

GREED 1111

Chapter 1111 Bad Luck For CARNAGE.

The fountain of life on the other hand conjured more and more earth golems to pile on him. It didn't want to get close to him at all despite its determination to get the life crystal from him. It seems it is still afraid of Ragnarok's bite. It has a reason to fight but that reason has not clouded its judgment or made it forget the lesson it learned a few minutes ago.

"You have to do better than that, dragon. If you intend to get this life crystal, you must be willing to put your life on the line for the slim chance of greatness."

The fountain of life didn't retort. It noticed that Ragnarok suffered each time their domain clashed so it focused on using the backlash to wear him down without engaging him further. It is a good plan. Unfortunately, Ragnarok can heal faster than itself.

The fountain of life is a dragon of life coveting the power of creation. But even it had to marvel at the regeneration ability of Ragnarok. It could sense the powerful life-giving energy welling up within Ragnarok each time that he got injured.

They fought each other in an earth-shaking battle. The earth was literally shaking. It was falling apart too. More cracks appeared because of the earthquakes that they caused. The shockwaves of the explosion caused by the clash of their domain were like hammers striking the fragile plane.

The plane became fragmented with each explosion and the life crystal was about to disappear. Meanwhile, there was another struggle going on outside the plane.

----

In The Void At The Time That Ragnarok Killed The Last Vampires.

"How dare that scoundrel?" The demon god yelled angrily.

Its form quivered in anger. The red cloud of energy around the plane rippled slightly. The demon god was truly angry. Ragnarok killed his vampires but didn't stop destroying the plane. It is about to destroy the divine plane and the origin gods that used to hound it have given up. But all of that will go to waste now all because of one Warrog.

As if that wasn't enough, another bad thing happened to the demon god of Carnage. Another red cloud of energy began to approach the plane. This red cloud is not a sea of blood like itself. It is a sea of fire. This sea of fire is boiling and rolling like a tumultuous sea. Red lightning can be seen moving across its surface from time to time.

The demon god saw it from afar and couldn't help but swear in outrage. "In the name of the abyss and all that is unholy."

"What is WRATH doing here? How did this muscle head get the planar coordinates of the plane?" The demon god of Carnage asked.

It said with a sneer, "Someone must have told it. It must be those Origin gods. It seems they didn't give up their plane without trying to make things difficult for me."

Then it chuckled. "Well, it doesn't matter anymore. Everything is going downhill. The plane is worthless now. I should just leave."

Somehow the demon god of Wrath found out which plane CARNAGE is attacking and where it is. It is the final nail in the coffin for the ambitions of the demon god of Carnage for the Lumen plane. It won't be able to get this plane anymore now that Wrath is here.

Wrath can really keep a grudge and it is still angry about how the demon god of CARNAGE interfered with its extortion of the demon kings after the meeting to create the coalition of the abyss. Wrath did promise to interfere in the acquisition of the plane then. It is never going to let that grudge and numerous others go. Especially not when the opportunity for retribution has been presented to it.

"This muscle head should be called the demon god of Grudge and revenge instead of Wrath."

With WRATH here, the demon god of Carnage can kiss its chances of getting the plane goodbye. It is not as if there is anything to get anymore. Ragnarok will destroy it soon. So the demon god of CARNAGE withdrew its cloud from around the plane. It stopped attacking and barricading the plane. Its actions caused the red moon in the sky of the plane to disappear.

"I better prepare." The demon god said, "I could use a fight right now."

With WRATH here, a fight is likely to happen and CARNAGE wants to prepare for that fight. So there CARNAGE was, a sea of blood waiting for the sea of fire to come so that they would fight. The sea of blood is smaller than the sea of fire but the demon god of CARNAGE is actually looking forward to the fight.

The worst that will happen is the death of this body. It has numerous bodies scattered throughout the realm so it is willing to sacrifice this one for some fun. It has to do so or WRATH will continue to follow it around until it gets its vengeance.

But then a new development occurred in the plane moments after the demon god stopped barricading the plane. CARNAGE sensed it immediately because it was close to the plane and because it was still attached to the consciousness of all life in the plane.

It turned its attention to the plane in surprise. It saw the ball of pure laws and exclaimed, "That is no Life crystal. That is more than a measly Life crystal. I must have it."

It became excited at the appearance of the strange treasure "This is my lucky day. So this plane will not be a total waste to me after all."

It planned its course of action. "I should barricade the plane again and wait for it to get destroyed. Then I will be able to have it to myself."

It wants to get this powerful artifact that has appeared but it can't enter the plane. So it decided to surround the plane again and block both entry and exit. Then it will be able to get into the plane after it breaks up.

Chapter 1112 Revenge Is The Sweetest.

The plane won't last longer anymore. The fact that its anchor has been exposed means it is very close to its end. When it ends, the demon god plans to kill both Ragnarok and the fountain of life for the artifact.

Then it remembered that it wasn't alone. There's someone else here that could threaten it. It made the Supreme of Carnage groan and complain. "Of all the time for this muscle head to show up, now is the worst time.

"I have to stop WRATH. Let me distract this flame head for a while."

It doesn't want to fight anymore. A fight is the last thing on CARNAGE's mind now. So It sent out a portion of its body to fight the demon god of WRATH. It should delay WRATH and buy it enough time for the plane to end. Unfortunately, the delay tactic didn't work. The plane lasted longer than it should have. The demon god of WRATH arrived before the plane collapsed.

"Revenge is the sweetest thing I know." WRATH said with unbridled excitement when it got close.

CARNAGE tried to talk it out of fighting, "Let's talk about this. We can make a deal. I will pay you for my slight to your prestige and the other little things I have done to offend you."

"No." WRATH refused. "I don't want your payment. If I want something I will get it. You made a fool out of me. So I will make a fool out of you too. I will make sure that you fail to acquire this plane. I will see it destroyed even if I have to."

It is obvious that WRATH came for a fight and only a fight will satisfy it. It didn't want to listen to reason at all. It swept forward like a badgering ram to crash into the demon god of CARNAGE. CARNAGE had to stop barricading the plane again or risk losing the fight early. Doing that meant it had to reveal the fact that there was a great artifact in the plane.

"What do we have here?" WRATH asked, completely intrigued. "Is that not a world spark? What is a world spark doing in a plane? How did it even get into the realm?"

WRATH is understandably confused. The great treasure that has appeared seems to be a world spark. Such a thing should not be in the realm. Mother High Heaven would have snatched such powerful objects as their effects on the realm can be catastrophic.

CARNAGE spoke since the cat was out of the bag. It mocked WRATH, "Stupid demon who can't think. Can't you see that it is not an ordinary world spark? It is more powerful but more subdued."

WRATH didn't take offense at being called stupid. It took another look at the powerful treasure. Its gaze passed through the divine plane to see the only thing it could see in the plane. Despite the distance and the obstacle of the divine plane, it could see the light produced by the treasure and assess its worth.

It had to admit after its inspection, "You're right. It does look special."

Then it roared in laughter. "This just keeps getting better and better. I was right. Revenge is truly the sweetest thing ever."

They are not that familiar with world sparks since such a powerful thing is so rare. And treasures of that level don't appear within the realm. Mother High Heaven won't allow it. But they will recognize it once they see it. That's how the demon gods knew what the treasure could be immediately after they saw it. They sensed what they should expect to sense from a world spark from it. And that is a path to becoming a world-ender.

They have only seen a world spark once and that was when they saw the reward list after that the realm lord offered them for being a part of the coalition of the abyss. It was only once but they can tell that this treasure that has appeared is more powerful than what they saw on that list.

It is a mystery why such a thing is within a plane and why mother high heaven would allow it. But they are not concerned about the mystery for now. They will try to figure it out when they have laid their hands on it.

"It is mine." WRATH declared grandly. "Get out of my way bloodsucker."

"You will have to get past me to get it." The demon god of Carnage said as it stood in the path of WRATH.

"That shouldn't be difficult to do." WRATH said as it continued to barrel forward.

CARNAGE sent most of its body to engage WRATH. It kept a small portion close to the plane to deal with acquiring the artifact. It is clear that it is going to lose. But the saving grace is that it is not going to lose quickly. All it has to do is delay WRATH, then everything should be fine as long as it gets its hands on the powerful artifact.

The two red clouds clashed. The result is what one would expect when two landmasses of energy and power collide. Space quaked and energy was discharged in the form of violent flares that ripped matter apart. Lightning crashed about in the void. Tentacles, whips, and other appendages struck each other. The two demon gods ripped into each other's existence with reckless abandon.

At their level, defense is futile. If you can attack, you can surely be attacked. And if you can harm the other, you can surely be harmed in return. So it is a race of damage output vs. any form of regeneration. Normally, the larger demon god wins. And the demon god of WRATH is way larger, so it will win.

But that won't end the fight. Not by a long shot. Several bodies of both demon gods are converging on their position right now. This is a fight that will take a few hundred years to see a winner. After all, the prize is the opportunity to advance and become world-enders.

Chapter 1113 Little Bitch.

The demon gods are hell-bent on getting that special world spark. They will do everything they can to get it. It is a struggle not unlike the common struggle in the abyss. The fittest will survive and the Victor will become stronger.

It is for this once-in-a-billion-year opportunity that CARNAGE and WRATH are willing to sacrifice hundreds of millions of accumulation to acquire. But then something finally went right for the demon of god of Carnage. The plane which is about 5 billion km square finally gave up.

The surface of the plane has cracked all the way down to its foundation. There was a sharp crack as it detached from the law matrix. It stopped being a plane at that point. It has lost its connection to the realm tree so it is just a chunk of land, air, and water floating in the void.

A chunk of land, air, and water cannot resist the pressure of the void on its own. The divine plane was the first to go. It cracked and fell inwards like the shell of an egg. Air was siphoned out of the plane into the void after the barrier around it was breached. Then the broken land masses were shredded by the void.

In the midst of all this are two tiny beings fighting for the treasure. They are probably big when compared to the inhabitants of the plane. However, compared to the debris of a broken plane and two even bigger red clouds smashing into each other, the black hexapod and the white-scaled lizard are small beings jostling each other like children.

Transcendents and above can survive in the void. The smart ones who care about self-preservation, which is all of them, left the wreckage of the plane in a hurry. They want the treasure but there are two demon gods around. The presence of such malevolent entities deterred them. But not Ragnarok and the fountain of life.

Ragnarok is currently in possession of this special treasure. He held it tightly against his chest while he used his ten tails to batter the fountain of life. He focused on defense and fleeing the destroyed plane. The fountain of life couldn't do anything to stop him.

The fountain of life roared in frustration. It yelled at him, "Curse you Ragnarok.

Ragnarok laughed victoriously, "You have failed little dragon of life. Shame on you."

The fountain of life is bigger than him but he has the right to call it little because he is right. The fountain of life has failed. It could hamper Ragnarok when the plane was still around and it could use its earth golems. But the plane is no more. It doesn't have earth to turn into golems or even air for the fountain of life to transmute with the power of creation. All there is is the dark cold void.

If it couldn't stop Ragnarok from acquiring the world spark when the plane was around. It surely can't do so now when there is nothing for it to work with. It is also running out of time to make a decision. A portion of the demon god of Carnage is rushing towards them right now. It is a small portion but it is larger than the two of them combined.

"Curse you." The fountain of life yelled again.

Then it chose to escape. It gave up on the treasure and split ways with Ragnarok. Ragnarok also ran for his dear life. It didn't surprise him when the demon god chose to chase him and not the fountain of life.

CARNAGE roared at him. "Stop right there Ragnarok you little bitch."

Ragnarok snickered. "That's no way to speak with a gentleman. I won't stop unless you ask me nicely."

"Just wait until I lay my hands on you. You will know that the wrath of a demon god is not easy to bear. I will crush you like the ant that you are."

Ragnarok didn't beg for forgiveness. Instead, he provoked the demon god further. He said, "Stop lying. You don't have hands. You can't lay what you don't have on me."

"Enjoy your brief moment of arrogance you little shit. It will end very soon."

The demon god of Carnage is right about that. It is much faster than him. It is gaining on him as fast as possible. It is falling towards him like a giant funnel of energy and power. He will collapse if he is struck by this funnel.

"You better hurry up. I am running out of time." He shouted in his mind to Legion-7.

Maybe if he throws the treasure far away from himself then the demon god will stop chasing him. But he didn't give it up. The major reason is that he is greedy. He doesn't want to give up something that is already his.

The second reason is that this treasure is special. Legion is in possession of a world spark that they gained from the first sage so he knows that this is not a world spark. It is something more than a world spark. It is all the more reason why he should not give up the treasure.

But the most important reason is because there is a way for Legion to get away with this treasure and more. He might die but Legion must get this world spark or something greater. Otherwise, his effort will be in vain. So he must escape with it.

Legion-7 is seeing to his escape right now. It has extended a tentacle through the soul sphere into his existence. Legion-7 began annexing his soul immediately so that he could resurrect Ragnarok later.

His soul is being consumed by Legion-7 but he didn't resist or panic. Instead, he laughed at the rushing tide of red blood about to reach him and made sure to provoke it one last time, "The fountain of life failed. You have also failed. Watch me laugh. It is the last laugh and it is mine."

Chapter 1114 Legion Vs CARNAGE.

They say those who laugh last laugh best. He is laughing right now while CARNAGE is grinding its nonexistent teeth. He laughed as his body was torn apart from the inside out. Space was torn out from within him so his existence was also ripped apart.

The soul sphere warped out of existence because of his death. It went back to its anchor. The only thing left where he was was a tear in space and a dark tentacle with different colored dots of light within it. This tentacle is grasping the giant ball of light that Ragnarok was holding earlier. It pulled on this ball and tried to drag it through the tear in space.

"NEVER!" Came the angry roar of the demon god of Carnage.

Ragnarok died but that is inconsequential right now. What matters is that a third party killed him and is about to take advantage of the situation. This entity is after the special world spark. That has more than crossed the bottom line of the demon god.

It is not about to lose the only thing that it will get out of this entire endeavor to invade a plane to a third party. No one is going to take advantage of him.

It too broke through space after the tentacle. It swarmed after the tentacle past the world of manifestation and down into the law matrix. It even began to burn itself to gain enough power and speed to break the law matrix.

CARNAGE is truly giving it its all. It broke past the law matrix in its chase. But it was all for naught. Legion-7 was too fast. The world below is its domain and besides, he wasn't running away, he was pulling back his tentacle. So he was able to lose the demon god.

The tear he created in the fabric of the world collapsed and so did the tunnel that his tentacle passed through. The demon god roared in anger as the spatial tunnel collapsed.

Legion-7 found himself in the inner world of Legion-1. He heaved a sigh of relief.

"That was too close." He said.

"Do you think you lost it?" Legion-1 asked.

"I don't know," Legion-7 admitted. "There is still too much that we don't know about the powers and abilities of demon gods to know for sure."

"Hurry," Soverick said. "It is coming."

The four of them began to move after that warning. There was no speaking or questioning. There was only action. If Soverick is right, then a demon god is about to invade the inner world of Legion-1. It is a catastrophe caused by their greed.

"Greed might be the end of us." The tree father said as it threw the special world spark into the artifact that they had built.

They were working on creating the Kickstarter before the special world spark appeared in the Lumen plane. It is a powerful artifact that can destabilize the structure of a supreme law so it should be capable of destroying the world spark.

Soverick knew that the demon god was coming because the world spark left trails in the law matrix. He can see the trails himself so he believes that the demon god can see it too. The demon god is tracking its location through those trails. So they intend to destroy the object creating the trails so that they can hide the location of the inner world.

"If this fails, then all of this would have been for nothing. Far worse than that is that we will lose far more." Legion 1 said.

They smiled at that. The atmosphere seems jovial but they are all tense. They are risking a lot right now. If the Kickstarter fails to destroy the special world spark, then they are doomed. If the demon god can't actually see the trails, and the special world spark is destroyed, then they would have lost the special treasure.

If the Kickstarter succeeds in destroying the special world spark but too late for them to hide from the demon god, then they have lost the treasure and they are also doomed.

A lot could go wrong. But there is also a fourth option. It is the most risky option. They will lose the special artifact but they will gain more if the plan succeeds. This will put them in far more danger. But Soverick has planned for it so they believe that it will work.

If the plan doesn't work, then are more than doomed. Their aim for perfection might end here despite the contingency plans that they have. And it all hinges on whether CARNAGE can find them or not.

They got their answer immediately. Soverick was right, as he usually is. The demon god tracked the world spark. It broke through space into the inner world and directly appeared beside the special world spark. So it was tracking the trails. It managed to reach its target before Legion destroyed it.

CARNAGE laughed in glee as it scooped up the special world spark. "It is mine now. All mine. I will ascend. I will be glorious. I am to become death, the destroyer of worlds. World gods will quake before me."

It roared in excitement and pride even as it began to fuse with the special world spark. It is not going to waste time at all. It is not going to risk anything going wrong when the world spark is finally within its grasp.

All of its bodies in different parts of the void universe broke through space and appeared beside it immediately. They were teleported across space to join this body in evolving into a greater existence. Today, a world ender will be born.

The red cloud of blood began to grow bigger and bigger. Its state of existence rose higher and higher. There is no way that the inner world of a world beast can tolerate its size much less its power.

CARNAGE isn't even targeting them. Just the mere presence of its existence will destroy Legion-1.

Chapter 1115 The Kickstarter.

Fortunately, the artifact that the demon god is in possesses constantly expanding space and time coefficients.

Soverick grinned at the sight. It was a savage grin of madness and desperation, "All or nothing." He said. "We do this or we break."

They are at the precipice now. The demon god is right here in their inner world. It is also in the Kickstarter since that's where they placed the special world spark. It means there is no going back for them.

They have to risk everything now and succeed or lose everything. So the Kickstarter was started. The artifact began to move. It lit up suddenly and began to whirl. Time sped up within it while space expanded.

The Kickstarter artifact was built in the form of figure eight or the infinity symbol. It is two loops joined together at their edges. The first loop, which is white, was constructed using divine energy from the tree father to give cosmic energy shape. The Authority of order that the tree father possessed was used as the anchor of cosmic energy.

The demon god or soon-to-be world-ender is inside this loop. It is rotating around this single loop over and over again. Space is expanding and time is progressing faster than the rate of time in the void universe within it. This was achieved as a result of the combination of cosmic energy and the divine authorities of order, space, and time.

The white loop is a small world free of the laws of the void universe. So time and space can be warped within it. All it costs apart from the initial cosmic energy requirements is energy to run it. That energy is being provided by the tree father through the Authority of the Celestial Supreme present at the center of the white loop.

So the demon god is allowed to freely accelerate forward through time around and around the loop. The increase in the flow of time has made it so that its breakthrough is occurring at a fast speed relative to the time of the void universe while the expansion in space has made it so that its breakthrough is not affecting Legion-1's inner world.

The adjoining loop which is the black loop was constructed painstakingly by using chaos energy from Aeternus to bind with cosmic energy. It was not easy for Legion-7 to construct this loop. Chaos energy is not a very good base. It is not obedient at all. If not for the fact that it was willing to bond with cosmic energy, then it would have been a futile attempt to use it.

Legion-7 was successful so there are two loops with opposite energies. One is order and the other is Chaos energy. Constructing them this way gave the arrangement a difference in potential. The two loops are just rearing to go at it. They want to meet and collapse.

They want to balance the difference in potential and reach zero state, but they are prevented from doing so because the tree father is maintaining a closed loop in the white loop while the world fragment at the center of the black loop is preventing it from collapsing.

This world fragment was given to Soverick by the first Sage. It contains the complete false law of order of the first sage. It is doing a fine job of resisting the collapse potential of Chaos energy. But they can't make it do more than that.

What the world fragment is currently doing is just a natural reaction. It is not going to Kickstart a world engine because it is not its natural reaction to do that. It needs the Will of the first sage for that. Or a little encouragement. Legion intends to give it that little encouragement.

"Let it rip," Soverick ordered.

The time dilation within the white loop has reached a critical point. Any more and it will be a catastrophe. The tree father is not a world god. He doesn't have enough power and energy to keep it going past this point. That will cause all the time they have expanded to contract suddenly. It will snap back like an elastic band.

The flow of time won't go back to zero after contracting like that. It will enter the negative, if only briefly. This negative will spill forth into Legion-1's inner world since the loop would have obviously collapsed at that point. So yes, it would be catastrophic if the time dilation is not eased off.

Fortunately, catastrophe can be avoided for now. The demon god has successfully become a world-ender. So the tree father did as Soverick said and let it rip. The closed loop within the white loop became open. It became connected to the black loop and able to freely interact with it.

The two loops want to collapse into each other. This caused the freestanding world-ender within the white loop to be forcefully attracted by the difference in potential. It shot into the black loop carrying the time dilation with it.

The supreme law in the world fragment at the center of the black loop attacked the world ender immediately. It was an instinctive reaction. The carefully maintained balance in the black loop was upended by the presence of the world-ender. This caused the black loop to collapse.

This collapse was a violent thing. Time had been messed up and so was space. These fundamental cosmic forces all came crashing down on the supreme law and world-ender. The two opposing entities were evenly matched. None of them gave up ground so both of them were forced to pay the price for backlash. They were torn, and crushed into their basic components. Matter and energy were converted into power in a big bang.

Legion was ready for this big bang. Power expanded outwards from the collapsed loops leaving only the remnants of the two supremes at the center. This power then fell into the open arms of the world engine which was placed around the two loops so it encapsulated them. The golden ring roared to life as power poured into it. The world engine had been kick-started.

Chapter 1116 A Cycle Of Destruction And Creation.

The world engine was a golden band of light. But it became a sphere of golden light once it began to work. The sphere of golden light surrounded and sealed in the collapsed two loops. The world engine began converting cosmic energy into cosmic force.

It is now capable of performing the energy-to-matter transformations, power-to-authority interactions, and laws-to-concept manifestations needed to run a law matrix. However, its operation won't last.

The world engine needs a sustained input of power for it to work with cosmic energy and void energy as raw materials for it to work. The Kickstarter has only provided a short burst of power. The burst is very powerful but it is not sustained. They don't have a supreme law to make it sustained.

Meanwhile, there is a debt of time and space to pay within the sphere that the world engine has become. The false order of the first sage and the world ender have been reduced to their basic forms tethering on destruction.

Their power was squeezed out of them to start the world engine. Fortunately, they are capable of destroying worlds themselves so they can't be killed by something like this. It is not exactly a good thing for them though.

The two of them are alive so they have to deal with the negative coefficient of time and space. The seal of the world engine ensures that only they will suffer the consequences and not Legion-1's inner world.

Space had collapsed at that point. It began to expand after the collapse but it couldn't expand past the world engine. Time began to rewind within the world engine too. It rewinded back to the point before the collapse.

The world engine provided the energy and power needed for these reactions to occur by taking them from the void universe. It resulted in making the events that occurred within the sphere unravel and reset. Everything returned to point zero.

The black loop of Chaos was reconstructed from the provided energy as time rewinded. The world fragment reappeared in its rightful position at the center of the black loop. The white loop also reappeared and the world-ender was sent back inside the white loop.

The world ender returned to the time when it was rotating around this single loop over and over again. At this point, Space is expanding and time is progressing faster than the rate of time in the void universe within it. The tree father could still handle the progression of events and energy requirements at that point.

The white loop is a small world free of the laws of the void universe. So time and space can be warped within it. All it costs apart from the initial cosmic energy requirements is energy to run it.

Unlike earlier, the energy is being provided by the world engine through the Authority of Celestial Supreme present at the center of the loop. So the world ender is allowed to accelerate forward through time around and around the loop far beyond what the tree father could allow.

But the world engine faltered after it had used up the initial burst of power. This interrupted the flow of energy through the Authority of Celestial Supreme to the white loop. The closed system of the white loop fell. It became open and free to react with the black pool again.

The world ender reached the black loop again and the supreme law of the first sage attacked the new World Ender again. There was a collapse followed by another release of power. The power entered the faltering world engine and sustained it for another round. It used its power to force the world ender and the supreme law to pay the debt of time again.

Everything reset to the point when the tree father could handle the requirements for the time warp. This time, the world engine is more powerful than the previous cycle so it could push the acceleration of time a little further. This support is still temporary so the collapse happened again. This led to a much stronger collapse and the release of more power for the world engine.

The cycle of operation occurred smoothly like well-oiled gears in a clock. Reality was smashed apart against the supreme law and world ender. The energy and matter used to set up the Kickstarter were converted into power through the collapse. The world engine remained working through it all. It gained more and more power with every cycle.

"It worked," Soverick said in part disbelief and part relief.

Then he slumped down. "It worked." He muttered again in excitement.

He repeated it again, this time with pride. "It worked."

He is not the only one surprised. Legion-7 couldn't believe it. "It actually worked. This fucked up idea of yours actually worked."

"If world gods can do it so can we," Legion-1 said proudly.

The tree father chuckled and said, "But we are not world gods."

Aeternus agreed. "No, we are not. We are better. We are Legion."

They all felt immense pride in their achievement. They have performed a miracle. It is something they ought to be proud of and they let themselves be. They baited a demon god. Then helped that demon god to become a world-ender. Then used the world ender and the supreme law of the first sage to kickstart their world engine.

It is one fucked up idea if there ever was such. Even world gods would be wary of world enders and wouldn't want to get in touch with one but they decided to make one themselves.

Helios muttered, "I still can't believe it worked."

Soverick felt offended. "I said it was going to work and it did."

"But even you were not certain it was a good idea."

Soverick defended himself smugly, "I was not certain it was a good idea only because it had never been done. But I was certain it would work. I have seen it work so it should work. It worked so I was right and that's all that matters."

Chapter 1117 How It Went Down.

They decided not to argue with Soverick anymore. They have had this argument before they decided to go with the plan. Soverick doesn't like people doubting his creations. He takes pride in envisioning a future and bringing it to pass. Anyone that doubts him is doubting the accuracy of his eyes.

"You're just too greedy. We are all too greedy or we wouldn't have agreed to let Ragnarok destroy a plane to anger Carnage."

"This is why we are greedy. It is to achieve greatness." Soverick thought to himself and others.

"It is good and all but we have lost a world spark," Helios said.

The dragon clone said with sadness. "Yeah. And Ragnarok experienced his first death. Poor Ragnarok. He reminds me so much of myself."

That made them laugh. Of course, Ragnarok reminds all of them of themselves. He is them after all. He always did what they would have done. They would have chosen to lie low in the Iron Fur Pack and make it grow only to destroy it for power when they had the chance.

They would have chosen to experience the transformation into a Vampire to acquire information about Supreme laws. They would have stubbornly refused to willingly enslave themselves to a demon god.

The craziest moment was when Ragnarok decided to eat the heart of Carnage instead of expelling it out of his body. It was almost as if he hadn't learned his lesson from the previous times he tested fate.

That depicted how greedy he was and what type of risk he would take for power. It is similar to how greedy they all are too. If they were not so greedy, they would have only focused on trying to save Ragnarok instead of risking him to bait a demon god. It is clear that they could have saved him if they wanted to. But they wanted to make it a certainty that CARNAGE would follow him to the ends of the realm for revenge.

Soverick said, "If he hadn't tried to figure out how vampires were created, maybe we wouldn't have this."

"Yes. We have Ragnarok to thank for that. He foolishly tried to experience the overwriting of a supreme law."

"Now Aeternus is running away from anything with a Supreme law."

They chuckled and chatted animatedly to the background of the world engine roaring to life again and again. The interval between its shutdown and start-up is getting shorter and shorter.

Soon the world engine will just be humming in constant operation instead of roaring to life every couple of seconds. And it would be because Ragnarok was suicidal enough to try to experience the Vampire transformation.

Ragnarok didn't commit suicide when his father bit him. It was that delay that put Ragnarok on the path of vampires. Legion became extremely aware of the power of a demon god and how the sin of Carnage works through that experience. Then Ragnarok went on to consume many more hearts of Carnage.

The information he risked his life to acquire wasn't deemed important back then. Not until Soverick came up with the idea to use the demon god as a sort of reagent in a cosmic reaction needed to make the Kickstarter work. Then it was decided that they would use the demon god for their Kickstarter. And for that, they needed to bait the demon god.

The upgraded world spark is the world spark that the first sage gave them but pumped full of cosmic energy. It was done mainly to render the world spark inert so that Legion-7 could interact with it without the threat of fusion and to render it harmless to Mother High Heaven.

If they hadn't rendered it inert, Legion-7 would have fused with the spark and therefore become a part of the void universe. He wouldn't be able to slip the world spark into the plane when Carnage removed the barricade and Mother High Heaven wouldn't have allowed it in the realm at all. That was very important to the plan to bait CARNAGE.

The other benefit of infusing the world spark with cosmic energy is that the world-ender it created would not be too weak as a new world-ender. That is very important or it might lose out to the false order of the first sage and create too much imbalance.

Legion-1 said to Legion-7, "No one noticed when you placed the world spark in the plane. I was afraid the plan would fail there."

"Ragnarok's performance was too notch. They were all focused on him. He was going to destroy the plane after all. And the demon god of Wrath distracted the demon god of Carnage. It was a good idea to leak the coordinates of the plane to it."

It was truly a remarkable performance on Ragnarok's part. It was so good that the demon god stopped covering the entire plane so Legion-7 could invade it. Legion-7 could have saved Ragnarok then but he didn't. Instead, he planted the world spark. And Ragnarok also made sure everyone took the bait with his acting.

"Speaking of Ragnarok, what do we do with him now?" Soverick asked.

Legion-7 had the answer to that question. "I was able to back him up so the first step of unification is almost complete. I can create another body for him."

Soverick nodded. "That's good. We might need him to help us take care of the Vampire problems. He likes hunting Vampires. He will have a lot to do soon."

The others are aware of the problem that Soverick is referring to. The demon god of Carnage has become a world-ender. Most world-enders end the race that they created when they were demon gods. After all, they don't need their lackeys anymore. They can't grow stronger by creating a race or expanding their sins anymore. They need to consume a world or a realm heart.

The Vampires should be useless burdens now. They should all be eliminated for siphoning power from CARNAGE and not being of any use to it. But the world-ender of Carnage didn't do so. Instead, it is broadcasting its position to every Vampire that it has created and to their Lineage. It is calling them for help and pulling them towards Legion-1. It is a call that they cannot ignore or refuse.

Chapter 1118 A Work Of Art Or A Bomb

Legion-7 muttered, "CARNAGE is truly ungrateful. We helped it to become a world-ender without the need to expand its capacity for power and absorb the marks of sin of other demons of Carnage. It became a world ender very quickly and quite easily too but it is sending Vampires from every plane it has invaded at us."

The tree father chuckled, "I don't blame Carnage. We too would be very angry after everything that has happened."

"I don't think so. I think it is just fair for it to pay us back for the use of a world spark and the cosmic energy within it with its servitude. So what if it has to suffer a cycle of destruction for at least the next 10 Origin cycles?"

"It doesn't matter if we are at fault here. We still need to handle the threat of the Vampires since we can't hide from them."

"We'll just run away. They can't fight us if they can't catch up to us. We will get back to them when we can eliminate them in one fell swoop."

They discussed the threat of the Vampires as if tens of thousands of Primogenitors were not rushing towards them right now. They haven't become stronger after making the world engine work, they still need to use it to build the world fragment, but they are not scared of some Primogenitors. Not after they have trapped a world-ender and used it as kindling in their Kickstarter.

They have messed with powers that are supposed to be way out of their league. As it is, there is a higher chance of CARNAGE killing them than some vampires succeeding in killing them. The Kickstarter they have created can become a terrifying bomb if it explodes. The hatred of Vampires is the least of their concern.

So they moved on to their next plans.

Legion-1 stated, "Let Ragnarok rest and become an Origin god as soon as possible. He and every one of you will be of better use to me as Origin gods. We will be able to complete the first phase of unification then."

He also added to their agenda, "As for now, I can take care of the vampires myself. It will be easier if you help me to construct my second concept. I need to start working on my Supreme law but I can't do so until I have an Origin divine ability for my core."

Soverick nodded in agreement. "That sounds like a good plan. The Vampires might be stronger than usual now that their Supreme is a world-ender. Also, CARNAGE might be able to descend into one of them. We are not certain of what a World ender is capable of."

Aeternus chuckled, "I guess this is our chance to find out."

Soverick shook his head. "I'd rather not find out. At least not with personal experience. We might end in a situation worse than Ragnarok's when the demon god latched onto him."

The tree father ended the discussion. "We can only do what we can do and right now, it starts with a second concept for Legion-1."

Legion-7 said excitedly, "Let's make a concept. It is time to see what this perpetual engine is."

Soverick corrected, "You mean pseudo-perpetual engine. It is not a complete perpetual engine yet. It is just a prototype. And it is one that is rife with many faults."

The tree father rolled his eyes and said as they got to work, "Yes, we know it is just a prototype. It is not a completely independent system yet. We are using the backlash from the law matrix of the void universe initiated by tampering with the cosmic forces of time and space to grind down two immortal entities and take advantage of their immortality and energy from the void universe to produce power to kickstart our world engine. We know it is not perfect. But perpetual engine sounds better than the pseudo-perpetual engine you want to call it."

Soverick insisted. "It is far from perfect. It is climbing uphill a mountain of debt in backlash. The world engine is getting more and power but it can't do so forever. The sorry world ender and the law of order of the sage are paying the debt now but we will have to pay for it when we try to replace the Kickstarter with our own supreme law."

*Besides its fault, its foundation is based on the first sage not being suicidal. If the first sage decides to go down and take us out with it, then we might have a lot of problems on our hands."

What he said is true. The Kickstarter is working well but it won't be like so for long. The major reason why is it working in the first place is that it was able to break down the world ender and supreme law for power through their antagonistic reaction. That power was more than enough for the world engine to start and also power the Kickstarter.

Of course, the world engine used void energy and cosmic energy from the void universe to supplement itself so it is not an independent system that doesn't need an external supply of energy and assistance. But what's worse is that they don't have control over the engine anymore. It has started and can't be stopped, not unless they want to break it.

Each cycle of the Kickstarter produces more power than it needs to keep the world engine running. That means the extra power is used to warp space and time within the Kickstarter because they don't have any control over it anymore.

As more and more cycles occur, more and more power is available and used to warp space and time. The deviation of space and time increases rapidly leading to more negative space and time coefficient debt.

All of that debt will have to be paid when the Kickstarter is stopped. So when they try to replace the Kickstarter with their supreme laws in order to acquire control over it and the world engine, they will have two very mad powerful entities and a massive debt to pay back to the void universe on their hands.

This scenario is the best-case scenario. The Kickstarter can become faulty before they are ready to replace it with a supreme law. One of the reasons it can become faulty is if the first sage decides to destroy it from within.

Chapter 1119 The Second Main Concept.

They are certain that the first sage would be angry about what they have done. But currently, the Kickstarter is an isolated space and time. In a normal situation, the first sage shouldn't know that they are responsible for making a world-ender come into contact with his supreme law.

This is an expected reaction since they are too weak to come into contact with one and shouldn't be crazy enough to mess with a world-ender. The first sage shouldn't blame them for it because of this. Even if he finds out somehow and blames them for it, Ideally, the first sage shouldn't be able to do anything about it and ideally, the first sage shouldn't try to do anything about it.

The first sage should be safe because the isolation of space and time is preventing the escape of the world-ender. But if the first sage decides that he is willing to have his world destroyed in exchange for bringing down Legion, then the isolation of the Kickstarter will be tested by the might of a world god.

What they have built is a ticking time bomb. It just looks like a perpetual engine. It is not. It is incredibly useful since just the by-products of its operation include Origin essence, Mana, and Origin energy. It is how the realm tree produces the Origin essence, mana, and Origin energy it uses to maintain the realm and to reward survivors of the trial of heaven.

These resources are apart from its main output of cosmic force so the world engine is a boon to Legion far more than its ability to get a law matrix running, but it is also creating problems for them. The Vampires are coming for them and the first sage might come for them.

They can't even fight the first sage. They can only hope that Soverick was right about what the first sage thought happened. In the meantime, they will prepare for more than 10,000 Origin god-level Vampires hunting them across the void universe.

It is a good thing that Legion-1 is very far away from the realm of high heaven right now. The mission that Legion-1 did for the realm lord took him far away from the realm. That will buy them some time to prepare for the battles to come.

Legion-1 asked Helios, "Do we have enough time to build the concept?"

"Ues we do. But this perpetual engine better be worth it," Helios said. "You should see what I am seeing. CARNAGE has been very busy."

He is close to the realm tree and can see a lot of events occurring around the realm tree. He saw the amount of Vampires flooding the void and he couldn't help but be concerned.

These Vampire Monarchs are the upgraded version. They are not the Primogenitors who have a fatal weakness to light. All of them are without weakness to fire and sunlight now that their Supreme ancestor is a world-ender. If the world engine doesn't work for them then they will have risked their lives and angered a lot of enemies for nothing.

"Stop doubting me. It will work," Soverick said confidently. "We should have enough time to make the second concept. We will add the laws of earth, fire, water, and air to the main law of space. It should be easy to do and shouldn't stress your core too much."

"Let's add the law of life too so that it won't clash with the first concept."

"But won't that make them fuse?"

"There is no problem if they fuse as long as their power is preserved."

"Let's do it. We will work on the law matrix after we get everything we need for a better try."

They got to work as soon as they had made up their minds. The period of discussion they had after the Kickstarter started working has not been up to a minute. The exchange of thoughts is very fast but they feel like they have to rush with building the second concept.

They started out as if they were building a law matrix. But they aren't using the world engine because they don't need it to make a concept. Creating a concept is something they can do easily on their own.

The four of them got to work immediately. Legion-7 is doing most of the work but the other two are helping while Soverick is overseeing the process. They used just fragments of the laws of space, life, fire, earth, wind, and air. With the concept, Legion-1 would be able to teleport through most obstacles.

This second concept is very important to Legion. It is not a concept to make Legion-1 a two-star Origin god. He has already reached the limit of the power of Origin gods thanks to the infusion of cosmic energy into his first concept. This concept that they are building is going to be his second main concept.

This concept is so important that they have put the plan to build a law matrix for them to be able to use their shards of power at full capacity on hold for now. It is true that they have to rest and acquire some other things so that they will be able to build a better world fragment. But most importantly, this second concept has to be exquisite and it will require their full attention to make it complex.

Legion-1 has two divine abilities so he can have two separate concepts at the origin level. It is unheard of in the void universe for an Origin god to have two main concepts but it is also unheard of that a Sovereign managed to separate their bodies and soul, then use only the soul to become an Origin god by possessing the core of a world beast.

So technically, Legion-1 is the fusion of two races. He is a high elf in soul with the concept of life, and a world beast in body with the divine ability of world devour. This special situation has made it possible to have two main concepts.

Chapter 1120 Complexity Over Quantity.

Legion chose a world beast for several reasons. One of the reasons is for the inner world. It has granted them a very powerful Origin domain and it has served as a domain for Legion-9. The most important reason is still the fact that the core can be assimilated into his existence without issue. When he possessed the core, it created a new body for him immediately.

His situation is very unique. He is not only different from other Origin gods but other Origin god-level world beasts aren't like him either. They don't have a separate origin soul in their inner world like him. Their soul within their inner world, their body, and Origin have become one. He on the other hand has a separate Origin soul and an Origin body.

His inner world is currently independent of his Origin and soul so the divine ability as a world beast still exists. That means that he can upgrade it to the original level. It can be said that he is still in the process of becoming a full-origin god despite the fact that he has reached the threshold to create a world.

The concept they are creating will upgrade the divine ability to the Origin level. They could use more laws but they are settling for a six-law concept. This is because the number of laws in a concept is not a direct determinant of the power of that concept.

Complexity and function are more important in a concept than the number of laws. A concept with a lot of laws will have a wider range of functions, adaptability, and growth potential, but it might be lacking in complexity.

Complexity is very important in making the concept actually powerful. It becomes exponentially difficult to make a concept complex the more laws it has. That means complexity is indirectly proportional to the number of laws.

Everyone can agree in most cases that quality is always better than quantity. Besides, they have limited time on their hands to make a concept with too many laws and still maintain its complexity. So they intend to focus on the complexity of the concept to make its function irresistible.

Soverick has already comprehended most laws of the void universe including the laws of space that they need to enhance his core. His knowledge when combined with Legion-7's manipulation of law fragments means that not only would they be able to build a six-law concept, they would be able to make it almost as sturdy as a single law concept.

They finished the construction pretty quickly. They have had several years of practice at this point and they are not trying to make a law matrix that will fail and become a concept. They are setting out to make a concept which is much easier to do than a law matrix.

A concept is just the representation of the interaction of laws. It is the outcome or behavior of a law or a group of laws when they interact with each other and the world. A law matrix is an interwoven contract made up of layers of numerous interacting laws that are open to having any type of interaction they possibly can in such a stable situation that they don't destroy each other and also interact in an underlying manner and hence, produce certain concepts far often than others.

They aren't making something capable of deriving numerous concepts without imploding on itself but just a single concept. Soverick was already capable of creating top-grade artifacts that contained concepts on his own without the help of others and they have had experience in creating concepts through Ragnarok so they finished just shy of a year.

That is a very short time to break through into the titan of law stage. Most people who spend that short a time to construct their concept and become titans of law have probably failed. Even Ragnarok spent a hundred years on his breakthrough and he had help from the hearts of Carnage he ate.

"It is ready," Soverick said.

Legion-7 let go of his hold on the spherical ball of laws that they were working on. The ball began to shrink without a foundation. But this time it didn't implode on itself. Legion-7 controlled its contraction so that the formation and linkages within the concept were maintained. They don't want it to be unusable like the first one that they made by mistake.

The white phantom sphere shrunk until it became a white crystal just 1 meter in size. Then the law matrix of the void universe appeared to vet it. A tapestry woven of threads of light but in the visible and the invisible spectrum sprung into existence for the briefest of moments. It disappeared without making any changes.

The clones of Legion did not sigh in relief. They were not concerned about the outcome at all. Soverick was highly confident of the integrity and functionality of the concept they created so they were all confident that it would pass the inspection of the void universe and not be rejected.

Even if it were rejected, it would have no negative impact on them apart from the loss of time and effort. Their existence would not be impacted too much if it exploded because it couldn't withstand the pressure of the void universe.

Legion-1 took the concept and pressed a bead of origin essence into it. It began to glow so he threw it out of his inner world into the empty space of his origin. The origin essence and cosmic energy within it prevented it from being destroyed in his Origin.

The concept expanded once it got out of his inner world. It got as big as a star. Then it encapsulated his inner world from the outside. Legion-1 willed it to shrink and began fusing with it.

"Now that that's done. Let's make some preparations and have a period of rest before we get to work on making our Law matrix. It is going to take a while and it won't be easy." Soverick said with a grin.