

Chapter 9 Will You Give Me A Chance

After making sure their friends got into their taxis safely, Belinda walked down the deserted street with Calvin.

Calvin was clearly drunk. He followed Belinda haphazardly and mused aloud, "Bella, I like you! I've liked you for a long time now, actually! It was love at first sight. I swore to myself that I'd protect you forever, but later you got married, and I had no choice but to keep it all to myself. I want nothing but you to be happy. But now that you're divorced... Will you give me a chance? I won't let anyone hurt you, I promise! I... I won't let you suffer either. Never!"

Hearing this, Belinda stopped in her tracks.

She turned her head and looked at Calvin, who was smiling at her goofily. She smiled back, but her smile was bitter and devoid of warmth.

It had been around five years since Belinda and Calvin first met.

It was rather a short period of time compared to how long she had known Russell. Nevertheless, Calvin apparently cared about her more than her own husband did.

Unfortunately, Belinda saw Calvin as nothing more than a friend!

And in her eyes, they could only be friends.

"You're drunk, Calvin. You don't know what you're talking about. Come on, let's head back."

Belinda hailed a taxi and helped Calvin get in the backseat. She, on the other hand, sat in the passenger seat.

But before getting in the taxi, she took out her phone and sent a private message on Twitter. The message consisted of only two words—"It's time."

Then she turned off the phone, took out the SIM card, and threw it out the window.

Early the following morning, Twitter was in an uproar.

A lot of celebrities with a big following on Twitter had shared the same video. It was a video of Rena Kameron's 80th birthday party, and it could be seen that it was taken in secret, but the audio was clear enough.

In fact, Cassidy's voice was rather distinct.

"You're the one who stole my man! I was supposed to marry Russell, not you! Do you really think I'd let you get away with it? No!

What do you think the people down there would say if I suddenly fell down the stairs? Russell loves me, not you. If I said that you pushed me, he'd definitely believe me. Will he be able to forgive you then? I can't wait to find out!"

Then, after flashing Belinda a wicked smile, Cassidy fell over backwards down the stairs voluntarily.

The video proved that Belinda didn't touch her at all!

A few hours later, Twitter exploded again. Another video was posted, but this time, it was the longer and more complete version of the trending apology video from the day before.

The video showed a scene wherein Russell left the ward midway and Cassidy's face changed in an instant. The softness on her face disappeared completely, and was replaced with a look of complacency. "How does it feel to be forced to apologize for something you haven't done, Belinda? Can't you see that I'm the only woman Russell cares about? Better get a divorce as soon as possible. I'm the real Mrs. Kameron, not you!"

As soon as the two videos were released, everyone on the Internet went crazy.

Someone even had the two apology videos analyzed professionally. It turned out that the second one was the complete and unedited version of the first!

It turned out that Belinda was the real victim here, yet she was the one who was forced to apologize for something she didn't do!

Who would've thought that Cassidy, who looked as harmless as a lamb, was actually such a vicious person? She was even crazy enough to fall down the stairs on purpose to gain sympathy from the others!

Now, Cassidy was painted as a shameless home-wrecker. What a cunning and vicious creature she was!

The netizens joined hands and began to bash Cassidy. Their abusive comments grew worse and worse.

On the other hand, some netizens celebrated Belinda's divorce.

"Such a blind and heartless man doesn't deserve Belinda! Good thing she finally divorced him!"

"Good riddance! He probably knew about what his mistress was up to this whole time. I'm happy Belinda finally cut them off!"

"Poor Belinda! I hope she'll find happiness..."