Chapter 118 If Only You Were Not Married

Cathy helplessly looked at Abner, "Are you sure you can finish?"

"No way!"

Abner glanced at Cathy; it was clear that he was up to something, "But I can bring back some for daddy."

He declared his rights as he turned towards Flynn," Uncle, have you seen my dad?"

"My dad is super handsome. He and my mom are made for each other!"

Abner's childish words amused Flynn, "Of course, I do know of Mr. Bolton." Even if one had not met Adrian, everyone in Ryzan would have heard of him

The legendary man who took over Bolton Group in his youth and resurrected it, reestablishing it as the very peak of Ryzan's commercial scene.

Flynn had stayed in Ryzan for a few years, he was definitely more than aware of the stories surrounding Adrian.

Except...

He had a look at Cathy.

and naïve as she was. "Since you know my dad, don't you think that my daddy and mommy are a pair made in heaven?"

Except he was unaware that Adrian's taste was similar to his, preferring someone who was as pure

Abner's eyes were filled with childlike innocence, "My parents are definitely the best pair in town,

Flynn narrowed his eyes.

He knew that this guy was declaring Adrian's rights and ownership.

However, why would he cooperate?

right?"

He chose to remain silent and shifted his focus towards Arius and Ariel who had their laptops out at this point, "Do you really need to compete here?"

"Sure!"

Ariel bit her lips, "I'm going to prove to him, I, Ariel, am the strongest hacker!"

The battle had officially begun.

"Shut up!"

"Shut up!"

Arius' lips curled.

The waitress brought up the cakes.

"Bro, there's a bug here."

"Little girl, try harder, Arius is much better than you!"

Abner was enjoying his cake while pointing at Arius' screen, giving a live commentary.

He folded his leg while wearing a relaxed complexion.

Ariel leered at him, "You're so disturbing!"

"Wow, another firewall down, you're doing well!"

All of a sudden, two loud childlike shrieks rang.

Arius was glued to his screen, "She is not as weak as you think."

Cathy tried to observe the two prodigies at work but gave up after a while.

The atmosphere started boiling.

She could not understand a single thing.

Computers and hacking, she was destined to never be friends with them.

Flynn responded, "I also know nothing with regards to computers."

She looked at Flynn with an embarrassed smile, "I think scripts fit me better."

"However, Ariel likes it."

"After all, prodigies are typically inherited."

Cathy sipped her coffee, "I don't think so."

His words startled Cathy.

She was not the twin's biological parents.

The ambiance dropped below freezing point.

Flynn chuckled, "That is a good man she found."

"I also agreed that he is a rarity."

"I don't know."

"Why not?"

That's right...

not."

teacher. Unexpectedly, the teacher said that she showed great potential in computing."

"She watched a movie about hackers and thought they were very cool, so she got me to get her a

Flynn sighed, "I even tried to identify her biological parents amongst Ryzan's hacker list but I was

"However, I believe that if they are alive today they must be a coding expert."

She peeked at Arius who was furiously typing, "Both Adrian and I are not great with laptops, but Arius is quite good too."

Else, how could he have tricked so much money out of Willow and Xavier?

Arius had demonstrated to her when he ran a troll company.

Flynn replied, "Perhaps their biological mother is good in it?"

As she pondered, her cheeks blushed.

Flynn was not engrossed with the topic and he shifted the topic subtly, "How is Penelope doing?"

"The guy she likes is planning to marry her regardless of whether she regains consciousness or

They will not inherit her genes. She was so close with them that she had almost forgotten she was a stepmother.

consciousness." Cathy sighed, "But she should be getting married soon."

"She is no longer in a critical stage, however, we do not know when she will regain

Cathy had another sip, "Mr. Jasper, if you were him, would you have done the same thing?"

Flynn changed into a comfortable pose, "I might marry someone who I understand."

"But if I don't or have never even met her, I'm quite against the idea."

When he married her... Didn't he marry her even though they had never met nor have any mutual understanding?

His phrase reminded Cathy of Adrian.

"My family arranged for it." "She is younger than me by a few years, even before she was born our families had already decided on it."

Flynn raised his cup elegantly for a sip, "I just happen to have such a fiancée."

"However, when she was born she was kidnapped by her family's bodyguard."

"Since I can't choose my marriage, I want to choose my own kid."

He was also attracted to Cathy.

"Don't worry about it."

"How is it going?"

"Soon."

He sighed, "If only you were not married."

However...

Cathy attempted to defuse the situation with a dry laugh. The topic had proven to be a tough minefield, "However with your status, I guess you would not be required to be in such a

He shifted his gaze to Cathy. Her eyes were similar to Ariel's, bright and clear.

"When I went to the orphanage, her eyes were the first thing that caught my attention."

He lifted his chin as he gazed at Ariel with a tender manner, "That is why I adopted Ariel."

Cathy was still engrossed with the arranged marriage and missed his last statement, "What did you say?"

Impossible!

Ariel's eyes were fixed on the screen as her fingers were flying across the keyboard, and little

Flynn placed his coffee on the table and turned towards Ariel and Arius who were still going at it,

The painful memory of her being bulldozed by the anonymous hacker resurfaced; Ariel started doubting herself.

How on earth is this little kid this skillful!

Wasn't she the prodigy?

She lost control of her laptop.

beads of perspiration were flowing down her forehead.

Why was everyone now bullying her, even this little kid before her? Had her skills deteriorated that much?

She clenched her jaws as she turned to her last resort. "Click!"

Her screen started projecting an image of Arius firing away on his laptop. "Well you are quite the prideful one aren't you?"

Arius began tucking away his laptop, "I have already defeated this script a few days ago, and now after a few modifications you are reusing it to fight me."

"Defeat is imminent."

Ariel's eyes widened, "You..." Arius extended his hand, "You look much cuter without a mask and a voice-changing device."
