

Game of Destiny – A Thrilling Tale of Power, Love & Fate

Chapter 62

"I have never heard that legend before," Jake said. We all agreed with him.

"We have all heard the legend of how werewolves were created to protect the moon goddess, this was nothing like it. So what if it is a clue in disguise?" Amie suggested. I nodded.

"So the man and the wolf carrying each other on their backs," I thought out loud.

"It may be telling us to do the same?" Jake asked.

"That would make sense as it would mean we couldn't be five, it needs to be even numbers and that's why I'm in here," Rames said.

"Oh. That's a good point," Amie agreed.

"Hopp up," I told her and turned my back to her. She jumped up on my back with a giggle. "Ready to test this?" I asked her.

"Sure," she agreed.

"Everyone be quiet. If you hear a click, let us know," I told everyone. I slowly moved forward to the place Sam had been when the log had swung down. Nothing happened and soon we reached the wall. Nothing was triggered.

"Sweet. Up you go, Jake," Sam said. They joined us at the wall.

"How do we get over it?" Amie asked.

"Now we know it's safe. I can get a running start and leap up. Just hold on," I told her. I backed up, ran up to the wall and jumped up. I got a good grip on the top of the wall and could lift both me and Amie up.

'Don't tell anyone, but that was kind of hot,' she mindlinked me.

'Don't tell me things like that in the middle of the game,' I said.

'Fine I won't tell you.'

'I change my mind, I want to know what you think is hot,' I said as I watched Sam take a running start and leap at the wall. He made it as well. 'Ramses sit tight, we will get you out' I mind linked our teammate we had left behind.

'Alpha, there is a new line to the text,' he linked back to all of us. We looked back and he was right, a new line of symbols had appeared.

'Can you see my key and read it?' Jake asked.

'I can. Thank you for leaving it.' Jake shrugged.

'Hard to take the floor with you,' he said, and we all chuckled.

'It says: Looking forward can make you understand the present,' Ramses told us.

"What does that mean?" I asked out loud.

"Look at the floor behind us,' Jake said. I turned around, still with Amie on my back. What we had seen as a wall was really a ledge. We stood on a flat floor. There was a large floor surface with a grid in front of us. Each square was about two by two feet in size. In the middle of each was a symbol. The grid was four squares wide by nine squares long.

"I'm going to guess bad things happen when you step on the wrong square," Sam said.

"Take my shoe off," Jake told Sam.

"What?" Sam asked.

"Take my shoe off."

"I heard you, I was more curious about why," Sam added. Amie sighed, bent forward towards the leg Jake was holding up and pulled his shoe off. We all had sturdy hiking boots on our feet.

"Toss it on a square in the first row," Jake told her. Amie slammed the shoe down on a square in front of us. The sides of the cave came rushing out over the floor and smashed into each other as they met in the middle. Then retracted again.

There was a stunned silence.

'What the fuck was that noise?' Ramses asked.

"What the actual fuck!" Sam shouted. "Are they crazy? We could have become flatbread if we stepped onto that floor," he added. I bent down and picked up Jake's shoe, it looked like it had survived the smashing okey. I handed it to him.

"How do we solve this?" I asked.

"We need to look forward," Amie told me. We all looked forward. On the other side of the floor, there was another wall.

Not as high as the one we just climbed, but not far from it. I could just see a door set into a wall further into the dungeon.

"That door has symbols on it,'" Jake said.

"Yeah. But I can only see four rows, the floor has nine," Amie said. She and Jake looked at each other.

"Oh," they both said.

"Oh?" I asked.

"Let me down, I need to sit on your shoulders," Amie told me. I reluctantly let her down, worried it would trigger some new trap. But she got down without an issue. I hunkered down and she got onto my shoulders. I steadied her as I got back up.

"I can see it!" she exclaimed.

Just a heads up: novel5s.com is the only place to read the complete version of this book for free. Don't miss out on the next chapter—visit us now and continue your journey!

"See what?" I asked.

"The bottom of the door. The angle was too steep before, we could just see the top part. But the door also has nine rows of symbols. The one in the bottom left corner is glowing," she told us. Sam and I looked at each other.

"Bottom left corner it is," he said and walked over to it and stepped on the square. Nothing happened. I joined him, it was a little cramped, but we made it work.

"Is something happening?" I asked.

"Yes! The symbol second from the left on the second row is glowing," she told us. Sam and I moved to the square and we continued to move over the floor after the directions of Amie and the door.

'We made it across the floor' I mind linked Ramses as we stood on the other side of the squares. As the wall was lower, I didn't need a running start to climb it. Now I could see the door with the symbols on it. None of them were glowing. To the left of the door there was what looked like a tunnel.

'I can see new symbols,' Rames told us as Sam had joined us. "Step by step, everything has its own place. The whole will bring freedom, but what has been sacrificed will be lost,' he read.

"The easy part of that is the tunnel will lead us to the outside but we will lose Ramses," Jake said.

"We won't be doing that,'" I told them. They all agreed.

"Step by step," Sam hummed. "Oh baby, gone get to you girl," he sang. "Great, now I will have that on my mind for weeks."

"What if we need to press the symbols in the order they lit up?" Jake asked.

"That would fit the clue. 'Everything has its own place'," I said.

"Does anyone remember the order?" Amie asked. There was silence. "Great." We took a moment to think and started to talk about how we had moved.

"Are we confident?" I asked.

"No, but I don't think we will have a sudden epiphany either, so we need to go with it," Sam said. I hesitated. My instinct told me I should push the symbols. But I was carrying Amie on my shoulders. If a trap was set off, we would both be caught in it.

'Just do it, Finn. We will be okay,' Amie mindlinked me. I took a deep breath and stepped up to the door. I pressed the nine symbols in the order we had agreed on. Then I jumped back. The symbols lit up, but nothing else happened.

"I think you need to use the handle, like any other door," Amie pointed out. I sighed and tried the handle. The door opened. Nothing exploded, nothing shot out or slammed down. Behind the door was a stair leading down.

"Down we go," Jake said. I mindlinked Ramses and told him what was happening. We walked down the stairs and ended up in a small square room. On the opposite wall was a door with the classic green 'Exit' sign above it. The room's walls were decorated in symbols and there were two benches, one on each side wall.

'There is a new line; Exit is the way out,' Ramses told us.

Just a heads up: novel5s.com is the only place to read the complete version of this book for free. Don't miss out on the next chapter—visit us now and continue your journey!

"It can't be that simple," I said.

"No, it can't. The speaker said we would have a chance to set Ramses free. Not that it would be automatic," Amie agreed. We looked around to see if we could see another exit sign or something like it. We found nothing.

"This reminds me of the symbols at the beginning," Jake said, pointing at a couple of symbols.

"They do look like them," Amie agreed.

"Okay, I might be wrong. But are we supposed to spell 'exit' with the symbols on the walls?" Sam asked. We all looked at him.

"You are a genius!" I told him.

"Ramses, describe the symbol for 'E',' I mindlinked him.

'Eh, it's a circle with a squiggly thing going from the centre of the circle down to the right,' he told us. Jake and Sam took the left wall and Amie and I took the right.

"Found it!" Amie said, reaching up almost to the ceiling to point at it.

"Has anyone found another one?" I asked. No one had. One by one we found the symbols and then we pressed them in the correct order. There was a click and we all dived for the floor. I tried to get down in a way that didn't hurt Amie. The click was from a secret door opening on the right wall.

'Alpha, a door has opened in the cell wall,' Ramses told me.

'Go through it. I think it will lead you to us,' I said. It didn't take long for Ramses to join us.

"So we just walk outside now?" Sam asked.

"I guess so," I said and opened the door marked exit. We stepped out into the forest and a horn sounded.

"Congratulations, Blue Mountain pack. You have completed the third game. Your time was one hour and forty two minutes. All of your team made it out. Please follow the official and he will show you to the rest of your pack," the speaker said. I gave Amie a hug and the others a pat on the back. We had done it again and without anyone losing a limb or turning into a pancake. We joined the rest of the pack. The spectators were sitting in large movie theatres looking at a screen. The screen was divided in four, each part showing an identical dungeon.

"You did great," Willie told us as we sat down.

"Had me scared senseless half of the time," my aunt said. But she gave us a smile as she made sure we had food and water. We looked on the screen and saw a team trying to put in the correct symbols on the door. The symbols lit up like they had done for us. But when they grabbed the handle to twist it, ten inch spikes shot out of the handle and pierced his hand. I jerked out of instinct and the palm of my hand started to itch. I scratched at it until Amie took it in her hand.

'I would pay good money to watch your brother carry his Beta on his back through the dungeon,' she mindlinked me.

The water I was drinking spurted out my nose as I tried to cough and laugh at the same time.

'Are you trying to kill me, Red?' I asked. She just giggled.