Chapter 801 Wasting Your Energy

Squish!

The dagger went into the flesh.

Jordy's pupils contracted, and he changed color.

Harold also panicked.

Gloria grunted and shoved the man away in no time. She bore the pain and pulled the dagger out.

Her keen senses enabled her to feel danger beforehand and avoided being stabbed in the heart. The dagger wounded her in the flank, but her bones were fine.

However...

The cut was deep, and the blood was gushing out.

"Damn!!!" Jordy snarled.

In such a situation, any other woman would groan and whine.

Gloria, however, thought nothing of it. She didn't show the slightest reliance on him.

After the treatment was done, she stood up on her own and acted like she was immune to pain.

The doctor looked at her in amazement. "Miss White, you are the toughest lady I've ever seen."

Gloria smiled, "Thank you very much."

"No problem, it's my duty. Keep your wound dry in the next few days. The dressings should be changed every day. Strenuous exercise and spicy food are not advised. Keep a balanced diet."

She nodded. "Okay."

They went out of the room. When Jordy came over to pick her up, she turned him down. "I'm fine and can walk by myself."

He glanced at her stilettos and carried her in his arms despite her rejection.

Gloria was stunned.

Gloria froze and felt a little flattered.

She was not used to his kindness. The look in her eyes gave it away.

Is this man really Jordy?

She paused and murmured, "Anything will be fine."

Her adamancy and independence somewhat perturbed him, and he frowned.

Without another word, he strode out of the room and closed the door.

Harold lingered in the living room and waited for Jordy's instructions.

Jordy came to the couch and took out a cigarette.

Harold was surprised because his boss rarely smoked.

Jordy's attitude seemed to get colder. "When are you going to forgo your ego?"

Gloria sensed anger in his voice and looked at him in surprise. "Did anything go wrong?"

Jordy frowned in an instant.

He also wanted to know what had gone wrong.

Gloria was unable to comprehend the situation and said with a calm look, "I can eat by myself. You can go."

She then got up without difficulty. If he hadn't seen her white shoulder covered with blood, he would have doubted that she was not injured at all.

Using one hand, she could still eat with ease. He found his presence there pointless and got up to leave.

God knew how agitated he was.

George sneered, "Fair enough, but why were you so nervous just now? Why did you ask Nydia to take care of her? Show me how uninterested you are! Admit it, you care about her. You can't fool me!"

He was a little upset after Nydia was sent away. There were a lot of people who could look after Gloria. Why did it have to be Nydia?

Jordy's stern gaze landed on George. He was not happy either.

Undaunted, George snorted, "Ugh, a man like you deserve to be single. You're not good enough for Gloria."

Unwilling to talk to the man again, he turned around and headed out.

He was afraid that they would end up quarreling.

Jordy's face was icy cold. After George left, he sat alone on the sofa, lit a cigarette, and spat out rings of smoke.

Seeing that Gloria opened her eyes, Nydia said with a smile, "Right on time. I knew you'd wake up now. Sweetie, have this soup and replenish your energy."

Gloria got out of the blanket, which made Nydia anxious. "Easy, I'll help you to get up. You're a patient and should take care."

She didn't know what to say.

Nydia then saw her sitting up like a healthy person.

"Are you pretending that you're injured?" Nydia sized her up.

Gloria was amused and laughed, "Nope."

Nydia let out a sigh. "You're a tough lady. You should be softer."

Nydia frowned and looked at Gloria. She could no longer hold back. "Who attacked you? Did they hurt the wrong person? Or someone is targeting you?"

"I'm not sure," Gloria smiled. "Go back to sleep. Don't worry, I'll be fine."

She didn't tell Nydia the truth. That would make her friend worry.

Nydia let out a sigh. "Well then, have a good rest. If you need anything, be sure to call me any time. I don't see a reliable man in Jordy."

Gloria chuckled, "I will."

Nydia then left despite her reluctance.

When she got back, George was seen sitting on the sofa. His face was sullen. She frowned and question him, "Why didn't you tell me about Glori injury?"

George glanced at her and replied, "She forbid me to tell you."

"I can't tell you right now, but you'll know. It's not time for Gloria to die yet." The voice was pleasant to the ear but gave people chills.

Angela, who was troubled by confusion and annoyance, took no notice of it. Clutching the phone, she asked in an anxious voice, "When will she die?"

After a moment of silence, the other party replied with ease, "It won't be long."

The phone was then hung up.

Angela put down the phone and wrinkled her brows.

"I don't trust this woman. At such a point, she talked like that. Gloria and Jordy are entangled, and Jonathan has been courting Gloria. She will gain more power and will be more difficult to deal with. What is holding this woman back? She said it would not take long, but I think otherwise."

Met with his daughter's silence, Claude felt helpless, walked to her side, sat down, held her in his arms, and soothed her, "You're my dear daughter. How would I have the heart to scold you? I was too anxious to control my voice and afraid that someone might hear anything. Don't you believe me?"

He looked at his daughter in a gracious manner. His face was a little haggard and covered with stubble. Angela turned to look at her dad, surprised to see him like that.

Her father was a little fat but used to be well-groomed. He had always been elegant, but now there were dark circles under his eyes.

How come he keeps the stubble on his face? It's not like he is on vacation.

Angela sensed something wrong, looked at him, and frowned. "Dad, did anything happen to our company?"

She stopped making a fuss. Their company was what mattered.

She was in the dark and might find an answer in the office.

It was getting dark.

Someone was not sleeping.

In his bedroom, Jordy still looked sullen after a shower. His anger at Gloria hadn't subsided.

His phone rang. It was a call from a number he hadn't saved as a contact.

Jordy and Gloria had the same habit of not saving phone numbers. Their memories were retentive.

It was Harold calling, and he answered the phone.

"Mr. Collins, I've instructed our men to look into it, but those people are good at concealing themselves. There aren't many traces for the time being."
