Chapter 62 Daddy Has A Competitor

Cathy replied coldly, "This role is important to me as well."

Xavier was swift to reply. "You made her out of jobs previously. You owe her this."

How on Earth did he get the audacity to think that she owed Willow this?

"After you help her out this time, our debts will be cleared."

Cathy looked at Xavier's message and scoffed.

Didn't Willow bring this upon herself for framing her? She would not have been displaced if she hadn't caused so much trouble!

How did this become her fault in Xavier's opinion?

Cathy took in a deep breath. She originally wanted to let it be, but she felt unsettled. So, she sent him a green grape emoji.

"What does this mean? Do you agree?"

Xavier was overjoyed. "Cathy, I knew it. You..."

The woman rolled her eyes and put her phone down.

What a retard!

The grape is green!

Doesn't he know?

Adrian watched as her face puffed up in anger. He shook his head helplessly and sent her a text using Mr. B. Olton's account. "You can do it."

Cathy replied him. Then, she leaned against the car window and began to worry about tomorrow.

Although she knew that she was far better than Willow... It wasn't just Willow and her showing

"I will!"

What if someone more suitable for the role appears tomorrow?

It has been ages since she last stood in officially as an actress. There was no way she could ensure a stable performance.

As soon as Cathy opened the door when she got home, Abner rushed out with his arms open and

Cathy squatted down and took Abner into his arms. "I missed you too."

"Mummy!"

It was four days since she last saw them. She really missed them.

It felt strange to her. She only became their stepmother for a month, but they felt like her own

"Did you have fun?"

Abner smiled at Cathy. "Did you get any gifts for Arius and I?"

Cathy grabbed her bag so she could find the gifts she prepared for them. But just as she was about to get them, a huge hand snatched her bag away.

Adrian frowned lightly and passed the backpack to Abner. "Take it and find it yourself."

"Yes."

"There is a lot to prepare for."

Cathy felt a little hurt.

"Your mother needs to practice."

"Yes."

Abner blinked. "Is mommy going to take an exam tomorrow?"

Arius, who was reading a book on the sofa in a distance, raised his head and spoke. "Tyrell said

Abner took Cathy's bag and quickly ran towards Arius. He started looking through her bag for their gifts.

Cathy pursed her lips. There was... nothing for her to practice.

She will only get her audition lines tomorrow during the audition. She did not have anything to

Before she could reason with Arius, Adrian carried her.

Soon, Cathy was locked in her bedroom.

She lay on her bed and stared at the ceiling.

These must have been for him.

His attitude was exactly like a head teacher encouraging his high school students who were academically weak!

Arius leaned onto the sofa indolently. He looked like a miniature Adrian. "I've found some books

He brought her upstairs.

As soon as he finished speaking, he glanced at her nonchalantly. "You can do it."

Arius was right. He did find her books that could help her improve her acting skills.

She looked at the large stack of books on the desk. They were taller than her. Cathy gave out a

In the end, she decided not to read a single book, but to believe in her own abilities!

Although this car was not as delicate and flexible as the one grandpa had bought him, it was still a token of mommy's thoughts!

Arius stared at Abner's hopeless reaction. He put down his book, then went over and looked

Just as he was about to zip the backpack, he found a little pink card.

The signature was a beautiful cartoon face, and a delicate pink ribbon bow was attached to the

"Arius, what are you looking at?"

Arius rolled his eyes. "Daddy has a rival now."

Abner pouted. He did not understand.

Abner hurriedly approached Arius when he saw him in a daze.

Arius frowned and picked up the card.

The slanted letters on the card read:

We will meet again soon!'

"Do we have a rival now?"

"So, she should have a daddy."

Abner came to a realization. "Does that mean that she will let her daddy pursue our mommy?"

"And he will become daddy's rival?"

Now, he is contacting me for this?

Yoel frowned. "Rival?"

"Speed up what plan?"

Abner was confused.

Arius nodded confidently. "Seems like we have to speed up our plan."

He glanced at Abner impatiently. "The plan of having a younger sister."

Sister! Hurry!"

Yoel almost gagged at the other end of the phone. This little rascal practically never contacts me.

"We are out of time. My daddy has a rival now! We have to speed up!"

He answered cautiously. "This... Your daddy and mommy have to have a mutual agreement in

Why didn't I know about this?

"Who is it?"

"I don't know either. My brother told me this. He said daddy has a rival."

Abner's small body froze in that instant!

"Mr. Bolton is not experienced in pursuing women. If he has a rival, mommy will definitely leave!"

As soon as Abner finished speaking, a man's voice sounded from upstairs.

He quickly hung up the phone. He looked up at Adrian and smiled, "Daddy, why are you coming down?"

Adrian raised his eyebrows and walked down the stairs gracefully. "If I don't come down, I
