

Chapter 2 Completely Disappointed

"I told you before that a woman like her doesn't deserve to marry into our family!" Russell's mother, Lydia Kameron, said loudly.

Teresa Kameron, Russell's sister, had been watching this situation unfold quietly. Finally, she chimed in, saying, "Mom's right, Russell. Just divorce her already!"

Hearing their hateful comments, Belinda couldn't help but laugh at herself bitterly.

She and Russell had been married for three years.

And throughout those years, she always did whatever the Kameron family asked of her. In the end, she got nothing but disdain and harsh criticism in return!

They didn't even bother to listen to her side of the story.

How ironic!

Just then, someone reached for Belinda's hand and held it tightly. She looked up in surprise and found that it was Rena. The Kameron matriarch had come to her aid, glaring at everyone angrily.

"Bella would never do such a thing!"

Her firm words showed whose side she was on.

All of a sudden, Belinda felt a lump form in her throat.

Rena was the only person in this wretched family who had treated her well.

After saying that, Rena was about to lead Belinda away when Teresa suddenly stopped them.

"Grandma, you can't just say that! Belinda clearly pushed Cassidy down the stairs. Everyone saw it!"

Teresa jabbed her thumb at Cassidy, who was still sitting on the ground helplessly. "Look at how badly injured Cassidy is! If she wasn't so kind, we would've called the police by now! Grandma, you can't just take Belinda's word for it!"

"Get out of my way!" Rena snapped angrily. As she spoke, she glanced at Cassidy, who was watching her reaction intently.

She never liked this woman, and she refused to believe that Bella would do such a thing as hurting others.

But Teresa turned a deaf ear to her grandmother's orders and continued to criticize Belinda harshly. "Russell just wants an apology. Belinda hurt Cassidy, yet she refuses to say sorry. It's outrageous! You can't just protect her like this!"

Bypassing Rena, Teresa shoved Belinda violently. "Are you even listening to me? Apologize to Cassidy right now, or I won't let you go!"

Caught off guard, Belinda immediately lost her balance upon being shoved.

Rena stretched out her hand trying to catch her, but then she suddenly felt an overwhelming wave of dizziness. Soon, she blacked out and collapsed to the ground in a heap.

"Grandma!"

"Mom!"

"Mrs. Kameron!"

Chaos broke loose. In a state of panic, everyone hovered around the Kameron matriarch in an effort to lend a hand.

Meanwhile, Belinda, who was tossed aside like trash, helplessly struggled to stand up as blood oozed from the gash on her forehead. She felt so dizzy and exhausted that even after several attempts, she failed to stand up.

At last, she could do nothing but watch as Rena was carried away on a stretcher. The deafening sound of an ambulance's siren wailed until it faded in the distance.

The next second, a pair of leather shoes appeared in her sight out of a blue.

Before Belinda could even raise her head, she heard the man's indignant voice. "You'll never be as good as Cassidy!"

What? She would never be on Cassidy's level?

After saying that, Russell left without giving her a chance to respond.

Belinda's heart ached.

It was true that she was no match for Cassidy.

She was neither vicious nor cunning, unlike Cassidy.

That was precisely how she ended up in this position.

Everyone pitied Cassidy and despised her thanks to Cassidy's schemes.

Blood kept trickling down from the gash on Belinda's forehead, mixing with the tears that rolled down her cheeks.

She lay on the floor helplessly and looked around in a daze. Why on earth had she insisted on staying in this marriage?!

"Move it and let us do our job!"

"We need to mop the floor. Hurry and get out of the way!"

"Look at her. How could the daughter-in-law of the Kameron family let herself go like this? Ha-ha-ha..."

The servants' mockery buzzed in her ears, making her nauseous.

Belinda struggled to raise her head and looked at them. Her vision was blurred, and she spoke in a hoarse voice. "Help... Help me call an ambulance..."