

Chapter 26: He Came

When Juliana finished reading the tweet, there were already many comments underneath, because Selene was a famous Internet celebrity with millions of followers, who were all shocked at this moment.

She threw the phone to Jermaine without reading the comments, "Read it yourself. This is the good sister who's always been nice to me."

Jermaine looked sullen as he read the three things Selene had written. He was silent for a long while before saying, "Selene was still young and thoughtless back then. Forgive her as an elder sister."

Juliana laughed when she heard it, "She is only two months younger than me. Why don't you say she was still a fertilized egg by then?"

Jermaine knew he was in the wrong and shut up.

Selene was still lying in the ice coffin, shivering, "Juliana, I have posted my tweet. Can I get out now? It's so scary in here."

Juliana looked over at Suzanne and said, "It's up to your mom now."

Suzanne had done the edit but hadn't posted it; she tapped to send when Juliana looked over.

She handed the phone out, "Let Selene out."

Juliana took a look at it and handed it back to her, "Read it out, so everyone can see how your image of a good stepmother came to be in their eyes."

Suzanne couldn't let her daughter suffer, so she didn't care about the image anymore.

Anyway, Juliana was not of much use now.

Suzanne said without even taking the phone, "I have changed Juliana's medication for pneumonia that year; Selene did all the things I advised. I don't really love Juliana. I only did what she wanted and satisfied her because my love for her was to spoil and ruin her!"

Although Suzanne did not say anything particular, those few words were enough to tear apart her mask.

From today onwards, her relationship with Juliana was totally broken.

Juliana snorted lightly, looked up, and asked Jermaine, "Did you hear that?"

Jermaine looked away as he said, "She is just your stepmother and she doesn't love you as a matter of course."

It made Juliana laugh.

Philip became furious about it. He had never seen such a prejudiced father.

He bowed and asked Juliana respectfully, "Young lady, should I let her out?"

Juliana answered, "Go ahead."

Philip raised his hand and lifted the lid off the coffin.

Selene's legs went soft, but she still climbed up and jumped out. Her knees were worn out when she fell to the ground and she could only cry sitting there.

At this moment, a low-profile black car drove over like a cheetah and parked steadily at the door.

Philip saw it and hurriedly signaled the bodyguards to carry the ice coffin and all the other things away to make way.

Then he quickly stepped forward to stand by the back seat and bowed to open the door.

Seeing that the bodyguards stood on both sides of the road and Philip was so respectful people, Jermaine thought it was old Mr. Leach.

Did this alarm old Mr. Leach?

Jermaine was in a panic thinking about how to push Juliana out to solve this matter.

Philip had already opened the car door and called out respectfully, "Young master."

Jermaine and the others heard it and looked over, trying to see the legendary ugly and cruel Benson.

The man got out of the car with a handsome face and a slender and tall figure, aloof yet overwhelming.

Was this handsome, powerful, and noble man the legendary Benson, who was described as incredibly ugly, brutal, and bloodthirsty?

Selene was stunned by this stunning man.
