Chapter 401

Chapter 401 Incompetent People Should Study

She might look calm, but her eyes were tinted with concern.

Even a fool was aware of the great benefits if the plan worked.

For the sake of interests, her father might give his approval.

If that happened, Gloria would rise to fame, and her position would be in jeopardy.

This was appeasement.

A smile was Gloria's only response.

Claude turned back to Angela and said, "This happened because of your negligence. I need you to write a review of the whole thing."

Despite her agitation, Angela took a breath and replied, "Okay."

"A review is not enough." Yvonne was relentless.

The gloom in Claude's eyes grew thicker.

On the same side as Gloria's father, Yvonne and Ted had always defied him. He just hadn't figured out a way to sack them.

"Of course not." Claude ate the humble pie.

Oliver backstabbed him, saying, "Emotionally, we should consider the chairman's reputation and cut Miss White some slack. However, this matter has been known to a lot of people. It will be against justice if Miss White stays in the office while we're working with the Brown Group, and people will think our chairman is prejudiced. In my opinion, a suspension is necessary."

“Suspension?” The dissenters frowned at him. “What do you mean by that!” Howard sulked.

Agreeing with her friend, Yvonne snorted, “Shouldn’t she be suspended? Incompetent people should study.”

Angela was stunned.

Yvonne is so bold!

Howard lost his tongue.

According to the rules, she indeed should be suspended.

Angela trembled with rage. Just as she was about to say something, Gloria once again beat her to it.

In a pretentious way, she said, “This is all my fault. I failed to take everything into consideration. I’m sorry, everyone. I...”

“You didn’t do anything wrong. You were just doing your job,” Yvonne interposed in a softened voice and looked at Gloria with satisfaction.

Gloria pursed her lips, not knowing what to say.

Angela felt like exploding if the meeting didn’t end here.

She had been routed in every confrontation with Gloria.

Her position in the Collins family, Jordy’s heart, and society were jeopardized.

And now?

Gloria was going to take away her position in the company.

Why does Gloria survive every time? Why wouldn’t she die?

Angela regretted not getting rid of Gloria along with her father.

She took a breath and said, “Yeah, I should be. It happened due to my negligence, and I’ll willing to accept any punishment.”

Claude was fuming. In fact, he was incompetent to be the chairman. He lacked the executive ability and authority of Gloria’s father. Many people were defiant.

Angela was responsible for everything.

Claude concluded, "Well then, a review and suspension. Now let's get back to the proposal."

His words distracted everyone. Under their gaze, Claude added, "I don't think Gloria should step in."

Chapter 402

Chapter 402 Gloria Is So Lucky

Gloria remained composed.

Although Claude compromised and punished her daughter, he would not put her in charge.

Not surprising

Claude continued, "As Angela said, Gloria doesn't have much experience. People from the Brown Group would never admit their fault if there were any. Instead, they would pass the bucket to us, which would affect the reputation of our company. In light of this, we're going to need an experienced and capable person to represent us."

Oliver narrowed his eyes. "But according to Mr. Brown, he'll work with us on the condition that Gloria takes charge. If we send over another person, there's no way he'll agree."

Howard put in, "There will be necessary negotiations. Before that, we should select the person in charge and a good negotiator to communicate with Mr. Brown. Meanwhile, Miss White should tell Mr. Brown that she's incompetent to do the job."

With a complicated expression, Angela looked over and said, "Gloria, I hope you'll talk to Mr. Brown for the greater good."

Unperturbed, Gloria nodded. "I can do that. Do you want to send someone over or need me to give him a call first? For the record, Mr. Brown is adamant about this. I can call him now and put the speaker on." "

The crowd was astonished by the fact that she could call him anytime.

On second thought, they found it normal given their close relationship.

Yvonne and Ted exchanged looks. Neither of them talked.

Angela wrinkled her brows. No one knew what was on her mind.

Claude, however, smelled a rat.

Even so, he said in a soft voice, "Well, talk to him first, and we'll know his attitude."

Gloria complied.

Ted and others didn't object.

Claude had a feeling that something was off.

In such a situation, he had to watch and act.

In the presence of everyone, Gloria dialed Jonathan's phone number.

The line soon got through.

Everyone held his breath and perked up his ears.

"How can I be of service, my princess?"

Everyone was blown away.

He is so affectionate. Young people nowadays are different.

Jealousy crept into Angela's eyes.

Gloria is so lucky!

Her mother abandoned her!

Her father is good for nothing. Still, there are men into her.

Gloria was speechless.

Before attending the meeting, she had told Jonathan about the possible phone call through a text message.

He texted her back and said it was okay.

Then he called her this in public and on purpose.

Regardless of the strange stares from the crowd, Gloria got straight to the point. “Mr. Brown, I’ve thought about the program but still feel incompetent to do the job. There are a lot of experienced employees in our company. How about we let them take charge? I’m holding a humble position and am inexperienced. I’m afraid of messing things up.”

Gloria’s words were sincere. Angela and others couldn’t tell that she was playing games.

Everyone held his breath and listened with rapt attention.

After a while, they heard a chuckle.

>Chapter 403 Flat Refusal

“If you’re not in charge, the deal is off.”

The crowd was stunned.

Claude’s underlings were frustrated.

In contrast, Gloria’s supporters were smiling.

This was not surprising since she had informed Jonathan in advance.

She declined again, “But I’m not qualified. There is a high chance of failure.”

“The proposal came from you, and that makes you more capable than anyone else. My princess, have faith in yourself. Have you reported it to your company?”

As Gloria remained silent, Jonathan continued, “Share my thoughts with the executives of your company. Don’t bother trying to persuade me. Without your involvement, the project will lack agility. In that case, I’d rather not initiate it.”

Claude was petrified.

He had wanted to grab the phone and do the talking himself. To his dismay, Jonathan made such a remark that left no room for maneuvering.

The man would not consider his reputation.

Gloria glanced at everyone and shrugged.

Then she tried persuading Jonathan one last time. "Mr. Brown, you should think twice. I'm a newcomer after all."

Jonathan chuckled, "In my mind, even the most experienced worker can't come up with such a perfect proposal."

The crowd couldn't argue with that.

He had a point.

They were also astonished by her proposal.

Besides, this offer was given by Jonathan. This man was their client who had the final say.

The White Group had no right to change the program manager.

It was Gloria who brought them the deal in the first place.

"Anything else? Duty calls."

"Nope," Gloria replied.

"Well, let's have dinner together."

The crowd hadn't expected that.

They looked over at Gloria, but she rejected, "Sorry, I'm busy."

The crowd was blown away.

That was a flat refusal.

Angela stared at Gloria. Jealousy was gnawing at her.

Jonathan chuckled and stopped teasing her. "Another time then, bye." He knew that Gloria had put the speaker on.

He just wanted to let everyone know about their relationship.

"Bye."

The phone call then ended.

Once Gloria stopped talking, the conference room was quiet as the grave.

No one rushed to speak, but their expressions were different.

Ted and his friends were in a good mood.

Although some of them were not Gloria's supporters, they were glad to see Claude and his men frustrated

After a while, Ted said with a grin, "Mr. Brown is indeed adamant. Do you still think it's wise to replace Gloria?"

Under the table, Angela's fists clenched, but she couldn't say a word.

Oliver also smiled. "That's right. It looks like Mr. Brown will work with us only through Miss White who is outstanding. Even if she only had a smattering of knowledge, so what? A shrewd man like Mr. Brown would never do losing business."

The room fell into silence once again.

After some time, Claude stated, "About this matter, we should figure out something. Let's not reply to Mr. Brown for now. In three days, we'll have another meeting to discuss it."

Yvonne grinned. Her eyes were taunting Claude's pointless struggle.

No one argued with Claude again, and the meeting was dismissed.

Gloria didn't move until the others went out.

Angela came up and grabbed her arm. "There is something I want to ask you."

Gloria turned around, scanned the conference room equipped with cameras, and smiled. "You want to do it here?"

Angela gritted her teeth and said without loosening her grip, "Come with me."

Gloria pulled out her arm and snorted in a voice only audible to the two of them, "Cousin, I have a lot of work to do. Two of the five clients you gave me haven't struck a deal with me yet. Since you're suspended, I don't think you can give me instructions anymore. We can talk after my shift is over."

Without another look at the furious woman, Gloria headed toward her office.

Angela was pissed off.

Bitch! I own this company, remember?

vas

She gnashed her teeth. Everyone was laughing at her today. Ashamed of her suspension, she was unwilling to stay in the office for another second.

Words would spread. That vindictive woman would let everyone know that she overruled the case.

If things went on like this, Gloria's dream of working with the Brown Group would come true.

Anger got the better of Angela. After getting into the car, she gave her father a call.

"Angela?" Claude was back in his office.

Angela's brows were locked in a frown as she asked, "Is this a convenient time for you to talk?"

"I know what you're going to say, but we have to keep the partnership."

Angela sulked, "What do you mean by that?"

Claude didn't give a direct answer.

Angela forced the words out of her gritted teeth. "Don't tell me that there is no solution. Are you going to just let Gloria work with Jonathan? Given the capability of that man, he will make the case a big win. Are you aware of the consequences?"

"Gloria will climb up the corporate ladder! She will have a say and even get a promotion! Dad, our job is to kick her out of the company, and you're helping her rise! Even if you want benefits, you should make sure that she poses no threat to us!"

Claude gave a helpless laugh. "Now you're like a burnt child dreading the fire."

"Argh."

"It's okay, sweetheart, don't worry about it. Gloria's shares are in my hands, and she has nothing. Even if she rose to the top, without any shares, she could not become a decision-maker. What are you afraid of?"

Angela chewed over his words and no longer dreaded Gloria that much. However, the uneasy feeling lingered.

"Gloria's biting was unavailable. If this kind of thing happens again, remember to tell me beforehand instead of keeping it to yourself. You're still callow, alright?"

Angela gritted her teeth. "I didn't expect Gloria to play such a dirty trick. You should pay attention to those who are always against you. I can see that they're supporting Gloria. It will affect us."

"I know." Claude was livid and planned to hang up the phone when something occurred to him. He then said in a serious tone,

"By the way, there is something I need you to do."

Angela asked with a wondering look. "What is it?"

“Your suspension isn’t a bad thing. Leave Gloria alone and set a trap first.”

Angela was confused. “What kind of trap?”

Claude replied in a deep voice, “Go home and ask your mother.”

Angela wrinkled her brows. “You’re being mysterious. Fine, I’ll go home.”

Gloria returned to her office.

Everyone gave a puzzled look at her. Unable to hold back, Sheila asked, “Gloria, what kind of meeting did you have?”

Gloria chuckled with composure. “I can’t disclose it now. You have to wait for a few days.”

Sheila nodded in understanding. “That’s alright since it’s confidential, but I have a feeling that you’re closer to success.”

Gloria smiled and said, “I hope so.”

Her words were meaningful.

Everyone seemed to sense something.

So, Sheila is correct?

Is it about Gloria?

Are they talking about the partnership with the Brown Group?

Could it be the main subject of their meeting?

Wow!

Gloria is really something!

People looked at her with admiration.

Next, Gloria was going to take care of the two remaining clients.

Working with Jonathan was one side of the coin. To get closer to the top, she had to convince everyone with results.

Angela would be exasperated if she saw that all her efforts had turned into stepping stones for Gloria.

Gloria,

After sorting out the files, Gloria told Sheila about her plan and went out.

Sometimes, negotiations didn't require an appointment.

She had got enough information and headed straight to a café

With her mask on, she sat in the lobby.

The others only took her for a beautiful lady playing with her phone.

No one knew that it was just her disguise.

About 20 minutes later, a well-proportioned woman came into the café. Her hair was short, and she was wearing a pair of sunglasses. At a glance, people could tell that she was a shrewd and unapproachable businesswoman.

In fact, their previous meetings had been held in this café.

Gloria had done her research and believed her target would appear at this time of the day.

It was not easy to meet this lady.

As she headed toward a booth, Gloria didn't rush over. Instead, she waited in her seat, finished her coffee, and ordered another cup.

Before she could have another sip, a man was seen coming out with a sullen look.

Gloria's eyes swiveled.

This man had entered the booth ahead of that lady. Gloria could imagine the taunting scene.

This was not surprising given Kristina Hayes' sharp tongue, lofty character, and keen eyes. Her patience didn't stand for her tolerance. She never wasted time on unimportant things.

As the lady came out and walked past her, Gloria raised her eyes and whispered, "Ms. Hayes, wait."

Kristina stopped in her tracks and measured the masked woman with scrutinizing eyes.

Gloria took off her mask before a stunning face was revealed.

With her eyes fixed on Gloria, Kristina curled her lips. "Miss White? What a small world!"

Gloria put the mask back on and laughed, "To be honest, I'm here to see you."

Kristina gazed at her, neither talking nor rushing to leave.

Gloria smiled and suggested, "Why don't we talk in the booth?"

Kristina removed her sunglasses. A faint smile was in her pretty eyes. "What's there to talk about?"

Gloria's lips curved up. "You won't know how my proposal is without talking to me. Why don't you take a look? You can turn away at any time."

With that, she opened the folder and handed it to Kristina.

Kristina laid her eyes on the content. After she read a few lines, her face turned serious, and she took the folder.

As Gloria raised her eyes, Kristina walked to the opposite seat, sat down, and pored over the proposal

Gloria observed the expressions of the woman. Her eyes swiveled when Kristina put her sunglasses down on the table.

It was Kristina's habit to wear sunglasses all the time. It was her signature. Unbeknownst to a lot of people, she would take off her sunglasses only when something piqued her interest or caught her attention.

Instead of rushing to speak, Gloria remained quiet.

About 20 minutes later, Kristina put the folder down.

Composure as ever, she said, "The proposal is not bad, but there is a problem with the division of interests."

Gloria nodded and asked, "Does it mean your approval?"

Kristina nodded and replied, "Yeah."

Gloria asked again, "What's your opinion about the division of interests?"

Kristina pondered for a moment and replied, "3:7."

She meant that 30% of the interests would go to Gloria's side.

off the table. You know how to find me, but don't come unless you concede."

With that, she picked up her sunglasses.

Her resolution was plain to see.

Instead of stopping her, Gloria just said with a smile, "Given what I've heard about you, I know that you're not bluffing, but you're advised to give it a second thought. 50:50 is my final offer. If you don't agree, I'll have to find another partner. You know, 50% of the interest is a lot of money."

Kristina took an indifferent look at her and said, "Whatever."

With that, the woman put on her sunglasses and turned to leave.

Gloria's lips curved up. When Kristina just took one step, she said in a casual tone, "Theard that your son has been stalked lately."

Kristina halted and darted a penetrating look at Gloria. "Miss White, is this a threat?"

With a spurious smile on her face, Gloria looked at Kristina. The anger in the latter's eyes didn't daunt her. "Businesswomen make deals. Don't you think?"

Kristina frowned at her.

Two men were standing around the corner. The one at the front turned sideways and saw Gloria's confident gaze at the other woman.

He frowned. Impatience shimmered in his eyes.

The man behind him kept checking the time. In the end, he said in a desperate tone, "Mr. Collins, we're late for the meeting."

Jordy's brows furrowed further.

In the end, he adjusted his tie and went outside without a word.

Gloria raised her eyes, surprised to see the man who was exuding lofty nobility.

What is he doing here?

Kristina followed her gaze to look over.

Gloria looked back at Kristina and said, "Ms. Hayes, are you sure you want to continue our talk here?"

Jordy didn't look at her the entire time. After he got out, however, he couldn't help but glance at the woman in the café. She didn't even turn her head, which irritated him. He pursed his lips and walked away..

Kristina observed Gloria's expressions before standing up. "Come with me."

She turned around and headed to the second floor. Gloria trotted to catch up.

After they got into a box, Kristina closed the door.

She looked at Gloria and asked, "What are you trying to say?"

"I know who the stalker is. I have something on him," Gloria replied in a casual tone. Her message was clear. As long as Kristina said yes to the deal, Gloria would help her take care of the stalker.

Kristina snorted, "What kind of person he is? Can you deter someone immune to both soft and hard tactics?"

"I can." Gloria gave a categorical answer.

Kristina frowned.

Kristina frowned.

Gloria smiled and added, "Corey Hansen is an eccentric man who likes boys, especially those at your son's age. If you don't take precautions, something may happen."

Kristina was expressionless as she gazed at Gloria. "When can you solve the problem?"

"Tonight."

Kristina's sharp eyes glimmered with astonishment, but she soon regained her composure. "If you can stop him, I'll sign the contract with you."

Gloria smiled. "Deal."

Kristina was a woman of her word. Gloria didn't have to force her to sign it now.

"Wait for my good news. You can take this copy of my proposal." Kristina took it from her hand.

Gloria curled her lips and added, "To be honest, I'm confident in sealing the deal with you, but doing you a favor is more convenient. Besides, this is a just cause. You can find my phone number in the proposal. Feel free to contact me."

Kristina gazed at Gloria before replying, "Okay."

In fact, she was satisfied with the proposal. She was just unwilling to sign the contract at such a cost. Of course, that was her thought before Gloria adopted special means.

While observing Gloria's expressions, she said, "I didn't expect an excellent person like you to emerge in the White Group."

Truth be told, she had never thought highly of anyone from the White Group or had never worked with them before.

Gloria halted and looked back at Kristina. "I'll take that as a compliment."

She then walked away.

Chapter 408

Chapter 408 Which One

Since the deal hadn't been sealed yet, Gloria would not reveal much. She just needed to make sure the proposal is not plagiarized or disclosed.

It would be fine as long as the proposal stayed confidential and expandable.

Next, she was going to meet that stalker.

On the way out, she gave Irene a call.

"Norma, remember to call me?"

Gloria felt guilty and apologized, "Sorry, I've been busy lately."

"Just kidding. What's the deal?"

"How is your investigation going?"

"Alas, that woman is foxy, and I haven't found anything useful. The culprit disowned his father, and the latter stopped working at the White's house a long time ago. These things are interconnected, but the evidence is difficult to collect."

Irene exclaimed halfway through her speech, "I'm thinking about something."

“What is it?”

While holding the phone, Gloria went outside, got into her car, and started the engine.

Irene’s tentative voice came. “How about we call the police? It’s easier for them to investigate it.”

“That will alert my enemy. There are still a lot of things about Angela I need to investigate. If we call the police, she will obliterate all the traces.”

“I see.”

Irene’s brows were knitted together, and she sighed. “Don’t worry. I’ll have my men continue tracking. Maybe we’ll find out anything. Just give it more time.”

“Okay, there’s no rush.”

There were no immediate results for many things.

At the Collins Building, the meeting was dismissed two hours later.

Jordy came out with a gloomy face.

Harold followed in light footsteps because his boss was moody today.

He was unsure what his boss needed him to do. Jordy just asked Harold to follow him into the office.

Standing in front of the desk, Harold asked, “Mr. Collins, are there any other instructions?”

He had reported the itinerary to Jordy, so this should be about something else.

“How is your investigation about her?”

Harold was baffled.

He had no idea whom Jordy referred to.

In his view, Jordy was still bearing Gloria in his heart. He just hadn’t realized it or would not admit it. In front of the outsiders, Jordy was indifferent to everything about Gloria. Whenever Gloria was mentioned, he would be apathetic or even annoyed.

Jordy was like that by nature, other than that, Harold would have a reason to believe that he was asking about Gloria.

And now? He didn't have the slightest clue.

Jordy had instructed him to keep an eye on two matters lately.

One was the partnership between Gloria and Jonathan.

The other was Angela's recent activities. He had been asked to figure out if Gloria's fall into the water had anything to do with Angela.

So...

Which one is Jordy asking about?

Harold cleared his throat, looked at his boss, and ventured to ask, "Mr. Collins, you mean... Angela?"

Jordy refused to even take a look at Gloria today. Presumably, he was not in the mood to talk about her.

But...

Chapter 409

Chapter 409 Out of Patience

He noticed that Jordy's face darkened.

Harold was confounded.

Could it be...

He is asking about Gloria?

Just as he was hesitant about correcting himself, Jordy's deep voice rang out. "Go ahead."

Harold heaved a sigh of relief and continued to speak, "The clue remains broken. Angela could be a part of it. She might have obliterated all the traces."

“What about that man?”

The person he referred to was the one who pushed Gloria.

“He ran away. We’re still searching. His father is at home, but...”

“Start from his father.”

Harold paused and nodded. “Okay, I’ve sent someone on the mission.”

Jordy fell silent.

He showed no intention of dismissing Harold.

Harold speculated that his boss might want to know Gloria’s situation. After a moment of hesitation, he continued with his report.

“Yesterday, Gloria went to see Angela and talked about the partnership with the Brown Group. The latter rejected it.”

Harold then unfolded what had happened in the past few days.

S

“The meeting was confidential. I don’t know the details, but I guess they were selecting the representative for the project. It seems that Claude didn’t want to put Gloria in charge.”

Jordy snorted, “What could Gloria do if she were in charge?”

Harold stroked his nose and coughed. “I heard that Gloria’s proposal is unmatched.”

Jordy’s face fell.

It made Harold’s skin crawl, but as Jordy’s most trusted subordinate, Harold had to tell Jordy the truth. Of course, there was something else. He had intended to diss his boss for a long time.

In spite of the pressure, he cleared his throat and continued, “I haven’t been able to collect detailed

In spite of the pressure, he cleared his throat and continued, “I haven’t been able to collect detailed information about it, but her proposal...”

Harold stroked the tip of his nose and stopped talking

Jordy's face clouded over.

As for Harold...

He had told his boss everything. Biting the bullet, he said, "Mr. Collins, are there any other instructions? If not, I should go back to work."

"Go."

Harold nodded and turned to leave.

Jordy was left alone in the office. The look on his face was not a good one.

Just then, the phone rang, and he looked over.

The sight of the caller ID made him frown.

He hesitated for a moment before answering the phone, "Anything?"

His bland tone made Angela feel depressed.

Back home, she talked with her mother and got agitated.

Her mother kept urging her to call Jordy until she agreed.

Angela took a breath before speaking in an injured tone, "Are you busy right now?"

Jordy frowned, asking, "What's wrong?"

Angela's voice turned panicky. "Nothing, I just want to know if you're free."

Jordy frowned again and asked in an indifferent tone, "Why?"

"..."

Angela's brows were locked in a frown. Why didn't he go on asking?

If it were in the past, he would have asked about her grievances.

Now he was impatient about her affectations?

Remarriage Never And Go Away Chapter 410

Remarriage Never And Go Away

Chapter 410

Chapter 410 No Useful Information

Jordy's brows furrowed once again. Even the air in the office turned colder.

Through the receiver, it sent a shiver down Angela's spine.

Her face changed. She muttered after taking a breath, "I was suspended from my job."

Jordy's eyes were glazed.

In the next instant, he pretended that he didn't know anything and did his best to soften his voice.

"What happened?"

Angela's brows were knitted together. From the start, she didn't want to call Jordy, but her mother was relentless. She was asked to let Jordy hate Gloria even more before they moved on to the next step of their plan, but would it work?

She gritted her teeth. In such a situation, she had to go on with it.

"It's confidential. I can't tell you. I... just didn't expect Gloria to misunderstand me. She and I seem to be drifting apart. Gloria taunted and threatened me. What should I do to reconnect with her?"

Angela was well disguised. People would think that she was a helpless cousin rather than a mischief-maker.

The annoyance was distinct in Jordy's eyes. He said, "How am I supposed to help you if you don't tell me?"

Angela's eyes flickered as she sobbed, "You have a point. You're not an outsider. Yesterday, Gloria showed me a proposal and told me about her intention to work with the Brown Group. Mr. Brown required her presence at the site. Gloria is inexperienced. If anything went wrong, her reputation would be at stake and the image of our company would be damaged, so I rejected it."

Jordy's face turned colder.

Unaware of Jordy's real intention, Angela continued to sob, "But Gloria went to see the shareholders without telling me perhaps because of her ambition or other purposes. At the meeting, many people called me incapable and my decision stupid, but I..."

Angela only talked about the trivial and refused to mention a word of Gloria's effort.

Jordy failed to hear what he wanted to know, but there was no way he could ask about it.

Without turning a hair, he said, "So, you got suspended."

Angela froze. This was not a small issue, but Jordy sounded so indifferent.

She took a light breath and said, "I've never received such punishment before. I... was for the good of Gloria and the company."

She was implying that her cousin was ignorant and ungrateful. She treated Gloria so well, but the latter got her in such a situation.

In her view, Jordy would be disgusted.

Then she would proceed with the next step of their plan.

However...

"Angela, your health is poor. Why don't you take the chance to rest for some time? As for Gloria, humph..."

With his snort, Angela's eyes lit up. Grasping the phone, she waited for Jordy's following speech, but he stopped talking.

That was because he realized that he couldn't get any useful information from Angela.

After a while, Jordy's bland voice came again.
