Chapter 63 Present for Little Sister

Abner rolled his eyes and stared at his dad unapologetically, "I'm not making fun of you, simply the truth!" Arius calmly nodded his head, "Truth, and nothing but the truth."

Are these two little rascals seriously looking down on me; their own father's skill to pick ladies?

The man strode to the sofa and elegantly reclined on it, with both arms resting on the cha

Abner and Arius glanced at each other and tacitly kept silent.

At this point Adrian's phone rang.

"I heard that you have a love rival? hahahahaha, that's the best news I have heard in a while! The guy who is the most useless around ladies has a love rival after being happily married for only a month! I am going to approach the guys for a bet, let's bet whether you are going to be dumped, hahahaha!"

Adrian, "..."

The man silently held his phone, till Yoel's laugh eventually died off, only then his lips curled up into a sneer and said, "I will bet with you, if I do not get divorced, I get to bring down your rundown clinic, how is that for a bet?"

Cathy, unless I am six feet under."

Yoel, "..."

A second later, he barely muttered, "Adrian, it was just a joke, there is no need to be so serious, right?"

"Chicken?"

Adrian's voice remained cold and calm, "Then get this fixed in your mind.I will never divorce

Yoel was silent in his thoughts.

The man's voice was calm and deep, conveying undeniable firmness and composure.

Yoel was not alone, the twins who were sitting on the sofa caught each other's gaze and were speechless.

After a pause, Yoel exhaled deeply, "Adrian, are you... seriously in love with her?"

He confessed without any hesitation.

"Yes."

"I get it now."

The man hung up with a grave expression.

Yoel grinned, "I'm happy for you."

Who knew, this lady who goes by Cathy only needed a month to get Adrian to fall head over heels for her...

"Thanks."

After what happened five years ago, he thought that Adrian would never fall in love again.

Abner shuddered while handing the pink card over to Adrian, "The rival whom my brother and I mentioned... Is the father of this girl..."

Then, he raised his head and chillingly stared at Arius and Abner, "Where is this rival of mine?"

The image of Ariel appeared in his mind.

It may be a little messy, but he could still make out that it was written by a girl.

She was dressed up in a little dress like a princess, absolutely dainty and demure.

If it was not for her, he would not have rushed Cathy to co-create a girl that night...

The man smirked, holding the card in his palm, "They are not a threat to me at this moment."

With that, he went upstairs.

Abner held him back and shook his head.

Adrian squinted and scrutinized the scribbles on the card.

Abner startled, "Dad, that card..."

who is his rival."

"Then for us..."

Abner jumped right off the sofa, "I'm picking the prettiest gift!"

She went into the kitchen to prepare breakfast for the two boys.

Arius took his time, gracefully having his breakfast.

"Sure!"

Arius shrugged and grinned at his brother, "Let's get ready to buy our baby sister a cot and Abner was all grins as he held his bowl and finished his breakfast.

Once Abner was done with his meal, he grabbed a tablet and shoved it to Cathy, "Take a look and Cathy pursed her lips, how is she supposed to answer such a question?

"Oi, it is half past six, mommy's exam will start at half past nine, there is only three hours left, I really need to get going!"

Desperate for a diversion, she looked at the clock.

Upon retrieving her coat and bag, she rushed out of the mansion.

With that, she was at the entrance of Thunder Studio before eight.

Surprisingly, she was not even the first to arrive.

As she got out of the car, she saw both Willow and Xavier standing at a distance.

"Cathy!"

When Xavier saw her, he grabbed Willow and headed towards Cathy, "You really came to help out Willow, right?"
