

GREED: ALL FOR WHAT?

Chapter 1401 The Trump Card.

It is not a suitable condition for one who is about to undergo tribulation. Fortunately, he has divine life energy. Thanks to Legion-9, he will be in the best condition for his tribulation by the time he reaches the void.

"We have to survive this," Legion-5 said and all of Legion agreed.

They have invested a lot into Legion-5 so he must survive the tribulation. For that purpose, back for this tribulation.

Not only will he surely die if he fails but so will Legion-7. Legion-7's death will mean that Legion-1, Soverick, Ragnarok, and the tree father will also die. That is 6 out of 9 of them dying at once. That is a massive loss to Legion even if it is temporary.

They will be resurrected by the void universe since they are Origin god's now and the Tree Father can be saved through the soul sphere. But Legion-7's death might be permanent. After all, the void universe will never allow him to exist again.

That means they have a real chance of losing a clone and their independent resurrection system permanently. It is not a welcomed prospect to Legion.

So Legion-5 must survive. They have the confidence that he will survive. That is as long as the void universe doesn't go too far in its attempt to kill them.

He has a strong body that can rival Origin gods and an affinity with lightning instead of a weakness to it. He might not be completely immune to lightning but it shouldn't be able to kill him easily.

If all of that is not enough, they still have a card they haven't played yet. They played that card now before it became too late to use it. They invoked the law matrix with his comprehension of laws.

No matter how unwilling the void universe was, it bestowed him with cosmic energy that elevated his existence. It improved his stats but didn't improve his authority since he has a seed of power already.

He was right to leave the ancient battlefield because the commotion caused by the bestowal was obvious even in the void.

His stats are already large. They rival those of weak Origin gods so the void universe needed to bestow more cosmic energy than normal to multiply it by one hundred for each law that he comprehended.

Since he comprehended 20 laws, that made for a total of x2000 times increase in power. At this point, it looked as if the void universe was pushing him to the threshold of the energy requirement needed to become a world god.

It doesn't look like he is becoming a king of law at all. Legion is sure of this because Legion-1 is about this strong after his concept engorged on cosmic energy. Fortunately, this occurred in the void so no one apart from the realm lord and Mother High Heaven noticed it.

NAME: Agrivo839,371,456A (Legion-5)

RACE: Supreme Beast.

BLOODLINE: Unknown Royal bloodline.

POWER LEVEL: Sovereign Of Law.

PHYSIQUE: Body Of Law (50%).

HP: INFINITE

STAMINA: INFINITE

ENERGY QUALITY: Origin Energy.

ENERGY QUANTITY: 393,992,899,374

VITALITY: 22,880,979,287,831.

ENDURANCE: 12,452,294,538,245

STRENGTH: 18,623,283,737,637

AGILITY: 5,923,285,737,893

PERCEPTION: 10,538,723, 900,756

SPIRIT: 11,935,951,023,367

POWER: 321%

AMPLIFICATION: 10,000

DIVINE SENSE (GRADE): 1,000,000,000 (B)

LAWS

Fire: 100%

Light: 100%

Earth: 100%

Water: 100%

Air: 100%

Darkness: 100%

Space: 100%

Time: 100%

Causality: 100%

Fate: 100%

Soul: 100%

Slaughter: 100%

Devour: 100%

Blood: 100%

Life: 100%

Creation: 100%

Destruction: 100%

Death: 100%

Lightning: 100%

Illusion: 100%

OTHERS

MANA AFFINITY: 85%

LAW AFFINITY: 50%

ELEMENTAL AFFINITY (GRADE): LIFE (DIVINE), DEVOUR (DIVINE), LIGHT (DIVINE), DARKNESS (DIVINE), FIRE (DIVINE), WATER (DIVINE), EARTH (DIVINE), AIR (DIVINE), LIGHTNING (DIVINE), SOUL (DIVINE), TIME (DIVINE), SPACE (DIVINE), CREATION (DIVINE), DESTRUCTION (DIVINE).

DIVINE ABILITIES:

1. COSMIC DRAGON HEART.
2. ORIGIN DIAMOND.
3. SPACE CRYSTAL BUTTERFLY.
4. TIME WORM.
5. LIQUID GRAVITON.
6. SPARK OF CONSCIOUSNESS.
7. GIANT OF ORDER.
8. DEMON KING CROWN.
9. CELESTIAL GODHOOD.

STATUS: Host To Legion-7.

He was impressed as he looked at his stats. An Origin god would have stats greater than 1,000,000,000 but his stats are at least a thousand times greater than that.

Legion-5 said in anticipation, "Just a little more and we will reach the limit of the light side of the void universe."

Legion-7 wasn't so impressed. He said, "That is going to happen when we become Origin gods. Unfortunately, it means cosmic energy would be of little use to us when we become Origin gods."

Legion-5 wasn't discouraged. "We will be able to imbibe cosmic energy when we become world gods. We should look forward to that instead. For now, this will have to do."

Legion-7 agreed. "It is not up to the level of Legion-1, but it will have to do. Either that or the void universe is cheating us."

His power has reached 6×10^{17} . A new Origin god has a power rating of 1×10^{14} . An average star like Helios has a power rating of 5×10^{20} while the largest star has a power rating of $N \times 10^{25}$.

That is the power output of Legion-1 and also the limit of the light side of the void universe. Any more power than that is displaced to the dark side of the void universe. So there are bigger stars but they are on the dark side of the void universe. But at that point, they are more like black holes than stars.

He is still a long way from reaching that limit, but what he has achieved is more than good enough for a Sovereign of law. If his current power is not enough just to break through to become an Origin god, then nothing can be enough.

If he dies with this amount of power, then it means the void universe is bent on killing him. No amount of power possessed by an entity that still relies on the void universe will save him from that.

A/N: Bonus chapter for power stones. Tomorrow, we will get the bonus chapter for golden tickets.

Tip: You can use left, right keyboard keys to browse between chapters.

If you find any errors (non-standard content, ads redirect, broken links, etc..), Please let us know so we can fix it as soon as possible.

Chapter 1402 Tribulation And Suffering.

The next thing he did was to change his location. It is a precaution. He is too close to the realm tree for comfort. So he moved deeper into the void.

Then he initiated his breakthrough by recalling the Origin essence that Legion-1 gave him when he reincarnated. That essence is deep within his Origin. That means it is close to Legion-1's inner world since Legion-1 is in possession of their Origin. The Origin essence appeared within his inner world now and began to permeate his existence.

The major goal of the Origin essence was to make him whole. It wanted to fuse every aspect of his existence so it tried to make every part of his existence become one. That includes Legion-1 and his other 8 divine abilities.

All of them fused with him without a hitch. His strength began improving with the consolidation of his existence. This is because his immortal seed of power is becoming one with him.

The next thing that the Origin essence wanted to do was make him one with Legion-7. This also occurred without any issues. His divine abilities became Legion-7's and Legion-7's soul spark also became his.

The only hitch is that the two shards of power prevented their consciousness from becoming one but that didn't stop or delay the breakthrough in any way.

Origin essence moved on to the next stage now that he has become a monolith existence. It moved next to make him become one with the law matrix of the void universe. This is where a problem that couldn't be overlooked arose.

Legion-7 was willing to fuse with him and they were Originally of one existence so they became one without issues. The void universe on the other hand rejected him outright.

This rejection could either be because he has the crown of a demon king or the godhood of a Celestial. Or it could be because Legion-7 which it hates is a part of him now.

He wasn't willing to stop the breakthrough so he pushed for fusion with the law matrix. The fusion began but there was resistance so it was slow. Heavy tribulation also descended to disrupt the process.

It was exactly as Soverick saw it. The law matrix became a wild horse they had to tame. It is worse because it is a horse with the power of lightning.

Legion-5 said with a little anxiety, "This is the Tribulation."

Legion-7 encouraged him, "We will survive this."

They spoke to each other as a large whirlpool appeared in the void. The law matrix became so agitated that void energy was whipped into a frenzy. This caused a whirlpool of charged void energy to surround them. The whirlpool then erupted with purple lightning.

The first shot of purple lightning struck them and blasted a crater on their armored body. The crater was as large as a fist. It broke through their defense immediately.

"That is surprisingly painful." Both of them said at the same time.

They did not expect the first strike to harm them so much. That blow was already devastating but many more came after. They were pushed back from the center of the whirlpool by the first lightning strike but another one struck them in the back and pushed them back to the center.

Purple lightning from their surroundings bombarded them over and over again. More and more small craters were created on their body. They increased from the size of their fist to the size of their head. It hurt their mind as well as their bodies.

This tribulation is not the normal tribulation of body, soul, and mind in that the effect of the tribulation does not occur separately one after the other. This lightning punishment is hurting all of their existence at once. It is not giving any part of their existence time to rest at all.

Legion-5 chuckled. "This is surely suffering. I don't see what else could be more painful than this."

They have experienced the separation of body and soul before and they have experienced the consumption of their soul due to Chaos energy and they have experienced the burden of a singularity of infinite possibilities so they know pain. But this tribulation has taken the cake in the most painful thing they have ever experienced.

It would be better if their soul, bodies, and minds were separated with a knife instead of being shredded little by little by lightning. This is despite the fact that they are supposed to be immune to lightning and any other type of energy attack.

To top things off, not only is their body breaking as well as their soul, but they are also experiencing hallucinations and the destruction of their memories.

Both the destruction of their memories and the hallucinations they are experiencing are not normal at all. The mind tribulation shouldn't involve the destruction of memories but the void universe is using it against them.

If not for Legion-7's already immortal psychic engram, they wouldn't be able to survive the destructive effect of the purple lightning on their memories. They would have lost their sense of self as their body was destroyed.

If it wasn't clear before, it is clear now that the void universe is biased against them. But they are strong. Their mind held on as well as their body. They were able to keep themselves whole by regenerating with their infinite supply of Origin energy. The durability of Liquid graviton armor was maintained this way so the craters couldn't destroy them.

Legion-7 wouldn't have been able to survive the lightning if he were alone and Legion-5 surely wouldn't be able to survive the destruction of his memories alone. But they are not alone. The two of them made up for their weaknesses in the physical and spiritual aspects.

However, things got worse as time passed. The purple lightning turned into violet with a tiny hint of black. Their body was finally blasted through.

A lance of this special lightning went through them like a spear. It literally perforated their existence. A gaping hole appeared in their body, soul, mind, and memories.

Chapter 1403 The Darkness.

For a moment there, they lost their identity. Legion-5 for sure forgot why he was in the void and what he was doing in the middle of a lightning storm. He was confused but only for an instant. The other clones helped him with his identity and purpose. Then Legion-7 restored his fragmented consciousness.

Legion-5 jested, "I think the void universe wants to kill us."

He is joking to mask the pain. Despite reaching what he thought was the limit of pain, they still felt more pain because of the last attack.

Pain is the psychological response to damage to existence. It helps to determine a phenomenon that can threaten one's existence. That violet lightning is a threat to their existence hence the pain.

He might have joked about it but Legion is certain that the void universe wants to kill them. It has not been up to a minute but they have already been pushed to the closest point of death that they have ever reached since they reincarnated.

Not only did the lightning change color, but even the whirlpool around them also changed from black to red. The storm formed into a red cage charged with power. By the looks of things, the void universe does want to kill them.

More and more of the special violet lightning was created around them in the red whirlpool of a storm. Then they were discharged suddenly.

All of the lightning managed to find their way to Legion-5's body. So his body was turned into perforated cheese very quickly.

It happened so fast. Most of their body was lost in seconds. Their arms and legs have turned to dust. Part of their head and most of their torso are gone too.

The physical injury cannot compare to the injury of the soul. Their consciousness despite having two of it was tethering on the edge of total collapse. Any more and they will die.

They activated the time reversal of the time worm's divine ability quickly. Their injuries regenerated instantly. It was as if time was being rewinded. The pain disappeared suddenly and they were whole again.

"That was close."

"The law of order disappointed us."

"But we were prepared."

If they hadn't prepared for Legion-5 to be nearly unkillable then they would be dead by now. The law of order that usually disrupts and destabilizes energy attacks is not working for them at all. It has taught them a valuable lesson not to rely on the law of order.

In fact, they have learned not to rely on any Supreme law that isn't theirs. It could disappoint them when they truly need it. It certainly will disappoint them when they are fighting the owner of the supreme law.

Fortunately, their confidence wasn't completely in the divine ability of the giants of order. They have other divine abilities to rely on. So it would take a lot more to kill them.

Even so, their resistance to death was tested to the limit. The tribulation continued for a few more minutes during which they came close to death several times.

The good news is that the fusion with the law matrix was still going on. It might be slow but it is progress.

The bad news is that the progress of the fusion became slower the more injured they were. So the progress slowed down terribly as the lightning tribulation got more aggressive as time passed.

The amount of lightning strikes they received per second increased from 10 to 100. Time reversal had to remain activated constantly to keep them alive while simultaneously maintaining the fusion with the law matrix. Any lapse in judgment and they will die immediately.

It was as if they were being beaten as they tried to dig up a treasure. They couldn't get distracted from digging by focusing only on defending themselves from the beating and they couldn't forgo defense to expedite the digging.

They had to do the same at the same time. The tribulation forced them to walk a fine line between the struggle to survive and to ascend to immortality.

Fortunately, things began to change for them soon. They completed the fusion of their existence with the law matrix. Both Legion-7 and Legion-5 felt the change immediately.

Their consciousness began producing a mental power capable of changing the world without the use of Origin energy. It was soul force and it is also capable of opening up a space within the law matrix where their will is supreme.

It was ironic that what the void universe feared didn't occur. Legion-7 didn't become a law eater because he couldn't eat the law fragments in the law matrix anymore.

The crown of Chaos rejected the law fragments and the divine ability of the law of order prevented him from devouring laws. So Legion-7 will need other sources of law fragments such as seeds of power. It doesn't affect him because it is already what he was doing before.

This development caused the void universe to ease off the lightning storm. They also increased in power immediately so the damage of the lightning to them reduced drastically.

Then cosmic energy entered their existence from Helios and their concept engorged freely on it. They reached the limit of the light side of the void universe immediately.

Two things happened simultaneously at that point. The void universe gave up on harassing them so the lightning tribulation stopped immediately.

The turbulent whirlpool suddenly lost its momentum and died down immediately. However, they didn't experience the sudden peace because their consciousness was somewhere else.

What they saw was darkness. It was pitch and total darkness. Their soul force couldn't extend out of their minds and they couldn't use a domain. They couldn't even move their bodies. They appeared to be trapped in their mind in this darkness.

They thought to themselves, "This must be the darkness that Soverick saw."

"At least we are not dead yet."

They looked around and saw something that made them recognize where they were immediately. There is nothing in this dark world except for 3 massive consciousnesses.

Tip: You can use left, right keyboard keys to browse between chapters.

If you find any errors (non-standard content, ads redirect, broken links, etc..), Please let us know so we can fix it as soon as possible.

Chapter 1404 Befitting For One Who Dominates.

These 3 consciousnesses pressed down on their minds like heavy mountains. The pressure was stifling but they were largely unharmed.

The two clones' consciousness is stronger than before so they were able to bear the burden of the pressure of the consciousness of a high-order existence despite just being the two of them here in this world.

They were so relaxed that they could finally tell some details from the three consciousnesses. They didn't feel any form of power from the 3 of them. There was nothing like laws be they true or false, supreme or not. They didn't sense any divine power or divinity and they didn't feel any demonic power or sin from them.

The 3 consciousnesses are just that. They are consciousnesses. Not physical or spiritual or energy beings. The Suppression the clones feel is purely mental. It made them impressed that a being would have a consciousness that is so large.

The three consciousnesses are indeed very large. They are like 3 mountains while the clones are 2 boulders. It could be that what they are seeing is just the minds of the 3 entities or the mental manifestation of their physical forms. Either way, they are very strong.

What seemed odd to them was that the 3 consciousnesses seemed to be just heads. The heads are also irregular. They have many indistinct faces on them. The faces on the three heads are also always changing.

The 3 consciousnesses spoke to them,

"Welcome Legion"

"You have broken"

"Another tenet of the"

"Void universe"

"Congratulations"

"We were wrong"

"You have proven"

"Us wrong"

"We debated"

"This moment"

"It is because"

"You don't need"

"The prize for"

"This Tenet that"

"You have broken"

"But we must"

"Give you one "

"It is the rules"

"Is it because of the shard of power?" he asked them.

"Yes"

"And no"

"It has"

"Something to"

"Do with it"

"But Not"

"Entirely"

"Anyways"

"You have fused"

"The three paths"

"Of Evolution in"

"The void universe"

"As such,"

"You will be"

"Granted a crown"

"Fit for one"

"That dominates"

"Power in all"

"Forms and shapes"

"Do I get to choose what I get?" He asked them.

They didn't answer his question. They continued from where they stopped talking.

"Go forth"

"And dominate"

"The myriad powers"

"Become Better"

"And evolve"

"Further into"

Then they all said together, "GREATNESS!"

He felt something appear in his existence but he also felt the dark world trying to repel him then. He tried to delay the rejection to ask his question.

"What will happen if I become a world god now?"

Their many smiled in amusement.

"If you do"

"Then you would"

"Have become"

"A world god"

"Without a supreme law"

"Your consciousness"

"Would be your"

"Supreme law"

"You will break"

"Another tenet"

"Of the void"

"Universe that way"

He got his answer. But they didn't let him go then.

They asked with slight amusement,

"So will you"

"Do it"

"Or not"

Then they pushed him out of wherever this was. The two of them returned to the void universe and found the whirlpool dying down. They focused on what just happened to them.

First, they thought about the question that three consciousnesses asked them.

"So will you do it or not?"

They understand the implications of that question. There must be a reason or many reasons not to do it. At least not to do it right now.

If there were only benefits and no disadvantages with becoming world gods, then they don't have to think much about it before doing so. But there are some disadvantages so they have to think carefully about it before making a decision.

They have met the requirements to become a world god. They have a world spark and a world engine. They have also reached the power requirement to build a world. All they need is a world seed and they will become a world god.

They thought about the pros and cons before deciding.

"We will wait. It is not good to be shortsighted."

Becoming a world god will grant them a large boost to their power but it will come at a cost. For one, they have to fuse with their Origin for them to become a world god.

Their Origin is in Legion-1's control right now. Trying to become a world god means that Complete Unity has to take place. Every clone of Legion will have to fuse with Legion-1 immediately but that is not their plan.

It is a bad idea to become a world god now for many reasons. If they all return to their Origin now, all their concepts and divine abilities of the clones that haven't become Supreme will be lost.

Legion doesn't want that. That's why they planned for Unity with Legion-7 first before Unity with their Origin.

The most important reason why they don't want to become a world god now is that they will be like other world gods. They will have only one Supreme law and one world.

Legion doesn't want to be a normal world god. They want to become a world god with multiple worlds. For that to occur, all of them must have their own supreme laws at least before they unite with their Origin.

They can't let their reincarnation effort go to waste. They will lose Soverick's eyes, Helios' concept, Legion-8's budding concept, and many other benefits of reincarnation.

The third reason why they don't want to become world god yet is because they will have to detach Helios from the law matrix. This will cause them to lose their access to cosmic energy. They know that it will happen at some point in time but they want to delay it for as much as possible.

The last reason why they can't become a world god yet is that they don't have a world seed. They will need to acquire one before they can complete their breakthrough.

Currently, they are incomplete Origin gods. They need to unite with their Origin to become full Origin gods but that doesn't mean they are weak.

Tip: You can use left, right keyboard keys to browse between chapters.

If you find any errors (non-standard content, ads redirect, broken links, etc..), Please let us know so we can fix it as soon as possible.

Chapter 1405 Superior To The Soul Sphere.

They already have power at the limit of the light side of the void universe. So they can do something they have wanted to do since they met the realm lord in the Gattling plane.

They said at the same time, "The first thing we must do is remove the system from monitoring us."

The two of them have synchronized thoughts now that their existence has fused completely. Legion-5 was already part of Legion-7 when they performed the second stage of unity but now their souls have completely become one.

There's no boundary between their souls anymore so their thoughts are aligned. They should be one entity if not for their shard of power anchoring their consciousness separately.

Synchronized thought is a side effect of unity. It is not the synchronization of memory that they had as clones. They used to have different thoughts in the past but now their thoughts align because they have the same spark of consciousness of Legion-7.

This is the state that Legion will have once they have completed the third stage of Unity. That will occur when they all have their Supreme laws. For now, they are yet to complete the second stage of Unity.

They are a single entity as they have always been but they are closer to each other than ever. It is their strength and foundation for seeking perfection.

It is why the three consciousnesses believed that they didn't need the reward for fusing all 3 paths of evolution. It is because Legion is going to complete Unity in the future and will achieve what Legion-5 did on their own. At that time, Legion would also be powerful enough to control the power that they gained from the fusion.

These are all things that they wouldn't want others to know such as the realm lord. So the first thing they want to do after becoming Origin gods is to remove the surveillance of the system.

They have never trusted the realm lord but their distrust for him extended to the system ever since he came to Legion-7 for a deal. That distrust increased when Salvini offered them the same thing that the realm did.

It might be paranoia but if the realm lord has anything to do with Salvini, that means the realm lord and the first sage are working together. That is a lot to be worried about.

They are Origin gods now so they have a much closer connection to their Origin. Through it, they can tell Legion-1's position and pinpoint the connection that the system is using to monitor them.

They cut off that connection between themselves and the system. They did the same thing for other Legions that had started Unity with them. So they lost the system and so did Soverick and Ragnarok. That leaves Legion-8 still with the system.

Legion-5 spoke, "We are Legion-unity now."

Legion-7 agreed, "We are the first of our future."

Legion-unity then thought to themselves in anticipation, "There's so much I want to do. Which should I check first?"

"I think we should look at the crown of dominion first."

Their breakthrough has brought a lot of improvements to them. It didn't only lead to the breaking of a law of the universe and its subsequent reward, it also led to the complete integration of Legion-7 with Legion-5, Legion-6, and Legion-1.

Legion-7 has reached the Origin god level now so he can take over the souls of the clones who were stolen from him by the void matrix. This means that the independent resurrection system has come online once again.

Ragnarok and Soverick who were previously disconnected from him after becoming an Origin god have returned now. But the improvements are more than that. Legion-7 has now replaced the function of the soul sphere for the Legion.

They can share all types of energy through the Legion-7. He is even more useful than the soul sphere since he is literally Legion. The clones that have united with him can also share their concepts through him.

That is something that the soul sphere can't do. Legion-unity decided to test it first.

His tail shifted. It broke apart and became fragmented. Each fragment collapsed into a tiny black orb. These black orbs were devouring void energy around themselves like a cloud of hungry locusts. They grew stronger the more they devoured.

Red runes appeared around the cloud of tiny black orbs and bound them into the shape of tails. 10 of such tails were created from his single tail. This caused the devouring power of the tiny black orbs to be combined. It caused a whirlpool to begin to form around them.

Void energy was churned into a whirlpool that was being devoured slowly into their tails.

Legion-unity observed, "This looks like success."

"Ragnarok would have used it better but this is still good."

They can use Ragnarok's concept of the bottomless abyss but they can't become his concept. The difference between the two is massive. They are more like Sovereigns of law who possess the concept and not Origin gods who have become one with it.

While the power of the concept is limited in their hands, they can use the other concepts of the other clones in Unity without limit on the number. That means they have access to Legion-1's two concepts, Soverick's eyes as well as Ragnarok's concept.

That is more than enough to make up for the lack of power. They will surely be able to achieve more when they complete the second level of Unity and when they achieve the third level.

"I think we should try Cosmic force first."

"We can't try it out here in the open. What if we attract the attention of a passing world god?"

"Fine. We will try it when we reach Legion-1's inner world."

Legion-5 has always wanted to try cosmic force without limit. He is an Origin god now so he can bear more backlash. Plus he has a special domain thanks to his unique inner world that he wants to try.

Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Chapter 1406 Substitute For Universal Artifacts.

Unfortunately, he still has to wait before letting loose. For now, he has to reach Legion-1 safely. So they began flying towards him.

They can teleport but they don't want to leave any spatial traces behind that the Supreme Alliance can track. In the meantime, they can focus on the crown of dominion.

It is the crown that befits the one that dominates and just like the soul sphere, it affects all of Legion.

There is a ring of white light around their head. It appeared after they returned from the meeting with the 3 consciousnesses. The ring is not only on their head, it is on the other clones too. It is like the soul sphere. They all possess it.

One clear difference is that there is no main crown of domination. It appears that there is no difference between the crowns so they have the same thing.

Most peculiar is that the black orb that usually rotates around them has fused with the white ring and is revolving around their head along the white ring. So the ring has become the new orbit for the shard of power.

"This must be why we have two lines of thought." They observed.

They noticed that their shards of power were still two after they fused. The two of them are revolving along the white ring like trains along a train track. They also anchor their two individual identities. So despite the fact their bodies and souls have fused, they still think they are two and not one.

It is a strange situation. It is as if the personality of a single person has split into two. But there is no sense of rejection between them. Sometimes they act as one and other times they think of separate things at the same time. They know they are one because the mental resources of their existence have to be shared between them.

"This is not a bad thing."

"But the crown of dominion is useless to us."

"We don't need to create a path forward. We already have a path ahead of us."

"Fortunately, it is not completely useless to Legion. The other ones can use it."

They found themselves completing each other's thoughts. It doesn't feel strange at all.

The crown of dominion as its name implies helps them dominate the paths of power. They are an Origin god but they can use the crown of demon kings or the Authorities of Celestials to advance their concept into a supreme law instead of fusing other concepts into it.

Power is power to them. They can dominate it and use it in any form to grow stronger. But it is not useful to them because they don't need it anymore. Even so, it gave them an idea about what Universal artifacts are.

"We already have the ability of the soul sphere and the crown of dominion. I'm guessing we already have the power of many other types of Universal artifacts too."

"Maybe Universal artifacts are just the abilities of special entities. They might even be the organs of those existences."

"If they are then they are more similar to Soverick's artifact and the Tree Father's stigmata."

Then they shrugged. "We will know for sure when we build one."

Universal artifacts are unique but they don't seem to be special to Legion anymore. Sure, Universal artifacts can grant Origin gods abilities they don't have and those abilities are something that no normal Origin god should have.

These abilities are beyond the rules of operation of the void universe but they don't seem to be out of reach for Legion anymore. They have broken too many rules to know that they can attempt to build their own. That way they will be able to acquire something that they truly need.

That's where their testing of the crown of domination ended for them. They focused on their plans next.

The breaking of another law of the universe has not changed their plans. Acquiring a world seed is still high on their to-do list. They do not plan to use it now but they might need it in the future.

Besides, they will all definitely need a lot of world seeds if their plan for multiple worlds works out. While Legion is rich and they can afford a world seed, actually buying it is not so easy. A world seed is a very rare commodity. Despite it being expensive, there are always trillions of Origin gods in the void universe waiting to buy it.

The major problem is that the supply is very low. World gods are the usual suppliers but it is already very difficult to get a world fragment from them much less a world seed. So despite their wealth, they have to wait a long while to buy it or find a world seed themselves. The alternative is buying an inferior product from Mother Heaven which they don't want.

There is also the problem of wealth. Legion can surely afford 2 world seeds maybe even 3, but they will need 9 of them for their plans. So they have to start working for more wealth ahead of when they need the world seeds.

They moved far away from their current location. They passed by Helios so that any races they left behind would be burned away. Then they teleported from there to Legion-1. They found him busy with the most important agenda which is resource acquisition.

----The Immortal Lands.

The immortal lands is the place of living for immortals. It is outside the realm and located above the realm trees in the sea of void energy. The material that makes up the immortal lands repels void energy which caused each continent to form a bubble of absence of void energy around.

This is the least unique characteristic of the immortal lands. Not only can't void energy destroy them with its corrosive properties but neither can Origin gods or even world gods. If not for the fact that the continents can't be controlled by anyone, they would be taken away just for their durability.

A/N: Can you remember the Universal Artifacts that the four consciousnesses were talking about? This was after Legion created the singularity of infinite possibilities in Helios's arc. How many of the Universal Artifacts can Legion substitute for now?

Chapter 1407 How To Acquire Resources.

Despite the inability to possess the immortal continent, they are still very valuable to lay claim to. Even some world gods try to lay claim to them for reasons other than their everlasting properties.

Immortals care for little apart from pleasure and benefits. They certainly do not care for the ownership of land to lay their heads. Every Origin god can live in their domains. It is not safe as anyone can sense it and barge in. But then again, what is completely safe?

However, these immortal beings fight tooth and nail for the ownership of the immortal continents. Every Origin god wants them because of the springs that produce soul stones. This violence and competition is a serious and rampant issue because the immortal lands are not enough to go around.

The immortal lands are in limited numbers and an Origin god can never have too many soul stones. This has made soul stones very difficult to acquire if one doesn't have a world god to rely on.

So desperate measures have to be taken to acquire resources in the immortal lands. Especially if one wants to buy world seeds. These desperate measures usually start with sneaking into private property.

Legion-1 is currently doing that. He is sneaking into an area on the immortal continent with an owner. This immortal continent is very big. It is far larger than the ancient battlefield of the realm of high heaven. It is about 100 billion km square in surface area.

If its surface was a square, it would have sides of 315,000 kilometers in length. It is not a square. It is irregular with the longest straight measurement being about 500,000 kilometers.

This immortal land doesn't belong to a single person or a single faction. Most immortal lands are like this. Every Origin god with a certain amount of strength can carve out a piece of it for themselves. The only ones capable of staking a claim to a whole immortal continent are those with Supreme laws, realm lords, and world gods.

This immortal land is home to many Origin gods. They can live in peace most of the time. And they only need a little space to build their abode. The problem of conflict comes when the matter of soul stones gets involved.

No one will care too much if you carve out a large portion of land to live on. But there will be a problem as soon as that area of land contains a soul spring. It doesn't matter how small the area of land is. It may cause some unconvinced or desperate individuals to sneak into your territory.

This issue cannot be avoided because while Origin essence can be accumulated slowly and is best used to grow stronger, soul essence means quick resurrection. And it can also be shared amongst others, unlike Origin essence. So it can be used as currency.

Unfortunately, no one is generous enough to share soul stones. Origin gods hardly even use it for transactions. It is that valuable. So a soul spring that produces soul stones is very valuable. If you have it then you must anticipate the attempts to sneak into your property.

Now Legion doesn't need soul stones. They have Origin essence and divine life energy so they are not desperate for soul stone. But soul stones are the generally accepted Legal tender for Origin gods. Even though they have a large amount of wealth from gods, that wealth has to be converted to soul stones first before it becomes useful.

Legion-1 could approach the group of Origin gods that have banded together to lay claim to this soul spring and make a transaction with them in exchange for soul stones. He has a lot of things that can be used by Origin gods to forge and they will fetch a high price. There's no worry that he won't be able to make the sale, but he won't do that because that's for suckers.

At least that is not his first choice. He has to see if he can steal the soul stones first and get away with it before he tries to sell his stuff. That's why he is sneaking around.

He can't be seen with the eye or the divine sense. He is in a fold in space and is quietly approaching the soul spring. A normal world beast would be able to do this but not as well. After all, they don't have a concept with 7 laws and the law of space as its foundation. They would be sensed this close to the soul spring.

Legion-1 got close to the soul spring enough to see it with his eyes. That isn't as close as one might think but it is close enough for his mouth to reach.

That is the requirement to use his first concept. If he can see it, then he can surely swallow it. But first, he checked his surroundings.

The soul spring is a lake. Soul Springs are the only bodies of water on the immortal continent. The water is turbid white like milk. It is also very shallow such that one can easily scoop out the white crystalline stones at its bottom.

There is a barrier around the soul spring that would block any other world beast and most Monarchs of space. But it is easy for him to bypass the barriers around the soul spring. Unless they can create a seal capable of sealing an Origin god around the whole lake, they can't stop an Origin god with a 7-law concept of space.

Even if they manage to achieve that, it will only stop him from sneaking in. It won't stop him from breaking in.

"Now how do we do this?" he said as he stood above the lake.

He is currently not alone. He is never alone mentally and spiritually but he is not alone physically right now. His question is directed towards his companion. This question is not something that can be taken lightly so they have to consider it carefully.

A/N: Can you guess who the companion is?

Also, this bonus chapter is courtesy of Dungeater for his gift.

Chapter 1408 Economy Of Stealing.

Getting here is not the problem. Leaving is the problem. He is currently unnoticed. But that will change if he tries to take anything from the soul spring. While he can sneak past actual barriers without interacting with them and tripping their alarms, he can't take soul stones without interacting with the world. That means the waters of the lake will ripple.

The rippling of the lake will definitely be noticed. There are a lot of Origin gods with their divine sense and their eyes focused on the lake currently. They will know that someone has snuck in once he makes his move.

This won't change even if they use illusion to deceive their perception. It is because while they might succeed in hiding the fact that the lake has been touched, they won't be able to hide the fact they have used illusion.

The concept of Origin gods protects them by resisting other concepts. So they might succeed in fooling an Origin god but they won't be able to keep them ignorant of that action.

Their concept will sense the activity of another concept on them and the Origin gods will know that they have fallen into an illusion. So either way, they won't be able to avoid informing the Origin gods that they have made a move.

Legion-unity replied after thinking for a while. "The alternative is to use the advantage of stealth to attack the guards first. But that's a bad idea."

Legion-1 nodded. "We are here to steal, not to fight."

Stealth will surely give them an advantage if they decide to get rid of the guards first, but it will waste their time and make it more difficult to steal and escape with what they have stolen.

Legion-unity continued, "Exactly. We don't have a good alternative. We should go with the best plan and prepare for the worst. We will just fight our way out. And if it doesn't work, then we will pay them off."

Legion-unity is also here. They snuck in with Legion-1 too. They shouldn't be able to utilize space to hide like Legion-1 since they don't have that concept. But Legion-1 can so they can. Every Origin-level clone that has united with Legion-7 can share their concepts.

Legion-1 agreed with a shrug. "That is the only way. It will be difficult but I think we can pull it off."

He doesn't appear to care too much about being caught. This is because despite how everything looks, they're not doing anything illegal. Sneaking around is a basic right and stealing is not illegal. Getting caught, however, is illegal.

Might make right. They can steal and everything will be alright as long as they can get away with it. If the owner can't maintain the ownership of something, then they shouldn't own it in the first place.

The problem will arise if they are unable to escape. Even if they can't escape and are captured, they can pay for their transgression and can still go ahead to make the deal that they came here for. The Origin gods here won't hold a grudge against them for attempting to steal.

Being immortal means it is both proper for you to take offense at everything and also foolish to take offense at anything. Immortality means you can do anything you want. But most don't take offense for attempted theft. Only a successful theft is worthy of anger and taking offense.

Sure you can take offense that some people tried to steal from you. But how far are you going to go with taking offense when people are always going to try to steal from you? Immortality has a way of teaching you to let some things go.

Just as you can take offense because you are immortal, people can always try to steal because they are immortal too. Even if you decide to take offense and kill the offender, that is not going to stop the offender from coming back with more trouble for revenge.

So it is better to let bygones be bygones when you catch a thief. The thieves will also pay to be pardoned. It is a lesser amount than they would need to resurrect. This way, it is a win-win for both sides.

You will earn money from thieves as long as you are strong enough to protect what is yours and thieves will be willing to take the risk to steal as a kind of investment or gamble.

This dynamic has created a new type of economy based on thievery. This is why Legion is not afraid of being caught. They will simply have to pay fines and then make the deal they came for in the first place.

Legion-1 is very strong but he still chose to sneak in. He doesn't have a supreme law yet so only those with Supreme laws can beat him.

There is none around that he knows of but he didn't attack the soul spring brazenly because he is outnumbered. After all defense on home ground is easier than attacking.

As things are, he would be uncertain of escaping stealing if he was alone. But the presence of Legion-unity has increased their chances of escaping.

The two of them regarded each other. They look like mirror images of each other. They are featureless like Supreme Beasts. They don't have eyes, nose, mouths, ears, or anything. They simply look like white crystal statues with two arms, two legs, one tail, and two blue horns.

But then they shared a grin and their features began to change. They changed but there is still very little difference between them. They look exactly alike. They are both armored in a sealed and scaled black material of Liquid graviton. Even their tails are armored.

The similarities between them are extensive. They both have four eyes with purple pupils and black sclera. They both have a crown of interlocked black horns around the two prominent and longer blue horns on their heads. They both have runes etched on their scales.

Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Chapter 1409 Bleed Them Dry.

One set of runes is white and is etched directly onto the armor while the other set is blackish purple and floats above the scales. Their wide jaws that split their face shared an identical grin that displayed their numerous black teeth.

If there is any physical difference between them, it is that the white halo of light atop their heads is not identical. One halo has one black sphere attached to it while the other halo has two black spheres.

The other difference is within them. If one can see within them, you will notice that even though they both have inner worlds, their inner worlds are different.

One inner world is ringed with a red crown and contains nothing visible. The other inner world has a landmass in it. On that landmass is a green elf, a battle sage monkey, a multicolored spiritual entity, and an elaborate construction. Beyond these differences, the two of them might as well be the same entities. Even their soul fluctuations are identical.

The two of them moved together as one. Legion-unity disappeared completely while Legion-1 opened his mouth wide towards the lake. A formless force enveloped a large proportion of the lake.

This force locked space within it. Then the frozen space began to contract. It shrunk and flew towards Legion-1's open mouth. This is world devour in action.

Legion-1 thought to himself as he stole a large portion of the lake, "If I am going to steal then I might as well steal a lot."

He could have taken a few of the stones but he didn't. That's just inefficient and he doesn't like wastage.

He was full of excitement but someone roared in anguish. It is as if they felt pained down to the foundation of their existence. The fighting hasn't even begun but the sight of what legion-1 has done damaged someone's mind and soul.

The person cried out, "This is too much."

Someone else screamed. "You're too greedy."

This is clearly too much. Legion-1 didn't steal some soul stones. He is stealing 70% of whatever is in the lake including the lake. A small ripple in the calm lake would have been noticed much less a sudden fall in the level of the water. Stealing the water of the lake is bad for the lake so it is not a wonder why the Origin god felt pained.

They saw the effect of the concept and they saw the perpetrator. They used these clues to identify the criminal who wanted to bleed them dry.

"It is a world beast. These damned world beasts are always so greedy."

"They are also powerful so we have to be careful."

"World beast or not, this person is not leaving here today. Surround it quickly. Activate the space-locking formation and stealth-breaking formation immediately."

It is clear to the defenders that Legion-1 is a world beast. World beasts are best at escaping. They can't be trapped in a domain and their concept of space makes them very fast. But they are prepared for him. If they can't trap him with a domain, they will trap him with their bodies and they will lock down space so that he can't escape.

They activated the stealth-breaking formation immediately after they noticed Legion-1. A three-dimensional net of blue lines appeared in their territory. It is formed by layers of the nets stacking on top of each other at fixed intervals.

Anyone hidden through the distortion of light, manipulation of shadows or darkness, or creation of illusion will be exposed by the blue lines. Their existence will obstruct the nets and create an obstruction that will expose them in the 3-dimensional structure.

Even those hidden in folds of space will be exposed. However, they didn't see Legion-unity despite the activation of the stealth-breaking array. It is because the blue lines went through his position without hindrance.

He is using Legion-1's 7-law concept composed of the laws of space, fire, air, water, earth, light, and darkness so his existence has blended completely with space. The only reason why they found Legion-1 is because he couldn't remain hidden after interacting with the world by activating World Devour.

So these people are not aware that there is someone still hidden and didn't plan for him. They surrounded the lake in large numbers. Then they activated the space locking array. The space-locking array trapped Legion-8 but he remained hidden.

Next, they surrounded the lake on all sides as they watched it disappear down the mouth of the thief. Their eyes were burning with anger but they didn't let their emotions ruin their plans.

They formed a thick barrier with the manifestation of their concepts around the lake. A single Origin god made a dome of earth around the lake that is more than a kilometer thick. Another Origin god made a wall of fire and another added a wall of ice.

By all looks, they have captured the daring world beast. They became more relaxed and full of anticipation for when they would lay their hands on the thief.

"I hate world beasts so much. They are too troublesome to kill."

"Yeah. They have ridiculously strong bodies and high resistance to concepts."

"It doesn't matter. We are 20 and it is one."

They don't want to fight. So one of them said to Legion-1, "You can't run away world beast. We have you surrounded. Just accept defeat, return what you took, and make amends."

Legion-1 could try to escape but it is highly unlikely that he would succeed. So they believed that they had the right to ask for his surrender. They expected him to argue or at most resist. They didn't expect space to suddenly fluctuate within the space-locking array.

Someone yelled at him, "Give up. It is impossible to escape."

"Don't push us or we will turn your body into a top-grade artifact."

They went on guard immediately. They were expecting some sort of attack from the world beast. But then another world beast suddenly appeared.

Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Chapter 1410 Double Entendre.

Legion-1 was beside the lake. He was more or less at the center of the encampment. They saw him take off towards the closest part of the dome blocking his way. So all of their attention was rightfully focused on him when Legion-Unity appeared. It didn't help that Legion-Unity appeared at the opposite end of the barricade.

Legion-Unity appeared right in front of an Origin god with his mouth wide open. He looked like a world beast, but what came out of his mouth was nothing related to world beasts.

A torrent of charged white liquid poured out of his opened jaws. The liquid plasma exploded immediately after it came in contact with the world. It formed an exploding horizontal white pillar that struck the defensive ring in front of him and the Origin god behind it.

They were prepared for anything. Or at least they thought they were. Their concepts were deployed. Walls of earth, fire, water, air, and various other phenomena were erected. These walls are as tall as mountains and as thick as hills. Any attack would be resisted. Again, or so they thought.

But they didn't prepare for a dragon breath that has reached the limit of the light side of the universe in terms of raw power. Unlike them, he has been preparing for this attack for quite a while.

The defenders didn't know what hit them. Metaphorically and literally. The world became white and painful because of the searing heat. It is as if a star exploded in their faces. It was all they could feel.

All the barriers broke and shattered alongside the Origin gods who erected them. If not for the Origin god with the ability to redirect force, then this attack alone would have been more than enough to demolish every opposition. This Origin god didn't try to manipulate the attack. He imposed his concept on space and forced space itself to bend. Space was warped ever so slightly, so the straight line of attack became curved. The attack was redirected like this.

The attack was spread out against the barrier, so not everything was destroyed. But the barrier was close to the end. It was teetering on the edge. A small push, and it would fall.

The defenders knew this. So they rushed to defend the hole in their barricade. It was the smart decision. But that left Legion-1 largely lacking in opposition.

The smart decision for Legion-1 would be to capitalize on that weakness. But he didn't. He continued pushing in the opposite direction. Then he released his own dragon breath.

Another star appeared within the barricade. It struck the other side of the dome, where resistance was the least. This time there wasn't an Origin god to redirect the attack. His dragon breath pierced through every opposition. It only stopped when the expensive emergency energy barrier appeared.

Legion-1's eyes glinted sharply. He murmured, "Here it is."

This is the reason why he didn't join Legion-Unity to take advantage of the first hole in the barricade. That attempt would have failed because this barrier would have come up. Then the two of them would be in the same spot and would be quickly surrounded by the defenders. He had seen it in a vision before it happened.

But now the energy barrier has appeared, so he can join up with Legion-Unity. He did so immediately. He used the crystal space butterfly divine ability to teleport to Legion-Unity.

Legion-Unity was already plunging into the hole. The defenders had reinforced the hole with more power, so it would have been difficult for him to break the dome quickly, even with his Origin diamond divine ability. But now there are two of them.

They slashed forward, and everything in front of them was torn apart. The powerful energy barrier is unidirectional, so it can only defend against attacks from a single direction. It is currently patching the second hole so it can block their path. The two of them were able to escape easily this way.

Someone roared in anger behind them, "Activate the continent wide space lock array. Activate the battleships. Chase them to the ends of the world. Chase them until death and beyond."

If this person were a mortal, their voices would be hoarse with all the screaming. That's how agitated they are.

The defenders moved quickly. No one bothered to bring up the fact that the continent-wide space lock array will be expensive to use and will surely offend others on the immortal continent, or that the battleships would be expensive to run.

Not one person advised that it would be smart to cut their losses, seeing as the two dragons pretending to be world beasts could teleport to each other while they were already within a space lock array.

No one mentioned any of that. They activated the battleships and gave chase. These battleships are expensive, but they are powerful and fast. The clones couldn't surf space because of the space lock array, so the battleships were catching up to them.

Not only that, but these battleships were equipped with deadly cannons trained at them.

These cannons are top-grade artifacts with the same concept. Each shot from them is expensive but effective. They produce an intangible psychic attack that is difficult to sense and even more difficult to dodge because it moves at the speed of light.

Unless the Origin gods have a defensive spiritual concept, they wouldn't be able to defend against the attack at all. A single attack will give an Origin god a headache. 10 of them at once will freeze them. This will ensure that they capture the thieves alive. After all, what use are dead thieves?

The battleships were 10, and they had two cannons each. That makes for 20 attacks fired every second. So the defenders were expecting the two thieves to be captured very quickly after being struck. But neither one stumbled or paused.

They don't know that they have miscalculated again. They are not facing two, but three thieves. It is the third hidden thief present within the two thieves that is protecting them against the psychic attacks.

Chapter 1411 Cosmic Domain.

The face of the leader changed. He snorted and shouted to the thieves, "You have some skills and have clearly done your research. But you will fail. What you're doing right now is causing us to waste energy and resources, which you will pay for."

The clones of Legion could escape if they wanted to. They could teleport to Helios, but that's a bad idea. It is not good to steal and then lead their angry enemies to one of their most important clones. So they were determined to fight it out.

Besides, they can already see the way out of this dilemma, so they were confident of escaping.

Legion-1 turned around to face their pursuers, while Legion-Unity continued to run. He opened his mouth wide and used his first concept to the max. The world froze in front of him. The battleships slowed down as if caught in amber. Then they began to shrink toward the open mouth.

The pursuers got a chill. They had raised the defenses of the battleships to the max in preparation for another dragon breath. But this didn't feel like a dragon breath.

They didn't know that they were shrinking but they could see that the mouth of Legion-1 was getting bigger and bigger. It soon filled their entire vision. He was going to swallow them if nothing was done to stop him.

One of them roared in anger, "Is he a world beast or not?"

Another one shouted, "Use the energy cannons!!!"

It is one thing for a world beast to be able to use dragon breath. It is another thing to be immune to spiritual attacks. They have never seen anything like it, but this is just the start.

The energy attacks they were hoping would save them didn't do that. Instead, the attacks shrank as they approached Legion-1 and entered his mouth.

The sight of their attacks entering the pitch black hole of a jaw informed them of their fate. So they did the smart thing. They disembarked from the battleships and kept them in their pocket dimensions. Then they all activated their domains.

A world beast might be able to swallow one of them even with a domain activated, but 20 of them can break the shackles of World Devour on them.

This is true. Legion-1 saw it before it happened. So Legion-Unity appeared beside him and deployed his cosmic domain.

This is the domain of his cosmic dragon heart. It froze everything around him, including the Origin gods and their domains.

There was no physical change in the world. The world didn't disappear around them, and they didn't appear in an empty space like a normal domain. But a formless power spread outward from Legion-Unity. Everything the formless power touched fractured.

It caused a white line resembling the cracking of mirrors to appear in the world. Then the concepts under the influence of the formless power unraveled.

An Origin god thought in panic, "I can't use my concept anymore."

Even Legion-1 was not exempted from this nullification. He had to shift his existence into that of a giant of order for him to be spared from becoming powerless.

Only the two clones could move. The others were frozen and powerless. They made for easy targets for Legion-1 as he punched them.

Legion-1 was able to space surf again, so he killed the Origin gods quickly and took any artifacts on them, such as pocket dimensions. Then he teleported away from the immortal continent.

Legion-Unity was left behind to deal with the consequences of their actions. There were no more pursuers, but there was a backlash to pay for. He used cosmic force on Origin gods, so the void universe is angry. He bore the punishment of that anger without a choice. His existence was fragmented, and he died.

The world resumed its peace and quiet. Some people were happy, and some were sad. Losing a lot of your wealth can make one suicidal. But if you are an Origin god, there's a better option, which is to dedicate a good portion of your life to revenge.

Legion were part of the happy people.

Soverick congratulated everyone, "It seems that business deal went well."

Legion-1 chuckled. "We have the cosmic domain to thank for it. It can break everything, including a space lock array."

"It is a pity that it is expensive to use.

"It is still a good thing, though. Making business deals has become easier."

True to their word, Legion resumed "making business deals" as soon as Legion-Unity resurrected. Their existence created a perplexing problem for their business partners. No one could deal with them because they had no weaknesses.

Most importantly, nothing could stop them from escaping because of the cosmic domain. This is a domain that shuts down and neutralizes any ability that isn't part of Legion-

Unity's dragon heart. That means other clones will be powerless under its influence, much less other entities.

----Cat And Mouse.

In the vastness of space, there are always people fighting. Especially in the void. Fighting is not rare, but it is rare for thousands of enemies to be stuck in a stalemate with an opponent of the same realm. It is doubly rare to see vampires fighting outside of a realm tree. After all, they are weak to sunlight.

So it is quite a sight to see a large, scaled beast with 10 tails fighting against an army of vampires. This beast has six limbs and carries a mountain of glowing crystals on its back.

This beast alone formed a pit in the fabric of reality with its existence. Its tails created a powerful devouring force that created a whirlpool. But this whirlpool is so large and so deep that it feels like reality is collapsing into it.

This pit appears to be bottomless. It is not truly bottomless, but it is still growing, expanding, and getting deeper. This is terrifying since the pit is the body of the beast. Its limbs can't be seen. Only the glowing mountain of crystals on its back can be seen from the top of the pit.

Chapter 1412 Frustration Or Shame.

This beast is like an ant lion in its sand pit. But unlike an ant lion, it is not passive in its hunting. The 10 tails of the beast reach out of the pit to drag in careless vampires. This is despite being surrounded by thousands of Vampires who are attacking it from every direction.

The Vampires are not weak either. Each one is equal to an Origin god that has reached the limit of the void universe, so they are very powerful. Each of their attacks shreds a part of the pit.

The Vampires are not useless. Their attacks are the major reason why the bottomless pit is not bigger. They chip away at it little by little. But all their attacks cannot destroy it because this beast appears to be endless. It is always growing as it devours the world.

There is a sphere of gravitational pull around the beast that is affecting everything around it. Matter and energy are pulled to the beast, where they are devoured. This is what is fueling its constant growth.

The Vampires can resist the pull, but void energy is not spared from the force. It enters the bottomless pit at the center of the gravitational field and replenishes every part of it that has been destroyed. So while the presence of the Vampires is not useless, they are far from defeating the bottomless abyss.

A frustrated Vampire complained, "Who is the undead one here, him or us?"

There are thousands of Vampires here, and they can't take down one Origin god. They ought to be ashamed of themselves, but the prevalent emotion of the Vampires is frustration. Frustration easily trumps shame when they don't even want to defeat the Origin god in the first place.

The Vampires don't even want to be here, but their hearts of Carnage compels them to fight, even though fighting appears to be useless. Their work won't end, even if they manage to destroy the pit. It would only resurrect somewhere else, and they would have to fight it again. Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

They can't leave, so they have to stay around and act as if they are busy. That means they attack and watch as the beast regenerates endlessly.

"When will this suffering ever end?" One of them grumbled silently.

Another one that is bolder added, "This is stupid. This whole thing is just stupid."

Someone snapped at it, "Be careful with what you say."

The Vampire was unapologetic. It shrugged and asked, "What would we have achieved even if we killed the pit?"

No one answered, but many of them grumbled more within themselves.

Normally, Vampires don't dare to complain about the order of their Supreme. They don't even dare blame CARNAGE, much less call it or its plan stupid. Those who offend their Supreme always regret it in the most gruesome and painful way imaginable. But that can't happen now.

They dare to complain because their Supreme can't do anything more than compel them with their heart of Carnage. They don't know why their Supreme appears to be impotent. They can only guess that it has something to do with why they have a distant sensation of their Supreme.

It is almost as if they are separated from their Supreme by a distance too large for it to exert its power. This is the prevalent theory, considering that one of the instructions that the Supreme of Carnage sent them was for them to find it.

Whatever the reason, it has made it possible for them to put in just the barest minimum to find the Supreme. On the one hand, they want their Supreme to remain in whatever prison it is, so that it won't be able to control them. On the other hand, they need their Supreme to be free so that they too can be free from this boring work.

It is a bitter vonnundrum. Harsh servitude from an unforgiving Supreme or eternal boredom while hunting an immortal. It truly is a difficult choice to make.

The only change in their lives comes rarely, and it happens whenever their target disappears. It happened after a while. The pit disappeared. Gone is the gravitational pull of the devouring force.

The world sighed in relief and returned to its peaceful nature in the absence of the bottomless pit, but the Vampires groaned and complained. That's the only thing they can do. They had to fly in the direction that they could sense the beast after complaining.

This disappearance is not new to them. The beast disappears several times across the almost 10 thousand years of fighting it. The disappearance usually occurs when they are about to kill the beast. It will leave and heal before they find it again. But it could also leave whenever it wants, and there's nothing they can do to stop it.

This fight is more of a cat-and-mouse pursuit. They can't keep the beast down, despite their best efforts. Even death doesn't solve the problem because it is an Origin god, and they can't give up, so they have to chase it across the void universe while wishing that CARNAGE could be kind.

If CARNAGE was kind, they would put in every effort to release it. Instead of hounding only Ragnarok, they will split up to attack every clone they can sense. They would use their wealth to hire helpers for their cause.

Unfortunately, CARNAGE isn't kind, so they have to continue going through the motions.

If they think they are the only ones exasperated by the useless and repetitive chase, then they are wrong. Legion is also frustrated. They are not happy that they have to sacrifice a clone to keep the Vampires busy.

Ragnarok said to all of Legion, "Sometimes, I wish I were dead."

He got a brief moment of rest from the Vampires which he spent doing nothing. Doing nothing is good, so he can't complain. But he can complain about why he has to be satisfied with doing nothing in the first place.

Chapter 1413 If Only CARNAGE Was Kind.

The troublesome thing about the Vampires is that they cannot be evaded. The Vampires can sense all of them and will always find them. The only one who is safe from them is Helios.

It is not because of a weakness for sunlight. They avoid Helios because he will burn anything up regardless of its weakness to light. The other clones are busy, so they have to let Ragnarok suffer from their abuse.

The alternative is to fight the Vampires, which they can do and have done, but they can't kill them permanently because they have true immortality now too. It is another one of their upgrades, apart from the lack of weakness to light. This is thanks to the evolution of CARNAGE.

Ragnarok has an armored body of Liquid graviton, and he heals better through devouring than all of them, so he became the designated sandbag. That's how he has been able to withstand attacks from several Vampires.

It helps that the Vampires are also not trying their best. They know that their efforts are futile, so even though they can sense the other clones and track them, they chose to track the one closest to them. This happens to be Ragnarok.

Legion-1 and Legion-Unity appeared beside a star. It is the only anchor, apart from Ragnarok, that they have in the void. They use the star as a fallback position for their operations before venturing out to do other things. The star is very hot, so even though the star is their clone, they didn't get too close to it. They only got close enough for space to warp around it and erase their traces.

They are not crazy like the Origin gods, who tried to get close to Helios. Instead, they flew away after erasing their traces in different directions to find another place they could rob. They will then cross over to whichever one of them finds a viable business partner first.

Ragnarok appeared beside Legion-1 along the way.

Legion-1 said to him, "Good job."

"Yeah, yeah, yeah," Ragnarok said in boredom.

He set up his new position soon after. It takes time to set up the bottomless pit. But once he gets it going, he becomes nearly unkillable with the amount of energy he consumes to replenish his existence. No one can get close to him without the risk of dying.

It was exciting to let loose at first. He was able to finally become his concept, and he could even allow the shards of power to enhance his concept without fear of retribution from Mother High Heaven. But the whole experience has become boring. He is tired of it after thousands of years of doing the same thing.

He grumbled to himself and all the other clones, "I hope we can find a way to kill them forever soon."

The other clones laughed since they didn't have any good solutions. The immortality of the Vampires is backed up by CARNAGE who is a world ender now. They won't be able to kill them permanently after killing them.

Even Ragnarok doesn't dare to eat the hearts of Carnage of the Vampires he kills for fear of creating a channel for CARNAGE through the prison he is into Legion. The best he can do is keep the hearts of Carnage, but the Vampire Primogenitors can always resurrect using the Vampires in their lineage. Then they will come to trouble him again.

Legion can only continue to try and grow stronger. That is the second major agenda on their plate currently. Their best bet is for Legion-Unity to find a way to use the cosmic force from his world engine without dying.

They have tested his cosmic domain and have determined that cosmic force has the power to freeze the Vampires for good and end their nuisance.

Unfortunately, it requires a constant use of cosmic force to keep the Vampires frozen. It is not a one-time activation. Legion-Unity can only manage a one-time activation currently, so that plan can't work yet.

The second plan is to seal the Vampires the way the tree father sealed some Origin gods. They have tried it, but it also failed because Vampires are not Origin gods. Their immortality doesn't come from the law matrix or the void universe, so it can't be forcefully enhanced and frozen by the power of order.

That plan might work if they use cosmic energy and Chaos energy instead of cosmic energy and divine energy of order to create the seal.

Unfortunately, they are not sure it will work since they are not willing to test it yet because they want Aeternus to become a demon god first with a Supreme Law of his own before he tries to contend with a world-ender.

In the meantime, Legion went about stealing soul stones and looking for a place to find a world seed. They are not powerful enough, or they would find a small realm to attack on their own for its world fragments.

Despite their wealth and power, they are facing the major issue that stands in the way of becoming a world god like every other Origin god that doesn't want to be mediocre. They need something they are not powerful enough to acquire on their own in order for them to become powerful.

Fortunately, unlike normal Origin gods, their robbery spree was very successful. Their ability to teleport to each other proved to be very useful for this endeavor.

This is just one of Legion-5's divine abilities. The use of each other as beacons makes it possible to make short-range teleportation to each other even when space is frozen. They can even teleport to each other across the void universe.

This ability is very powerful, but it is not unique. There are many Origin gods with concepts that fuse the law of space with other laws. The more laws that they fused according to the image of the dominion over space, the more difficult it is to restrain them from teleportation.

Chapter 1414 Wild Tales.

While their teleportation ability is not special, theirs has reached its most powerful form, such that only a complete seal in space and time can stop them from teleporting completely. That kind of seal is the one used to imprison CARNAGE.

Even then, it is not certain that they can be blocked from teleporting in light of the effect of Legion-5's Cosmic domain. No other Origin god possesses it, so no one has enjoined the kind of success they have had in robbery.

Not only did they gain wealth, but all the fighting granted Legion-Unity the opportunity to practice his abilities against other Origin gods without holding back. It has allowed Legion to learn more about Cosmic force and his cosmic domain.

His domain carves out a portion of the void universe where only the divine abilities and concepts that have been etched onto Legion-unity's body as divine stigmata can be used. These divine abilities are the ones that he assimilated as a Supreme Beast, so even the other divine abilities that the other clones of Legion possess can't be used at all.

This restriction is because of the stubborn nature of the Supreme Law of Order. If they didn't have the crown of chaos, then nothing could be used within the domain at all. It would be a complete concept nullification domain.

The only disadvantage it has is that all divine abilities or concepts that Legion-unity possesses can be used even if they don't belong to them. Other entities can use those divine abilities and concepts in his Cosmic domain if they have them.

His domain also grants him the ability to wield Cosmic force, which he can use to kill every and any Origin god, regardless of the power of their concepts or the number of laws within it. Unfortunately, it always comes with a deadly backlash.

What they have granted them a lot of success and created a name for them in the immortal lands. They are not popular yet among the infinite number of immortals, but about 10,000 immortals know about the couple of world beasts with the power of dragons.

These disgruntled business partners try to spread the word so that someone will be able to stop their stealing spree and nab them. Unfortunately, their stories sound like the wild concoction of an inebriated person.

If not for the existence of oaths, the story of the world beast-dragon hybrid would be considered made up and a hoax to those who don't encounter them. Things become even more unbelievable when the disgruntled business partners tell of how the thieves used many more different concepts.

They swore that it was the truth, so their story became believable, but it remained perplexing. Not only are their enemies confused, but they also don't know how best to capture the clones because they are not certain about their weaknesses and strengths.

For example, their methods will always be lacking because they don't know that each clone is at least two entities. It is why spiritual or psychic attacks don't work on them. So the ones hoping that someone will be able to crack their weakness will remain disappointed for a long time.

The confusion is normal since Legion is an enigma. They used to be separate parts of a single entity, but the line that separates them is becoming blurred as more of them unite.

An Origin god can be subdued because they have a single concept. They will have clear-cut strengths and weaknesses, but Legion is not a single Origin god. Only Supreme Beasts can compare to them in terms of versatility. But Legion is already greater than the greatest Supreme Beast.

Right now, there are five of them that have united. All five of them can use each other's concepts. There are some slight differences in their use of divine abilities. It is mostly due to the effect of the shards of power.

For example, while all of them can use Soverick's eyes, only Soverick can fuse his eyes together with the help of the shard of power.

Only Ragnarok can create a true bottomless pit with the assistance of his shard of power. The shards of power of the others can't enhance his concept if they use it because they haven't become one with his concept.

Since the others can't enhance the abilities that they borrow through unity with the shards of power, they are unable to boost their divine abilities to the level of supreme laws with their shards of power.

But that's for now. When they are one with their Origin again, then there won't be any difference between them. They might also be able to control the shards of power to enhance whatever they want when they gain control of them.

----HELIOS

He watched Legion-1 and Legion-unity leave with longing.

He complained a little, "I want to fight too."

Helios is undoubtedly the most bored clone. Ragnarok's repetitive fights cannot compare to his sedentary lifestyle. He would take hits from bored vampires any day, instead of hurtling through space in the same orbit around a realm.

His companions are the two other stars, but they can't talk, so he can only turn his mind towards other things. The only thing he can do with his time is try to comprehend the Supreme Law of Order. However, that is very difficult and also very dangerous to do.

The Supreme Law of Order is a two-edged sword. It is very powerful, but it is not theirs, so it can cut them. It is dangerous to try and comprehend any Supreme Law that isn't theirs, much less the Supreme Law responsible for the creation and maintenance of a powerful universe.

It will undoubtedly be a boon if they can comprehend and use the Supreme Law of Order, but the attempt to do so can backfire. They have already seen that the Supreme Law of another being can disappoint them when they need it. Especially if they are using it against its true owner.

Chapter 1415 The Duty Of Mother.

As if that isn't enough reason not to mess with the Supreme Law of Order, comprehending it can also create a pathway of attack into their existence. So Helios is not so enthusiastic about comprehending the Supreme Law of Order. If not for the fact that Legion has a plan to combat the attack of the Law of Order, he would have already stopped trying to comprehend it.

So his days are filled with boredom and comprehending something that might kill them. Fortunately, Legion is busy with a lot of things, so he is not without things to occupy his attention with.

They are together in mind, if not physically. It is a good thing because Legion can't even come too close when they visit him, even if they want to. The only ones that are daring enough are the Origin gods, who want to test their powers.

Some of them are random suicidal Origin gods, while most of them are Supreme Beasts of the Warrior class. They try to approach him to see how close they can get to him. He pretends to be like any other star, but he secretly increases his power output to mess with them.

The Origin gods don't think much of it. They consider whoever the sudden solar flare hits to be simply unlucky. After all, a star can't bear malice against someone. Their ignorance makes them continue to throw their lives away.

That's the most fun he has on his own. The only people who can come close to him are World gods, but he doesn't want them around. They have been lurking around too, and one has even tried to grab him.

A large hand rose from beneath the law matrix to grab him. The hand was so large that it would undoubtedly be able to grasp him. The size of the hand alone had shocked him because he didn't know that entities could grow to such size.

If not for the protection of the realm on him, the hand wouldn't have bounced back when it got too close to him. So no, he doesn't want world gods to visit him at all.

There is one other entity whose visit he is welcome to. He would like to see them, so he decided to call them now.

"She shouldn't be angry, right?" He asked himself uncertainly, "I have a good reason to call for her."

She arrived before he could get an answer from other clones and before he could regret his action. A dark entity hurtled towards him from the direction of the realm tree. She then stopped a few kilometers away from him.

"Helios, I heard your call." She said.

She is just two meters tall. Compared to his millions of kilometers in diameter, she can't even be described as a tiny dot. For one to take the entirety of his size into their vision, they will surely be unable to see her unless their eyesight is extraordinary.

For those who can see her and his whole body at the same time, they will surely focus on her. This is because, despite being small, she possesses more energy than him. She is small, but she is on par with the large hand that almost grabbed him. Search the website to access chapters of novels early and in the highest quality.

Her form is dark, like a dark, translucent shadow. But there are small stars that twinkle within her form. There are about a hundred thousand of them. Those stars combined possess more energy than him. They make her shadowy form stand out from the surrounding darkness.

He started, "Thank you for taking some time for me away from your very busy schedule."

Mother High Heaven replied, "It is no problem. I have a lot of bodies, and this is just one of them. Besides, what you have called me for is my duty as your Will of the realm."

"It is as I said in my message, I would like to know all there is to know about the next step of the path of perfection," Helios stated.

She considered his request before she replied, "You have not reached the energy requirement, which is the limit of Origin gods. But your clones have, so Legion has met the requirements to ask me. You have also adhered to all the rules of the realm, so you have a right to this information."

If he was wanted by the realm or had become an Origin god with the purged essence of an Origin god, he wouldn't have the right to this information. It is her duty to tell the Origin gods of her realm who have reached this stage so that they will find their way to the next stage. It is something that she has done for other Origin gods who later went on to become World gods.

"The next step from here is a supreme law." She started with a voice devoid of emotion.

It is as if she is reciting something. "A Supreme Law is the embodiment of your existence. It is a vision of your future and an opportunity to forge your path to achieve that future. If the previous stages of the path of perfection are likened to planting a tree, then your Supreme Law will be the fruit of your efforts."

She said that along with the projection of a mental image for him to understand what she was saying. He saw a clay pot of soil. The soil is the soul, while the pot is the body. The pot is first enlarged so that it can contain more soil. The soil is also increased to fill in the pot.

All these are done with the aid of mana from the environment. This is the body forging stage, followed by the vitality core refining, and then the mana entity stage, in which both the body and the soul are forged.

The soil and the pot eventually reach a limit. The pot has a problem with density and toughness. It can be increased, but it will break if more soil is added to it. The pot just can't allow for more soil. This is the limit of the mana stage.

Chapter 1416 How To Grow Your Seed.

The pot has reached its limit, so the soil is removed from the pot and tempered. The pot is also smashed, and liquid is added to it for it to become malleable. The remnants of the pot and the tempered pot are then combined and remolded to form a superior vessel.

This process is the breakthrough to transcendence. Some potted soils fail this process. Some succeed. The result is a malleable vessel capable of expanding.

It is a vessel with both the properties of rigidity from the pot and the ability to be increased that the soil possesses. In doing so, a previously untapped potential is accessed. But they have also lost the ability to grow larger by imbibing mana.

Fortunately for those who succeeded, the potential they awakened allows the pot to evolve by copying the world around it. After all, if the world is stronger and is capable of making it stronger, why not become the world? This plan turns out to be correct. For those that succeed in mimicking the world enough for the world to be fooled, some of the prized energy of the world is diverted to them.

That is the process of transcendence to the king of law. It is essentially deceiving the world for cosmic energy from the world. The soil changes itself to fit the strong things it can sense in the world. It takes on some of the properties of these strong things and can even control them.

The idea to copy the world is good, but it has a limit. There's only so much that the world is willing to give up, no matter how well they deceive it. This limit cannot be broken unless the superficial changes to the soil are deepened. So the soil tries to form a seed with the prized energy of the world.

The soil gives up part of its power and essence to form a seed. This seed is the closest thing to the world that they can ever make because it has the prized energy of the world. Some soils fail to form this seed. It could be because they don't know what a seed is or they don't know how to form seeds or they try to form one too big for them. They lose the power and essence they sacrificed, and they die.

Some succeed in forming this seed, and they grow stronger for it because they have taken another step toward being similar to the world. They can control some part of the power of the world around them. But their troubles are not over yet. They have to make the seed grow, or it will die within them.

The prized energy within the seed wants to return to the world. The problem is that while the seed is a part of them, it is modeled after the world, and they can't control the prized energy, so they can't control it very well. If they don't become innately familiar with how the seed works enough to fool the seed into thinking they are the world, then they will never control it, and it will die.

Some succeed in taking control of the seed. They are able to stop the seed from dying. The others who failed to control the seed die, just like the ones who failed to form their seeds in the first place. For those who succeeded, the next step is becoming one with the seed.

Unfortunately, the prized energy is not of the same material as the soil. There is a difference in quality. They can't force the fusion. If they could, then they wouldn't need to fool the seed in the first place. So instead, the soil tries to become the seed.

It is as they say, if you can't beat them, you should join them. So the soil finds fertilizer. Its job is to make the seed grow. The seed is fed the fertilizer, and it germinates. But in doing so, it has to take part of the soil with it. In this way, the soil and the seed become one.

The root of the seed permeates the entire soil, and the soil enters the sapling to fuel its growth. More and more fertilizer is applied to the sapling through concepts forged from Origin essence. The seed grows into a sapling and, finally, into a mature tree. Then it is time for the tree to produce a fruit.

All of these were displayed in the mental image she projected. It gave him a newfound perspective of what the path of perfection looks like to the Will of the realm.

He thought idly to himself, "How do the wills of the realm grow stronger?"

Mother High Heaven continued with her explanation, "You are an adult tree now. To make your Supreme Law, you must use all the concepts that you used to grow your initial seed to form the fruit. So you are limited by the type of fertilizer that you used in the growth period."

Helios understands what she means by the limit of the fertilizer. While an Origin god can create as many concepts as possible to grow their sapling, they are limited to concepts that contain at least one similar law to the laws of their initial concept, which they fused with.

This is because concepts reject each other. Even concepts created by the same entity will reject each other. The rejection is automatic when concepts interact with each other. They try to manifest over the other concepts. Only in situations where they are created by the same entity and have some laws in common can concepts be made to empower each other.

Even then, the empowerment between concepts is a sacrifice. One concept is sacrificed to grow the main one. An Origin god can't use two concepts. Even Supreme Beasts with many divine abilities have to fuse them all into one before they become Origin gods, or they will lose the divine ability.

So Origin gods with a 6-law concept will have the choice of six different laws that must be in each concept that they make. The many options mean that they can grow their concept faster.

Chapter 1417 Importance Of Genes.

If a concept doesn't have at least one law similar to the original concept, then the concept won't work as fertilizer. The two concepts will reject each other instead. They will try to maintain their integrity and sovereignty, so they reject the influence of other laws and cause a backlash within the Origin god.

The only way to avoid this backlash is to have the concept be created with Origin essence that contains the same soul imprint as the Origin god and contains at least one similar law. That means another concept created with the same laws by a different Origin god won't work.

But as long as the requirements for sacrifice have been met, the similarity of laws between the concepts will allow the sapling to grow stronger as more concepts are sacrificed to the sapling.

The more laws they have in common, the more potent a concept will be as fertilizer, and the faster the sapling will grow into a tree. So it is not a wonder why realm lords will grow faster and quicker. Some might even be like Monarch High Heaven, who were able to reach the limit of the void universe and create a Supreme Law in 100 origin cycles.

"Can you guess what the purpose or function of a Supreme Law is?" She said with a smile, "I am sure you are very familiar with them."

Her smile caught him off guard a little. She was monotone earlier during her explanation, so she felt detached. But now she seems to have come alive. It is as if she wasn't truly present earlier.

Helios answered her question. "A Supreme Law, as you have stated, is the fruit of the path of perfection. It is the reward and end product of the pursuit of perfection. But more than that, it contains seeds. And seeds are capable of further growth. So a Supreme Law determines the future potential and path."

"That's a good way to put it. You're right. The seeds within the fruit can grow, but they are extensions of the tree, and they can't grow stronger than the tree that created them because the tree will limit their potential. So the fruit you create is very important."

"This fruit is the Supreme Law. It is both a four-dimensional object and an entity made out of a fabric woven of laws as its three dimensions, with the fourth dimension being Will. It is made from the combination of laws, consciousness, and a three-dimensional substrate fashioned from both spiritual and physical energy and matter. The weakest Supreme law is four-dimensional, but Supreme laws are not limited to four dimensions."

"I didn't know that."

She smirked. "That is not surprising. You don't know a lot of things. You live in the world, but you're mostly ignorant of reality. You have come in contact with the Supreme Law of Order, but I don't think that you know that it is five-dimensional."

Actually, Legion knows that. They knew that Supreme Laws have facets that they called Aspects. They didn't know that they were called dimensions, but they knew that the Supreme Law of Order had aspects of matter, energy, soul, Will, and information. It has one more aspect than normal Supreme Laws.

Mother High Heaven went on, "These dimensions are not simple concepts like length, breadth, and height. Those are just limited perspectives of space. It is not even the perspective of the space-time continuum, so don't confuse the three dimensions with those. But having four dimensions means that Supreme Laws won't be forced to conform to the limited state of length, breadth, and height or even the constraints of the present and past."

He knows that too. Those who can only see length, breadth, and height are limited to a single perception of space. They see the world as a 3-dimensional structure like a box or sphere.

That perception is undoubtedly limited because space has several layers and dimensions attached to each other in different modes of interaction. When the aspect of time is added to it, only then can the space-time continuum be seen.

That kind of 3-dimensional vision is static. Weak beings might think they are seeing reality in 3-dimensional motion, but it is actually multiple 2-dimensional still images shown one after another in quick succession. So it is the passage of time that makes them see the world in three dimensions. Even then, it is only a false 3-dimensional perception of the world.

Meanwhile, a lot of things are missing in between the 2- dimensional still images. One has to be able to see the state of existence in between the images for them to truly see the way matter and energy change into each other.

Matter and energy aren't different entities, they are just two different forms of the same existence. Like steam and ice. That's just the beginning of a full 3-dimensional vision.

Someone with 4-dimensional vision has the ability to see information states and anything beyond normal 3-dimensional vision. They will be able to see mana, laws, and see through the multiple layers of space. They know that matter and energy are the same thing, but in different states of particle and wave.

That was what Soverick's eyes were capable of before he became an Origin god. He can now see five aspects of matter, energy, space, information, and time. Legion-7 has incomplete 3-dimensional vision, but he can see the soul state of the 4-dimensional, which Soverick can't.

So in total, Legion is aware of seven aspects, but there is no need for Helios to correct Mother High Heaven. Besides, she is correct about their ignorance. They are not omniscient yet, so there are bound to be some things that they don't know about. So he ignored her jab at his ignorance and focused on what truly matters.

"How do I create the fruit that is the supreme law?" he asked.

He has some thoughts and opinions about how to create a supreme law, but Legion wants the full information from the source. That's what he called her for.

Chapter 1418 Digging Their Grave Further.

She replied without delay, "The fruit contains the seeds. And like any living thing, its shape, performance, and potential are all dictated by its genes. The material you will use to make the fruit will be the original concept as the base, the sacrificed concepts as the additives, and your existence as the glue that binds them together. That is how to form the genes of the fruit of Supremacy."

"Think of it as weaving a spiderweb. You are the spider. The base is your original concept that has fused with your existence. And the web is the connection of laws between the original concept and the sacrificed concepts. This is all held together by your existence. So you are building a Supreme Law as well as rebuilding your existence."

"The bigger the supreme law, the better. But the minimum power for it to be considered a supreme law is when it is capable of resisting the law matrix and carving out a portion of the void universe for you without its permission."

"That is enlightening." He said in appreciation, then he asked a question that he didn't think would be answered. "I assume that cosmic energy is required to grow the Supreme Law. But are there other energy types that a world god needs?"

"You are right about cosmic energy. But I can't tell you about the other types of energy that world gods use or need. That is not my job. But I will tell you something interesting that concerns you." She paused for a short while.

"Your situation is slightly different from others. You didn't use any concepts to grow your sapling at all. Instead, you used cosmic energy to crystalize your sapling. It won't grow now, even if you give it concepts." She smiled when she said that.

He can't see a smile on her face because she doesn't have lips. Her whole face is a single bright eye that resembles a swirling galaxy. But he can tell that she is amused at his predicament because she made it known through her divine sense.

"What does this mean?" he asked, a little anxious.

He was happy when he heard the confirmation of the usefulness of cosmic energy. It means Legion will be able to become a strong world god as fast as possible. But he doesn't like where she is going.

"It means you can't form a Supreme Law by sacrificing concepts to your original concept. It is all because your concept has a higher proportion of cosmic energy to Origin essence than normal. It will resist other concepts and be unable to bind with them even if they come from you and have laws in similarity."

"This can't be right. How can having a lot of cosmic energy be a bad thing? Am I to be stuck as an Origin god forever?"

That question made her chuckle. "This reminds me of the Supreme Beasts that went with the path of further awakening and used cosmic energy to push themselves to the limit of the void universe. They thought they were fixing their problem, but they were only digging their grave further. They will never be able to build a Supreme Law and become world gods even if they overcome the temporary nature of their original concept."

She said with pity, "People think that the reason why Origin gods can't get cosmic energy anymore is because the void universe is being stingy with it. They are right to think that. But there's also another important reason. Cosmic energy is too powerful to be controlled by Origin gods. You should know that yourself. If it was safe to use anyhow, you wouldn't need a Supreme Law to control it."

Helios didn't like the sound of that. The clones also used cosmic energy, but unlike the Supreme Beasts, they didn't dig their graves intentionally. Their use of cosmic energy wasn't intentional. The law of order activated cosmic energy, and it moved from Helios into their mind network. They were happy about it, but now they found out that there are side effects.

He couldn't accept it at all. He said to Mother High Heaven, "There has to be a way."

Mother High Heaven rejected that conjecture. "There is no way out for them. They have increased the temporary properties of their concepts to the limit. Their original concept can't change permanently, so they are forever stuck with it. But there is a way for you."

"What is it?"

"The concepts of your clones are just too strong. That means their resistance to other concepts is high. It is a good thing if you can accept the increased difficulty of making a Supreme Law. But not to worry, you are a unique being, so your situation is special, and therefore, you have solutions that are not available to others. In fact, there are four solutions to your problem."

That surprised Helios. He asked in disbelief, "There's four of them? Then why did you make it sound like I was in a dead end?"

Then he realized something. He chuckled and said, "You were messing with me, weren't you."

He came to that conclusion because she seemed to be having fun by trying to make him anxious.

Mother High Heaven smiled. "I was indeed messing with you, but I didn't lie. You truly cannot create a Supreme Law by sacrificing concepts to your original concept. You should know this."

"We didn't know it was because of the cosmic energy. We just thought that we had reached the limit of power or that we were missing something important needed to create a Supreme Law. That's why I called for you."

Legion has tried to sacrifice concepts, and Soverick has indeed tried to make a Supreme Law. He didn't plan to finish it but just wanted to test it and see how it would work.

But he couldn't manage to get it started, so they thought they were missing a crucial step. It is only now that they know it is because of the high structural integrity of their concepts.

A/N: I've got news. I will upload an extra chapter for every person with a golden ticket contribution above 20. This is aside from the normal contribution goals and will start next month.

Chapter 1419 No Comment.

Mother High Heaven didn't keep them waiting. She has played with his emotions enough. "The first option is to sacrifice all your concepts to Legion-7 and advance to world god as a united Legion with a world seed and a world engine. You will create a very strong Supreme Law that way. But you won't be special anymore. You would have sacrificed your uniqueness for power."

"I doubt that you will take that option, even if you know that it will most likely grant you a reward from the void universe. Then again, you might have already earned that reward through the last law that you broke."

Helios said to her, "No comment."

She just smiled and continued, "The second option is to give all the clones a world seed. A world seed will kill any other Origin god, but your concepts are very strong, so you can manage the strain. It might not work though. But if it works, you will all have to unite with your origin and your concepts will transform into a single Supreme Law."

"Then you can all unite and become world gods with a single world engine. You will have a very large number of worlds, but each world will have limited power because you will have just one world engine."

"The third option is to create concepts with a lot of cosmic energy and then sacrifice it to your original concept to create a supreme law. This way, your Supreme Laws will be able to handle a world engine each. It will work as long as you adhere to the principle of similar laws."

Helios felt like sighing in relief when he heard that. But he is a star without lungs.

"That sounds good and feasible."

Mother High Heaven continued, "It is usually impossible for others to do since Origin gods can't control cosmic energy. Even if you could do so, it is going to take a lot of work to manufacture a concept outside of the body and will require a lot of cosmic energy to bring it to the limit of power. But I am sure you can manage that." She said with slight amusement.

She is right. Legion can manage that.

"The fourth and last option is related to a certain crown that one might gain when they fuse all three paths of evolution. You can use that crown to sacrifice concepts without cosmic energy to your original concept to create a Supreme Law. I don't know what effect it will have on your world, but I am certain that you can use it to become a world god."

"Personally, I will recommend the third option because your Supreme Law will be strong and versatile. Versatility is very important for Supreme Laws. The second option will ensure it is powerful, while the fourth option is the easiest to execute, but only the third can ensure versatility and adaptability in various conditions since it will have a lot of laws to simulate."

Helios and the other clones relaxed now that they knew that they had at least three feasible solutions that could help them achieve their goals of multiple worlds.

He said to her, "Thank you very much for your information. You have been very enlightening."

"You are welcome, but I am not done yet. There are still two pieces of information I have to tell you, and they are about how to become a world god. Having a supreme law is not the final stage. It is just a period of transition known as the half-world god."

"Half-world god? This is the first I have heard of it."

"I know it as a half-world god, but you know it as a Supreme Origin god. It is not exactly half, but it is known as that because you have met one of the requirements to become a world god."

"I see. That is understandable."

"You cannot think of becoming a world god without reaching the limit of power of the light side. That is the only way for you to find your life anchor within your origin and become a world god. But you need three other things to become a world god. A Supreme Law, a world engine, and a world seed."

Helios knew about the world engine and the world seed, but he allowed her to speak to a great extent about them. She provided him with more information about the world engine and the world seed that they didn't know, such as the laws that make up the world spark and why it is powerful.

"The world spark is made up of six laws, which are the laws of destruction, creation, space, time, life, and death. It is both a concept and a Supreme Law. Consider it a set of instructions for how a realm will grow and operate. The reinforcement of the law of order causes the world spark to be very powerful enough to protect realm trees from world gods."

She also told him about the other fragments of the realm heart and how to get them. He didn't know that there were other fragments of the realm heart apart from the popular three because the others get destroyed when the realm heart breaks apart.

"These fragments are very fragile. They are the spark of the consciousness of the Will of the Realm and the spark of power that the Will of the Realm uses to bestow Authority to gods."

He is very familiar with the spark of consciousness, but this is the first time he heard that realm trees had it. He always thought that Legion-7 and the Great Mother were flukes and oddities in the void universe, but it turned out not to be the case.

He had never heard about the spark of power, so he asked her about it.

"It is what you need to create Authority?"

She said in reply, "You are not privileged to that information."

He didn't give up. He tried another approach.

"Alright. But what is Authority and where does it come from?"

Chapter 1420 The 3 Sparks.

She didn't tell him anything about Authority. Not even the most important information about how to get the spark of power. She ignored his question and instead went on to speak about the various stages of realm trees.

"Realm trees are not identical. We were created equal, but because we had varying potential for growth, we turned out differently. Each realm tree starts out as a seed and grows into a sapling. At that stage, we are small and in a vulnerable state. We are small and weak, so most small realms don't survive. They can't resist world gods yet, so they are hunted by world gods."

"The ones that survive to maturity do so by luck. The void universe is vast, and small realms are hidden. If they can't be found, then they will surely survive. If they are lucky enough to survive into mature realm trees like me, then they can resist world gods."

"When I say resisting, I don't mean fighting. I mean, we can prevent a world god from harming us. Any attack of theirs will be reflected back on them in an amplified state. The protection is passive, but the backlash is enough to prevent world gods from attacking us unless they are young and ignorant. We are protected at this stage, so the living organisms within us prosper."

"Most realm trees that reach this stage remain in it until the death of the void universe. Some are lucky enough to produce a strong realm lord, which then saves the realm tree from the fate of dying with the void universe."

"Don't ask me about the death of the universe, I won't answer it. But I can grant you inferior copies of realm heart fragments for you to create your world. If that isn't an option for you, then you will have to wait for a realm lord to be produced in the realm and to start the era of conquest. If we win, then you may have the realm's help in finding and attacking small worlds."

"Whichever choice you make, know that the three components are needed to become a world god. Once you have them, then you can fuse them with your Supreme Law and your Origin to become a world god."

Helios asked, "Can I get the spark of power and its likes from you?"

"No, you cannot."

"Can I at least know what other types of such things there are in the void universe?"

"I wouldn't be able to answer this question if I didn't have a realm lord to offset some of the rules of the world spark. Fortunately, I can do it, so you're in luck."

Helios agreed wholeheartedly about being lucky and listened attentively.

Mother High Heaven explained, "There are three of them. The spark of the soul, which you call the spark of consciousness, the spark of wisdom, and the spark of power. You know about the spark of consciousness. It is the second rarest of the three. The spark of power is the rarest, while the spark of wisdom is the most common."

"Every entity with a Supreme Law has a spark of wisdom. The Supreme Law is the spark of wisdom. The spark of consciousness is equivalent to the spark of wisdom in terms of quality and power. That's why a certain clone of yours can eat Supreme laws and substitute itself as the world spark in the attempt of another clone to become a world god without a Supreme law."

Helios was enlightened, "No wonder."

Mother High Heaven chuckled, "You thought you were omitting the requirements for a Supreme Law in becoming a world god, but you were only changing the spark of wisdom to the spark of consciousness. This is even more difficult than the normal way to become a world god. Not everyone can do it."

"This is because the spark of the soul is difficult to acquire. The dilution of the soul with mana, origin energy, laws, the body, origin essence, and concepts will make it difficult to comprehend the law of the soul and evolve it. Those things empower the soul, but they also distort it and make it impure. As for the spark of power, it is very rare, but you're already halfway to achieving it."

"Really?" He asked in disbelief.

"Really. But don't ask me how to complete it or what you're doing to achieve it. In general, everyone is capable of acquiring the three sparks. They may not grant quantitative power, but they grant qualitative power that can make an entity without a Supreme Law consume a Supreme Law and use it with cosmic energy to evolve. But potential is just that. Plus, the attempt to acquire any of the sparks makes it difficult, if not impossible, to acquire the other two."

"Oh," Helios said in understanding.

He and the other clones have gained a new understanding of why Legion-7 is special and why he could replace a Supreme law as one of the requirements to become a world god.

This understanding made them question the paths of power they knew about.

"If the path of perfection leads to the creation of the spark of wisdom, what does the path of demons and divinity produce?"

They asked Mother High Heaven, and she replied.

She said, "My duty to you does not extend to answering that question."

So he asked another question he was curious about.

"Why is there a major difference in power between half-world gods and world gods? I have never heard of a Supreme Origin god fighting or resisting a world god, and yet they both have Supreme laws. Is it because of the world that world gods have? Why does that create such a huge difference?"

"Think of the state of existence of a world god as a lever system. The origin is the pivot point, or fulcrum. The Supreme Law is the beam or balance, while the world is the effort or input."

Helios said in understanding, "So that's it. Through the principle of the lever, the power of a world is greatly leveraged to do more work than the input."

A/N: What do you think Legion is doing to acquire the spark of power?