.

“I don’t like sleeping on my back,” she objected.

“I’m not going to carve out a hole in our bed for your belly,” I simply said. “Now go to sleep and we will solve it when we wake up.”

“But…”

“No buts. Remember when you stopped me from installing a baby gate in the middle of the night? This is me stopping you. Go to sleep Red.”

“It’s not the same. The baby gate is months away. This is maybe weeks,” she told me. I chuckled.

“At least we know it won’t happen during the next two hours. Go. T Sleep,”

Fine.

“Love you.”

“Love you too.”

I love getting a new chapter every day but I also want more
