Chapter 116 He did not like Desserts!

"That is fine with me!"

As Andy finished his speech, Margaret was quick to deny, "Why can't I accept it?"

"It is not as if Penelope will never be conscious again!"

A tenth of share was simply too enticing.

Even if she was acting tough, she had to admit: if Adrian had not placed the offer, no matter how hard much the family may try, they will not obtain as much as he offered.

And if merely marrying Penelope allowed Tyrell to be set for life, why would she be unwilling?

After all, perhaps Penelope regained conscious, she could use these shares to get her the best treatment, or divorce could also be on the table after a few years, she will definitely not be on the shorter end of the stick!

Andy could not help but laugh at her abrupt change of attitude, "But she is an actor, that is pretty unglamorous."

Margaret rolled her eyes, "Andy, can you stop being biased?"

"What is unacceptable about being an actress, isn't Abner's wife also one?

With that, Margaret turned to Cathy attempting to get her backing, "Sister-in-law, tell you brother-in-law how good it is to be an actress!"

Cathy, "…"

How was she to answer Margaret?

She pursed her lips, hesitated, and then opened her lips, "Being an actor is a proper job."

"There is no need for you to explain to me."

Andy was amused by Cathy's behavior; it was not that he looked down on actors, he was simply making fun of Margaret.

With that, he narrowed his vision and stared at Cathy, "I'm not interested in this occupation."

"I'm however interested in you."

He scrutinized her and asked, "Are you getting used to taking care of Arius and Abner as their mother?"

Cathy was startled as she was not expecting this question. A while later, she chuckled, "Not bad."

"They are both very well-tempered and understanding."

Andy nodded, "That's true."

"They take after their mother."

With that, his eyebrows raised, "Do you know about their mother?"

Cathy nodded, "A little."

As the focus shifted away from Tyrell, Aaron cleared his throat, "Abner, are you sure you are willing to spare a tenth of your shares?"

Adrian nodded, "Of course."

"Tyrell is the closest to me, Penelope also happens to be Cathy's friend, what is a tenth?"

Aaron was rather impassioned.

He had a look at Margaret, "Should we not be bringing Tyrell to meet Penelope's parents?"

Margaret nodded her head in excitement, "Yes, of course yes!"

She turned her head around immediately and grabbed Tyrell's arms, "Let us go and meet them now!"

Tyrell did not expect things to turn out so well and was stunned, a second later only he nodded his head, "Sure."

"Let's go now!"

Worried that Adrian would eat his words, Margaret was not willing to wait even for another second. She quickly bade everyone farewell, then tugged Tyrell along to get a change in order to meet Penelope's family.

"Adrian."

At the door, Tyrell raised his evidently sleep-deprived face, "Thanks."

Without Adrian, things would not have been so simple.

He asked Adrian for help yesterday because he knew that marrying Penelope would not go down well with his family.

He was hoping for Adrian and Cathy to act as mediators and slowly convince his parents.

Unexpectedly, Adrian ruthlessly bashed his parents with a tenth, leaving them directionless and defenseless.

Even if Adrian was rich beyond dreams and was not too particular about these shares, it was still a mammoth wedding gift.

He took a deep breath and with a solemn expression faced Adrian and Cathy, "If you need any help in the future, just reach out to me, as long as it is within my means."

Adrian was partially amused by Adrian's prim manner, "Just go."

Tyrell maintained his gaze for a little longer, then only he left the place.

After Aaron's family left, Apollo switched his posture and reclined on the sofa, "Phew, finally it is done."

It was definitely a hairy situation, one that would be almost inappropriate for him to voice his opinion.

Andy shrugged and turned to face Adrian, "Do you think Tyrell's choice was right?"

"There is nothing wrong or right about it, if he wanted it, what's wrong about helping him?"

His expression froze as he continued, "Does it mean every time you helped Karen, it was because Karen was right?"

His question dissolved Andy's smile.

A while later, Andy smiled wryly, "That is true."

"Since it is the person we love, what is there to differentiate between what is right or wrong, as long as he or she is happy."

With that, he profoundly looked at Cathy, "What do you think Cathy?"

Cathy nodded her head cluelessly, "I guess so…"

She did not understand why Andy seemed to be frequently staring at her.

His gaze did not seem to be favorable, rather it was of a probing nature, as if she had done something wrong, and it was rather disconforting.

Arius walked over and most likely detected Cathy's displeasure, "Mommy I'm hungry."

Upon hearing that his grandson was hungry, Apollo summoned his servants to prepare lunch.

"There is no need for that."

Abner winked at him, "My brother is hungry, but he wants to have desserts."

Arius shuddered as he heard the word 'desserts'.

He did not like desserts. The one who clearly loved desserts was Abner!

However, he was in a hurry to get Cathy to leave the Shaws Residence, so he could not rebut.

He smiled hypocritically at Apollo, "Yes, desserts!"

Cathy was surprised, "Arius, when did you pick up an interest in desserts?"

"Just now."

Arius pursed his lips and spit out these two words.

"I can tell you, Arius loves this desserts place in the middle of the city!"

Abner was grinning as he pulled Cathy's hands while he turned towards Apollo, "Grandad, why don't you get your two sons to have lunch with you?"

"My mom is bringing her two sons for cake!"

After witnessing the great relationship between Cathy and the twins, Apollo stroked his beard while laughing, "Go, quickly go!"

"Adrian and Andy shall accompany this old man for lunch."

"You have not shared a meal in quite a while, right?"

Andy nodded.

Adrian grinned while shoving a black card into Cathy's hands, "Enjoy your cake and get a good rest once you're done."

"You did not get to sleep well last night."

His words did not exhibit anything extraordinary, but it reminded Cathy of the crazy things that occurred last night.

Her face blushed like an apple immediately.

She took the card and left with the kids immediately.

As he looked at their silhouette, Apollo laughed in satisfaction, "She's doing really well with the two rascals."

"If you don't mention it, you wouldn't even realize that they are not biologically related."

Apollo turned towards Andy and asked, "Do you think their mother is related to her in any way?"

They looked similar in appearance, related well, and even had alike instinctive actions.

"How is that possible?"

Andy smiled, "Arius and Abner's mother is Karen's old friend, who grew up in an orphanage and did not have any living relatives."

"That is such a pity."

Apollo was visibly disappointed, "It is a pity we don't even know how she looked like."