Chapter 1231

Robert walked straight into Dream Pavilion and said with a smile, "Long time no see, Mason!"

Mason was surprised.

"A-Are you the head of the Sandel Family from Eastcliff?"

Robert had been to Woodside before, and he was considered quite a big shot then.

Mason had received him upon his arrival at the time.

Robert smiled lightly and said, "You're right; that's me. I'm sure you know these people too—they're the heads of the Ten Greatest Families of Eastcliff as well." Mason nodded.

Almost everyone behind Robert had been to Woodside before, so Mason recognized them all.

In the afternoon, Matthew and Crystal walked around Woodside. He bought some more medicinal herbs, ate dinner, and went back to the villa with Crystal.

Back at the villa, Crystal sat next to Matthew.

As she was watching him classify the medicinal herbs, she asked curiously, "Matthew, are these Seven-Leafed Lotuses really that precious?"

Matthew answered, "It depends on who it is for. If one doesn't know the real use of these lotuses, then they would be equivalent to an ordinary Thousand-Year Ginseng. However, if one knows the efficacy of them, then the herb might be extremely useful!"

Crystal was immediately excited.

"Really? Matthew, do you know the efficacy of these lotuses, then?"

Matthew didn't answer, but how could he not know? The Seven-Leafed Lotus was also an extremely rare medicinal material in the inheritance of the jade pendant—they could be used to refine the Strength Condensing Pill.

And this pill was of great significance to those who practiced martial arts.

They could condense and thereby further enhance one's internal strength.

To put it simply, a Strength Condensing Pill could enhance one's cultivation to make it more effective.

Although that woman was wearing Crystal's clothes, their weights were different.

As soon as Matthew picked her up, he felt that something was wrong.

But he realized it too late. He felt pain in his chest as a sharp blade stabbed directly toward his heart.

However, Matthew was quick to act.

He quickly threw the woman in his arms out and dodged to the side.

As a result, the blade failed to stab his heart, but it slashed a huge cut across his chest, and blood spurted out.

The woman rolled on the ground.

Like an ape, she jumped over swiftly and attacked Matthew again.

Matthew retreated as he avoided the woman's attack.

But she was too fast, and Matthew was pretty badly injured, causing him to slow down.

After a few attacks, the woman had already drawn a few more cuts on Matthew's body.

Matthew slowly explained what happened just now and said solemnly, "Mr. Arnold, I suspect that there is an impostor among us."

Ambrose couldn't help but be stunned.

"Impostor? Why do you say so?"

Matthew said solemnly, "The killer must have hidden in Miss Harrison's room ahead of time, so he was able to avoid me and come down from upstairs! Also, we only began our stay in the afternoon—only your people know which room Miss Harrison and I are staying in."

Ambrose's expression suddenly became extremely cold. He clenched his fists and said seriously, "Matthew, don't worry. I will definitely investigate this matter and give you a satisfactory answer! If it was indeed my people who leaked the news, I will definitely not tolerate it!"

Outside the house, Mason shuddered when he heard the conversation between the two.

He quickly ran to the back mountain and found Robert and others hidden here.

The assassination of Matthew shook the entirety of Woodside.It was known that nothing like this had ever happened when Woodside was under Ambrose's rule these many years.

And this time, someone actually dared to act in Ambrose's area meant for his honored guests, which was equivalent to provoking him.

Ambrose sent out everyone from Woodside that night.

While locking down the area, they searched the entire place, making sure to find the perpetrator no matter what it took.

At the same time, Ambrose also called over all the guards who were in the villa's vicinity that day to inspect them individually.

He wanted to find out who had leaked the news of Matthew's whereabouts.

At 3.00AM, Mason's team finally found something.

They found two suspicious people in the outskirts of Woodside.

Mason and the others attacked and killed one, while the other fled in the chaos.

After a few more cups of tea, Matthew noticed that Ambrose's eyes were gleaming with a green light.

His complexion suddenly changed, and he rushed to Ambrose's side immediately, reaching out to grab Ambrose's neck.

Ambrose subconsciously wanted to resist, but Matthew whispered something in his ear.

A bright light flashed in Ambrose's eyes, and he immediately pushed Matthew away with a palm.

Crystal, who was at the side, looked bewildered.

"What are you two doing? Mr. Arnold, what's wrong?"

Ambrose staggered to his feet, and while stepping back, he shouted loudly, "Someone...I need someone here! Someone poisoned the tea!"

A group of people rushed in immediately from outside the door.

When everyone saw the situation at the scene, they were at a loss.

At this moment, Mason hurriedly brought more people in as well.

As Matthew was about to check up on Ambrose, Mason stood directly in front of him, blocking his way.

"There is no need for your help. We have a lot of talented people in Woodside, so we don't need to bother you for this trivial matter. Mr. Larson, why don't you continue telling me about what happened just now?" Matthew frowned.

"Mason, what are you doing?" Mason said coldly, "I have no other intentions. I just wanted to inquire about something. Since everyone drank from the same pot of tea just now, how is it that only my father was poisoned, but you are fine?"

As soon as these words came out, everyone in the room looked at Matthew.

Matthew's expression turned cold.

"Mason, are you suspecting that I did it?" Mason sneered.

"I just hope you can give me an answer, Mr. Larson. But why are you acting so nervous? Are you by any chance feeling guilty?"

Matthew said indignantly, "Why should I feel guilty? What else is there to ask about this? Yes, we drank from the same pot of tea, but not from the same cup. The poison could have been placed in the cup."

Mason nodded.

When Mason saw this, he was secretly delighted. He immediately waved his hand, letting a few people shackle Matthew.

Then, they really took Matthew to the dungeon at the back.

The dungeon in Woodside was specifically used to detain people who violated the rules of Woodside.

Matthew was taken to the innermost part by Mason himself—there was no one imprisoned in this vicinity.

He locked Matthew in one of the cells, then turned and left.

Alone in the cell, Matthew proceeded to sit down with his legs crossed.

Not long after, footsteps sounded in the distance.

Matthew looked up and saw a few people walking over.

These people were wearing guard uniforms.

They walked to the cell as if they were looking for Matthew, but he closed his eyes and ignored them.

Matthew came to a realization.

Robert smiled and said, "Matthew, do you want to know who did all of these for us? Hahaha! Today, I'll let you die in clarity!"

He turned his head and shouted, "Mason, what are you doing hiding over there? It's gotten to this, so just come out and show yourself!"

In the darkness, Mason walked out slowly.

His expression was evil, and his eyes were malicious.

Matthew frowned when he saw Mason.

"It's you!?"

Mason's face was cold.

"That's right. It's me! Why? You didn't expect it to be me, did you? From the moment you insulted me, you should have seen this coming! I'll have you know that no one, no one can insult me. If you do, you have to pay with your life!"

Robert and others were all furious as they discovered that this time, they were really fooled by Matthew.

At this moment, Ambrose waved his hand and shouted, "Kill them at once!"

A group of people from outside rushed in immediately.

They were the guards that Ambrose had personally trained.

Mason looked terrified and said in a trembling voice, "Dad, this...this has nothing to do with me..."

Ambrose said coldly, "Nothing to do with you? Hmph! Do you think I'm deaf? I heard everything you said just now, loud and clear!"

Mason almost collapsed to the ground.

He knew that this time, he was done for.
