Chapter 231 Surviving Is All That Matters

The ten trained fighters collapsed on the ground, crying out in agony.

“No way!”

Unlike his previous composure, Hunter grimaced and looked at Jackal’s party in disbelief. Hades, who vowed to give Kaze hell, was dumbfounded.

‘These six bastards withheld on me when they were my crew.’

Even Dan widened his eyes and rambled in his mind.

Dan knew that Jackal and his party could take on Cronus’ trained fighters, he would have taken out of the competition and become the king of the underworld.

Of course, he kept these thoughts to himself.

The six soldiers had more success with Kaze.

Dan could no longer boss these soldiers around.

ring them both to me.”

Kaze finally rose to his feet.

Jackal and his companions brought Hunter and Hades, who were scared out of their wits, before Kaze

“Get down.”

Two soldiers kicked Hunter and Hades on the back of their knees.

Thump!

They fell onto their knees and grimaced in pain.

Kaze looked at the angry pair and asked with a smile, “Didn’t you want to make me kneel and beat me up?” “I’d rather die than be insulted. Just put me out of my misery!”

Hunter snapped an angry look at Kaze and hissed through clenched teeth.

Kaze nodded. “Alright. Just kill him

Jackal pulled out a bayonet to slit Hunter’s throat with.

“Hold on!”

Hunter yelled and put his hands up to slap himself. He smacked both sides of his cheeks. Hades’ face was numb from the earlier beating, so he started slapping himself without a care too.

The casino players’ jaws dropped.

Cronus' nephew and subordinate knelt before the Quints' silly son-in-law and slapped themselves. The casino players who bad-mouthed Kaze were regretting their words now.

"Enough."

With the pair slowing down in hitting themselves, Kaze stopped them and asked Hades, "I trashed your casino. Are you going to ask for compensation from the Quints?"

"No! | won't!"

Hades shook his head.

As his life was in Kaze's hands, he would not dare ask him to pay for the damages.

Kaze smiled. "You don't need compensation, but | do. The car you wrecked was worth only 300 thousand dollars, but my wife saved up every penny during college to buy it."

Hades was on the verge of tears. If he could turn back time, he would never have touched the Audi A4.

Hunter jumped in. "We can't repair a car that had been written off, Mr. Lee, but Cronus has authority over the largest automobile dealership in Lilyrose. You can bring your wife along to choose a car to her liking."

Kaze raised a brow.

The supposed underworld kingpin had connections to upscale industries.

Gold Tooth and Dan gained power through turf wars, and they did not possess such networking.
“Alright, I'll do that.”

Kaze turned around to leave, only to remember something when he was nearly out the door. looked back and asked, “That reminds me. Where’s Larry?”

unter and Hades stood up. Color drained from Hades’ face.

Larry drove the Audi A4, so Kaze must be after the boy.

Hades said tremblingly, “Um... | don’t know who Larry is to you, but he owes us money. My men have given him a beating, and he...um...is pretty bruised.”

He covered his face, knowing what was going to come.

“Is he dead?”

Kaze frowned.

“H He’s not!”

All that mattered was that he was still alive.

It was none of Kaze’s concern that Larry was beaten black and blue Kaze said indifferently, “Bring him out.”

Chapter 232 You're Late, Miru

Soon, Larry was taken out, and he was beaten beyond recognition.

Hades glanced uneasily at Kaze, breathing a sigh of relief when Kaze did not fault him for Larry's sorry state. Larry looked at Kaze. He was not grateful that Kaze saved him.

Instead, he questioned Kaze aggressively, "Why did it take you so long? Didn't you see how badly I was beaten up? Your wife will have to pay for my medical and the pain I had gone through."

Smack! Kaze slapped him and said curtly, "Trust me when I say the people in the casino can end you now." Larry put his hand over his cheek, scared to utter another word.

He assumed that Kaze paid two million dollars for his release. If Kaze refused to pay the money, Hades would probably kill him there and then. Larry's eyes flickered with menace, and he swallowed his anger. Ignoring the hostility in Larry's eyes, Kaze turned around to leave.

"Get out here, Hades! Bastard! How dare you wreck my girl's car! I'm going to turn your casino upside down and rip your face apart!"

A woman's angry bellow came from the door.

Miru barged into the place with ten men in suits in tow.

"Uh..."

Miru stopped in surprise when she saw the trashed place. Her jaw dropped.

She noticed Hades' swollen face.

Someone was ahead of her.

“You're late, Miru.”

While Miru was lost in awkwardness, a teasing voice echoed in the room.

When she got a good look at the person, she was furious.

Kaze was taunting her!

She scoffed. “Why are you acting smug, Kaze? Don't tell me that you trashed the casino and beat Hades up.” Kaze knew that the woman had always looked down upon him.

Miru would always stir the pot and urge Darcy to divorce him. whenever she had the chance.

Kaze had his ways of dealing with people like Miru.

However, the woman was Darcy's best friend, so his hands were tied.

At least he could show Miru today what he was made of. Hopefully, Miru would stop winding Darcy up.

He asked with a smile, “Hades, tell Miru who trashed the casino and slapped you?”

“You trashed the casino and slapped me, Kaze.”

Hades held his palm against his face and groaned, wishing he could sink into the ground.

“You?”

Miru understood that Kaze hit Hades to submission.

She was shocked. Here she thought Kaze was the useless man who

“What say you, Miru? I got to get home to Darcy. She’s waiting for me.”

Kaze smiled and took off.

“We should get going too, Miru.”

Dan waved Miru goodbye and walked off.

Jackal and his party left too.

Miru drew close to Hades and said coldly, “What's going on? Tell me everything.”

Hades glanced at the burly men behind Miru and then at the ten trained fighters on the ground. In the end, he chose to give in to Miru.

After Hades finished the story, Miru scoffed.

“He had me fooled then. Kaze had to seek help from Dan, or he wouldn't have walked out alive.” Her mind was made up about Kaze, so it was impossible to change it.

Smack!

Miru slapped Hades in the face.

was stunned. Despite his cooperation, she hit him.

don't push your luck, Miru! Do you think I'm scared of you?"

Chapter 233 Altercation

Flipping mad, Hades shouted in rage.

Hades was the nephew of Cronus.

He was slapped by Kaze and then-beaten by Miru. His face was bruised and battered.

Smack!

Miru hit him across the face again before walking away.

"Hank, break everything in Orange Light Hotel.

"Remember this, Hades. | wreck your place and your face. You should come at me if you want revenge."
She uttered and took off without looking back.

Meanwhile, Kaze returned to the Horizon Mirror Mansion.

"K-Kaze is back!"

Keeping watch at the door, Sky noticed Kaze's return and announced to the others excitedly. Darcy ran out of the house.

She examined Kaze immediately. "Are you alright, Kaze? Did the people at the casino hit you?" "More like | hit them," Kaze answered with a smile.

"The main thing is that you're okay."

Darcy could finally rest.

Kaze felt bad to make Darcy worried about him. "I'm sorry, babe. Your car is written off, but | have made Hades pay for the damages."

"All that matters is that you're back. It's fine that the car is wrecked. | can just make more money to buy another one," Darcy said sincerely.

A life was worth far more than a car.

"You're the best, babe."

Kaze was dying to give Darcy a big hug.

His wife had his best interests at heart, and there was nothing more he could ask.

Agnes, Lance, and his wife rushed to the entrance.

"Where's Larry, Kaze? Is he still at the casino? What were you doing anyway? | can't believe you would show your face back here. Why couldn't you just take his place? You could stay there while he could come back."

Naomi yelled harshly as Kaze came home alone. She was aware that the dummy was good at fighting, so she knew better than to strike Kaze.

Exasperated, Darcy said sternly, "What are you saying, Mrs. Laime? Are you saying that your son is more important than my husband? Why should he take your son's place?"

"Why? Your family owes mine!" Naomi felt justified. Darcy was at a loss for words.

Kaze said indifferently, "Stop acting up here. You should get home and take your son to the hospital. If I didn't get Hades to release him, he would've been beaten to death by the people at the casino."

"What do you mean? Did Larry get out?"

Lance and Naomi were dumbfounded and exited hastily.

Nevertheless, like Larry, they were not the least bit grateful that Kaze saved their son.

"If you went there earlier, my son wouldn't get beaten up in the first place, Kaze. If anything happens to him, I'll make your family pay!"

Lance turned back to throw down a threat.

Kaze watched as the couple left.

The family of parasites spelled trouble to the Quints. They needed to be taken care of right away.

Otherwise, the Laines would keep coming back for money and other material things. Their constant trouble would never end for the Quints.

With that in mind, Kaze turned to Agnes. "Don't let them into Horizon Mirror Mansion again, or we'll never enjoy another day of peace."

There was a reason why he bought the property in a specific area. The Quints would always go to the family home, looking for trouble. Kaze wanted his little family to be left alone.

Later, Kaze was not pleased with the security of Skylar View District's management, so he asked Draco to assign the Tiger Fangs Militia over for added security.

Even a big shot like Gold Tooth would have trouble getting into the place.

Nevertheless, Agnes granted the Laimes entry this time, and there was nothing Kaze could do about it. Everything hinged on Agnes.

"What are you saying, Kaze? Are you blaming me for letting them in?"

Agnes blew up. Do you think | wanted to let them in? | owe them

Chapter 234 Touchy Subject

"Mom, the medical incident happened five years ago. Even if you owe the Laime family, you have paid them back enough in the past five years," Kaze persuaded patiently.

The Laimes were clearly pushing Darcy's family around, knowing they were soft-hearted. They took advantage of the Quints' kindness, draining them of everything they had. Anyone else in the Quints' position would not let the Laimes take whatever they pleased. "Shut up!"

Agnes interrupted Kaze angrily. "You married into our family, Kaze. We house you and feed you. You have no say under this roof. Mind your own business!"

"I didn't make Darcy divorce you because I didn't want to push her. Know your place. Don't be so disrespectful." After giving Kaze a piece of her mind, Agnes turned away and returned to her bedroom.

-m!

door slammed with a bang, startling Sky with a shudder.

can't believe my mom. Kaze means well. He just didn't want the Limes to exploit her, but she blames Kaze for overstepping his boundaries. She should get up the Limes' faces instead."

Sky could not stand it anymore and wanted to reason with his mother.

"Stop adding to the problem. Mom is already furious. You're just Darcy pulled him back from entering their mother's bedroom.

Agnes had expressed her displeasure toward Darcy for taking Kaze's side.

When Sky came back, Agnes was over the moon and said that she finally had a family member on her side. Sky's defense would not help Kaze at all. Instead, it would backfire on them.

"Don't take my mom's words to heart, Kaze."

Darcy turned around to console Kaze. "The medical incident five years ago has become a touchy subject for my mother. I have taken her to see a psychologist, but it didn't do anything to help her. The only way is to prove that the incident has nothing to do with her, but that's impossible. I think you might have triggered bad memories for her.”

Agnes came from a family of doctors, and she had dabbled in the same field.

She joined Lilyrose Wholeness Medical Center after graduating from medical school and worked her way up to become the youngest deputy chief.

Her future was bright. The medical error cost her her medical license, her career, and her 1. Her family turned their backs on her, not wanting to be sociated with her. Agnes had to go back to being nothing more than a housewife. She spent most of her life studying medicine, only able to use her acquired skills in treating her husband. Agnes had become obsessed with making it up to the Laimes. Kaze finally understood why Agnes was angry. “| deserve the telling-off from Mom, babe. | won't take it personally,” Kaze said with a smile. He expressed that he would not take Agnes' words to heart.

Darcy nodded in relief. “Get some rest, Kaze. | should call Miru to thank her. She made it there in time to save you and Larry.”

Kaze wanted to say something. However, Darcy grabbed her phone and walked to a corner.

Sky got a call from a female classmate.

“Come out with us tomorrow, Sky. Can you bring your brother-in-law along? Our classmates are his fans.”

With Kaze's keen ears picking up on the conversation, he did not want Sky to say yes. He had no time for a bunch of kids. To his surprise, Sky declined the invitation.

“Im busy tomorrow, Celine. | can't go. You guys should go ahead.”

Sky made up an excuse.

“Why, Sky? Weren't you bragging to us that your brother-in-law was a big shot in the military? Take him out. You can brag all you want,” Celine pleaded coyly.

Sky sighed and came clean. “Honestly, my brother-in-law isn't some big shot in the military. I got it wrong.”

Chapter 235

Sky shook his head and walked away.

“Never mind. I might as well pray for Darcy to expand the business and earn billions in bonus to buy me one.”

It was not something he would dream of at the moment. His family was experiencing financial difficulties.

If Agnes were to find out that he wanted a sports car, she would give him an earful.

The next morning, Kaze booked a car ride for Darcy and dropped her at the entrance of the high-end residence area. “Why are you booking for a car ride even though you live in Skylar View District?”

The driver rolled down the car window and stared at Kaze and Darcy strangely.

He made his assumption about Kaze and Darcy.

The woman was beautiful and poised, so she was probably the mistress of one of the wealthy men living in the upscale neighborhood.

The man was clearly not made of money. He must be the middleman and responsible for sending the woman home. Darcy furrowed her brows in disgust at the driver's sleazy gaze.

"Get lost!"

Kaze yelled and canceled the car ride. After driving the driver away, Kaze summoned the member of the Tiger Fang Militia responsible for stealthy protection.

"Hello, sir!"

"Good morning, Ms. Quint."

The soldier came running over and saluted Kaze and Darcy respectfully.

Kaze said, "Get a car to drop my wife off at Quintessential Group."

"Yes, sir!"

The soldier whipped out his walkie-talkie.

Soon, a military-grade jeep drove over.

Kaze motioned Darcy to get on.

“This is a military-owned vehicle. I shouldn’t ride it to work.” Darcy shook her head and refused to move. The soldier responded, “Ms. Quint, it’s our job to provide you with service. Commander Scarlet has made the orders clear.”

“Thank you. I’m rushing for time, so I’ll need your help this time.”

After much hesitation, Darcy got in the car.

Darcy did not connect the Tiger Fang Militia’s attitude toward them because she did not think Kaze was someone important.

The soldiers were responsible for the security of Draco’s residence next door. As neighbors, Darcy and Kaze enjoyed the privilege of heightened security.

She could trouble them once in a while but not always. “We’re ready to go, sir.”

Kaze returned to Horizon Mirror Mansion and knocked on Sky’s door.

“What's up, Kaze? My vacation has only started. Can’t you let me have. a lie-in?”

Sky jumped back onto his bed and pulled the covers over his head to carry on sleeping.

Kaze pulled the boy up. "Don't you want a sports car? I'll take you to pick one today."

"Don't mess around with me, Kaze. | don't want a model of a sports car."

Sky refused to get up.

Speechless, Kaze said, "There is a car show featuring sports cars. Don't you want to go with me?"

Chapter 236 Car Dealership

"Is there a car show today? Why didn't | hear about it?"

Sky sprung up. "Come on. Even if we can't afford it, we should window -shop." He was quick to get dressed.

While waiting for Sky outside his room, Kaze got a call from Don.

"Mr. Lee, when we arrested Joy two days ago, you rescued Sandy Queen from an illegal surrogacy ring. Her family contacted us, saying that they wanted to thank you in person."

Kaze remembered the pretty girl from two days ago.

"It's good that her family has found her. They don't need to thank me. | have to go out now. That's it for now, Don." Don was on cloud nine that he was on a first-name basis with Kaze.

Kaze thought nothing of the matter.

He had a long history of fighting in foreign lands. He had killed and saved many. If he was thanked for every life he saved, he would not have time for anything else.

Sky had cleaned himself up, and they left home. They caught a ride to get to Taurus Automobiles.

Taurus Automobiles was the place Hunter talked about last night. It was the biggest car dealership in Lilyrose, carrying all car brands.

Cronus, the local underworld kingpin, owned the business.

Only a man of his stature could handle such a vast territory, or the greedy three major families would have snatched the business for “You lied, Kaze. You said there was a sports car show!”

Sky knew he was fooled the moment they entered the dealership. There was no trace of any car show or promotion banners. Although many came to look at cars, none of them were there for the supposed sports car show.

“Relax. There will be one soon enough.”

Kaze patted Sky’s shoulder, gesturing for him to stay calm.

He then asked, “Oh, what brands are the sports cars?”

“You don’t even get the brands of sports cars. | can’t believe you would take me to a sports car show.”

Sky gritted his teeth.

Kaze was not at all embarrassed. "I don't understand sports cars because I have never driven one. I know fighter planes and nuclear subs, though. I have piloted the God of War aircraft carrier multiple times."

"Go on. Toot your horn!"

Sky scoffed.

Since they were there, Sky did not want to go home without doing anything.

"I like the Ferrari 488. Let's go and check it out."

He dragged Kaze to the Ferrari showroom.

"Welcome, misters. Are you here to look at cars or for a car collection? Do you have an appointment with us?" The shop attendant asked politely without refusing them entry due to Kaze cut to the chase. "Do you have a Ferrari 488? I want to buy one for my buddy here." "No, no. We are just here to take a look around. That's all!"

Frightened, Sky cut Kaze off.

"This way, please."

The shop attendant gave Kaze a strange look but led them into the showroom anyway.

Blushing in the face, Sky grumbled, "Can you stop with the act, Kaze? It's not embarrassing that we can't afford it, but it's humiliating that you pretend that you have the money."

Haha! The shop attendant in the back chuckled but quickly covered his mouth.

It appeared Kaze wanted to show off in front of the boy, but the sensible boy exposed his lies.

Now that was an eye-opener. The shop attendant stopped laughing, but another bout of chuckles ensued.

“Haha, Sky. Your esteemed brother-in-law took you to see fancy cars, e. Who is he playing today? Is he the owner of Lily Garden Hotel or ce son of a rich family?”

The sarcastic voice came from one member of the approaching group dressed to the nines.

A young woman in a car show outfit with a jacket draped over her shoulders sneered at Sky.

Kaze recognized the woman. She was Celine who called Sky last night.

He had met her at Lily Garden Hotel two days ago. She was introduced as the girlfriend of the manager's son. Yet now, she clung intimately to another man's arm.

Another couple stood next to the man.

He recognized three of them.

Sky stared at the two couples in surprise.

“Celine, Samus, Deborah, Vincent, what are you doing here?”

Chapter 237 Exposed

“We are here to collect the Ferrari 488.”

With both hands in his pants pockets, Samus said cockily.

Celine clung to Samus’ arm and simpered. “Sky is my classmate, Samus. I didn’t know that you knew each other.” She worked part-time as a car show model there.

Celine got to know Samus and Deborah when they came to collect their cars.

Samus wanted to pick up the girl while Celine was in it for the money.

They hit it off right away.

“Sky is my cousin, Celine. He has always followed me around.”

Samus looked arrogantly at Sky and acted like he knew better. He asked, “Why are you here, Sky? You should be home, focusing on your studies during your vacation. Why are you here with the dummy?”

Sky dared not say anything even though Samus lectured him. Celine could finally hold her head up.

The other day at Lily Garden Hotel, Celine mistook Kaze for someone important in the military and kicked her man, Thomas, to the curb to suck up to Sky.

Sky did not give her the time of the day. Celine embarrassed herself in front of her classmates and left the scene with her tail tucked between her legs.

“I’m about to graduate, Samus. I was bored at home, so I came over with Kaze to look at sports cars.” Sky looked at Samus enviously.

Samus said smugly, "I'm not the only one getting the car. Deborah is buying one for herself too. Grandpa awarded us 5 million dollars each."

When Quintessential Group met with a crisis, Samus and Deborah proposed to sell Horizon Mirror Mansion to Maurice for two hundred million dollars.

With the 10 million dollars from their grandfather, Samus and Deborah went to purchase sports cars right away.

Later, Horizon Mirror Mansion did not sell, and they had to mortgage their property and cars to pay off the 10 million dollars. Taurus Automobiles broke the contract and refused to hand over the cars or refund the money.

Fortunately, the crisis at Quintessential Group was averted, and Vincent, who went missing, returned

Deborah begged her boyfriend to contact the person in charge at Taurus Automobiles, and they could finally collect the vehicles today.

"Oh, Grandpa gave you cash? He's good to you."

Sky was even more envious.

Samus and Deborah had always been Grandpa's favorites in the family.

Grandpa gave them 10 million dollars to buy two sports cars.

Sky and Darcy were not as fortunate to receive equal treatment.

Since the unfortunate incident, Grandpa had never shown any kindness toward them, let alone reward them with anything. "Why are you checking out sports cars, Sky? What's the point of wow anopping:

Unable to stand Kaze, Deborah said coldly, "With a brother-in-law who only uses your sister's money to impress others, you'll never be able to afford a sports car."

Samus and Vincent were reminded of the fact that Kaze kicked them out of Quintessential Group yesterday.

Kaze had overreached himself to look at sports cars, but now they had their chance at vengeance.

"Since you're here, you should at the very least buy a sports car for Sky, Kaze," Samus said tauntingly.

Kaze replied indifferently, "| was going to buy Sky one. | don't need you to tell me that."

"Hahaha..."

Everybody burst into laughter.

They did not believe that Kaze could afford a sports car.

Even Celine was chuckling away.

She stared at Kaze and said sarcastically, "Sky, don't tell me that your brother-in-law really thinks he's someone important in the military. Didn't you tell him that you saw through his lies?"

"Celine, when did he pretend to be a commander or chief in your ce?" Samus asked curiously.

Chapter 238 The Car's Mine Now

Celine told the incident at Lily Garden Hotel.

"He had me and my classmates fooled in the beginning, but | caught on later. He's too young to be high up in military service.

"Thomas' dad, the manager of Lily Garden Hotel, is an idiot to be deceived by such crude lies.

"| called to sound Sky out last night. He must know that he couldn't keep up with the lies anymore, so he came clean." Celine tried her best to show Samus that she was smart.

She believed that since Samus came from a rich and powerful family, he must prefer women who were smart and beautiful. Celine wanted to show that she was not some eye candy.

Even though Sky told her the truth, Celine made it sound like she saw through the deception.

Samus complimented her, "We wouldn't have known if you didn't tell us, Celine. The dummy even pretended to be the owner of Lily Garden Hotel. You were intelligent to see through him."

“He’s a con artist. He has caused us nothing but problems.” “He’s a nobody in our family. Only Sky’s sister worships him.” Deborah joined in the taunting, exposing Kaze for who he was. Nothing pleased them more than criticizing Kaze.

Celine now knew that Kaze had a history of lying.

“I can’t believe such a disgusting man exists in the world.”

She looked away from Kaze in contempt and turned to Sky. “So, this is the brother-in-law you kept bragging about, Sky? Now everyone knows he is a scammer.”

Once Celine found out the truth from Sky, she was eager to tell the other classmates.

Sky hung his head low in shame, wishing he could disappear from the face of the earth. He tugged on Kaze’s sleeve. “Let’s go, Kaze. I don’t want to look at any cars.”

Kaze was made a public mockery with claims that he had lied and cheated.

Sky was aware that Kaze never claimed to be the chief or commander in the military. His classmates were the ones talking about it at Lily Garden Hotel the other day.

Kaze never lied, so Sky would not blame him.

However, it was a fact that Kaze was a nobody and could not afford a sports car. They would only be humiliating themselves by staying.

“Why are you leaving in a hurry? We have not collected the car.”

Kaze was not worried about Samus and his party.

However, the dejection and low self-esteem in Sky were clear to Kaze.

as not bothered that people looked down on him. The opinion hers did not matter to Kaze. Nevertheless, Sky had finally built some confidence in himself.

Now, Sky's confidence was crushed by Samus and his party's sarcasm. Kaze looked up at the shop attendant and asked, "Do you have any

Having heard the whole conversation between the group, the shop attendant said dismissively, "We have one available, but Mr. Samus Quint here has reserved the car. He's here today to collect it. Once we have proceeded with all the checks, he can drive away with the car."

"Kaze, | bet you said that because you knew that Samus reserved the only Ferrari 488 in stock. "Don't try to pretend to be someone you're not in front of us. We know you for who you really are." Deborah's harsh comment ticked Vincent and Celine pink.

"Maybe | can let Sky take the car for a ride once | collect it, Kaze. If you get down on all fours and bark like a dog, | might consider it," Samus said in delight.

Without looking at Samus, Kaze told the shop attendant sternly, "From this point forward, Samus' car is mine now."

Chapter 239 Kick Them Out

"Hahaha!"

Samus and the others burst out laughing.

“Who do you think you are, Kaze? Are you trying to take the car from me? Dream on!”

“It's not like he can afford it even if he takes the car from you. He was so embarrassed by what he said, so he spoke without thinking.”

The party threw sarcastic remarks at Kaze. They were pleased to see Kaze make a fool of himself. “Stop it, Kaze. Come on. Let's just leave.

Sky pulled Kaze, but the latter would not budge.

“You are shameless. Even when we humiliate you, you still refuse to leave.”

Celine scoffed.

It was bad enough that Sky's family had no money, but he was related to a disgrace of a brother-in-law too. Celine was relieved that she did not date Sky, or she would end up the

as a better choice anyway. She clung tightly to Samus' arm.

don't know him well enough, Celine. He's shameless to mooch Quints.”

borah folded her arms and sneered at Kaze. “I reserved a Maserati Quattroporte in the next showroom. Do you want to buy one too?”

“A Maserati Quattroporte? | was going to buy a car for Darcy too. I'll get that then.” Kaze did not know much about cars.

Judging by the name, Kaze believed the car would suit women.

Quattroporte meant four doors, and Darcy could use a sedan with four doors. “Stop talking, Kaze. I'm begging you. Let's go.”

Sky was near tears.

They could not afford one car, let alone two.

Sky wondered if the humiliation got to Kaze, and he lost it.

Darcy said that Kaze was not insane.

Sky started to suspect that Kaze had lost his marbles.

“That's right. Get out of here.”

Vincent lost his patience.

He was pleased to see Kaze humiliated, but the novelty was wearing off. He cocked his head and commanded the shop attendant, who was standing nearby, “Kick the dummy out of here. He's becoming an eyesore.”

The shop attendant knew who Vincent was.

Samus and Deborah were able to collect their cars today because Vincent dabbled into his network and contacted the manager of the showroom.

The shop attendant had observed Kaze's behavior since he entered the showroom. It was clear that Kaze was stirring up trouble.

"Please get out now, sir. Don't disrupt other customers from purchasing cars from us." The shop attendant approached and showed Kaze the door.

Samus and Deborah watched on with their arms folded against their chests.

Kaze drove them out of Quintessential Group yesterday. Today, they would make Kaze leave with his tail tucked between his legs.

Kaze said curtly, "I'm a customer here too. You better think twice before asking me to leave. You can forget a commission and your job."

The consequences mentioned by Kaze made the shop assistant hesitant.

"Hehe. The dummy is bluffing again."

"Don't waste your breath with him. Get security to kick him out. He's just a dummy," Samus and Deborah said.

The shop attendant made a decision.

He grabbed the radio to call two security guards before pointing at Kaze. He said indifferently, "Get the troublemaker out of here." The two security guards nodded and walked toward Kaze, looking at him warily.

"Please leave, sir."

With the whole thing reaching the point of no return, Sky was more than embarrassed.

Seeing that Kaze remained still, Sky urged, "Come on, Kaze. Don't give them a reason to get physical with you and throw you out."

A thought struck Deborah, and she quickly tipped Vincent the wink.

The idiot did not know his place and was unappreciative.

Surely, it would be more humiliating for Kaze to be thrown out of the premises.

Vincent nodded and told the security guards, "There's no point talking to the dummy. Just get rid of him."

Chapter 240 Serves Him Right The security guards were hesitant.

The shop attendant said, "Don't just stand there. That's Vincent from the Hanser family. Just do what he says. He'll protect you from any consequences."

Oh. He was Vincent Hanser.

They could do no wrong by getting in Vincent's good graces.

The two security guards whipped out their batons and lunged at Kaze.

Sky turned white as a sheet.

“Stop!”

An angry voice came from behind everybody.

The two security guards shuddered in fear at the voice. With their batons hanging in the air, they froze. The others turned their heads to the source of the voice.

A plump middle-aged man in a suit approached in rage.

“Mr. Dot!” the shop attendant cried.

William Dot asked sternly, “What are you doing? Why is my security team hitting a customer?”

The shop attendant made a wry face while thinking of an excuse.

Kaze uttered curtly, “Mr. Dot, right? Is this how you treat customers? | expect a satisfactory answer from you.” “Sir, | apologize for the unfortunate incident at our showroom.”

William glared at the shop attendant while talking.

“| didn't do a good job. I'm sorry for my work attitude, Mr. Dot.”

The shop attendant admitted fault.

The two security guards followed suit.

William scoffed. "If I hadn't stopped you in time, you would have struck the customer. You are all fired!"
"Uh..."

The trio turned ashen. They looked at Kaze in terror, their eyes filled with regret.

Who was the man?

The manager fired them right away.

Sky looked at Kaze in surprise. What was going on?

The shop attendant glanced at Vincent bitterly and rambled, "Mr. Hanser, you told us to hit the man. You must help us." The two security guards looked at Vincent pleadingly.

If they could kneel, they would.

William turned to Vincent with a frown. "Did you tell them to hit the customer, Mr. Hanser?"

"That's right. The dummy on my nerves, so I told the security guards to get rid of him. Do you have a problem with it, Mr. Dot?" straightening out his collar, Vincent asked. William was Vincent's connection.

It made things awkward for William. "Oh, | must be mistaken, Mr. Hanser. | thought the man was your friend. I'm sorry about that."

The shop attendant and the security guards were stunned. William stopped them, thinking that the dummy was Vincent's friend.

Vincent pointed at the trio and told William, "I'd be grateful if you don't fire them.

"Of course. | can definitely do that for you. They can keep their jobs."

William canceled the job termination right away.

The shop attendant and security guards were glad and grateful to Vincent.

Vincent pointed at Kaze. "I'd also be grateful that you get your security team to throw him out."

"Throw him out! Take out the trash!"

William nodded and glared at the security guards. "Don't just stand there. Didn't you hear Mr. Hanser?"
"Hahaha..."

Samus and the others laughed out loud.

Deborah was pleased with how impressive Vincent was.

William was the one who refused to hand over the cars or refund them. Now that Vincent was there, William did not think twice to bend to their will. That was the power of having connections.

Deborah patted Sky's shoulder smugly. "See that? Your dim-witted brother-in-law is nothing compared to Vincent. Mr. Dot only stood up for your brother-in-law because of Vincent. Otherwise, your brother-in-law wouldn't get any respect around here."

Sky moved his shoulders to shake Deborah's grip off, his eyes welled
