

Guardian 261

Chapter 261 Deputy Director Benedict Soup

Benedict received a text message from Hellen, who was blocked in at the parking lot. Hearing that Agnes was at the medical center, Benedict rushed to the scene from his office.

“You talk like you're in the right.”

Benedict scoffed and added with a smirk. “A young female patient lost her life because of your medical error five years ago. The center’s reputation was tarnished because of you. You are a disgrace to us all. You should never set foot in this place again.

“Let's hear what the public thinks about this. Do you think | am right?”

He turned to the onlookers outside the ward.

The crowd learned from Benedict that Agnes was once a doctor at the medical center with her medical license suspended. “You're right, Deputy Director Soup. The medical center was right to fire her for not adhering to medical practices.”

“She has no shame to come back after killing a patient.”

“She’s bad at her job. | bet she’s the type to take bribes and give empty promises.”

The public was vile toward Agnes.

The judging and contemptuous looks from the public crawled under Agnes’ skin.

The medical slipup was something she could never get over.

Now that Benedict tore her mental scar wide open for all to see, her limbs turned icy and her heart raced. She wished she could disappear right there and then.

“So you're Deputy Director Soup. Agnes is right. She has borne the responsibility for the medical mishap. Why can't she enter the medical center as a civilian?”

Kaze pushed through the crowd to get into the ward.

He approached Benedict and looked at him sternly. “Why are you in a hurry to throw her out? You won't even let go of the past. Are you hiding something?”

Benedict took a step back and stared at Kaze in terror and anger. “Who are you? How dare you talk to me with that attitude?”

Kaze knew something was up when Benedict acted strangely.

“He's the son-in-law of Agnes, Deputy Director Soup. He's the caregiver of the patient at Bed 23,” a family member of a patient said.

Agnes' son-in-law?

It dawned on Benedict. “I heard from Hellen that your daughter's husband took your family name. Agnes. If that's not embarrassing enough, I can't believe he's just a caregiver. You must have dug into your connections to give him a job here.”

The public switched targets and held Kaze in contempt this time.

“He's useless for a man. Not only did he marry into his wife's family, but he couldn't get a better job than a caregiver.”

“Yeah, caregivers are usually for the elderly or those who had nothing to do. He’s an able-bodied man, and yet he’s taking jobs from others. He’s an embarrassment.”

“His mother-in-law is something else too. She was fired from the medical center, but she pulled strings to get a job for her son— in-law.”

Agnes wished she could just sink into the ground.

She turned to Benedict and said angrily. “What are you talking about, Benedict? | didn’t pull any strings to get him a job. He doesn’t need to get a job if he doesn’t want to, but Larry insisted-”

Agnes was cut off before she could finish.

“Hmph! | can’t believe you would try to argue your way out of it. It’s been years since you came back here. The only reason you would show up today was because you found your son-in-law a job through connections.”

Chapter 262 Who Told Kaze to Leave?

Benedict sneered at Kaze.

Agnes’ son-in-law was clearly trying to make a living as a caregiver at the medical center. Benedict made it his mission to stop Kaze from making any money.

Kaze narrowed his gaze and said solemnly, “I can leave when | want to. Who are you to tell me to get lost?”

When Larry insisted that he should stay to serve him, Kaze did not want to be at the medical center.

Now, Benedict told him to beat it.

Well, Kaze did not want to leave now.

“Hmph! I’m the deputy director of the medical center.”

Benedict said arrogantly, “The center's logistics and security are part of my job. You have a history of a mental illness, but you want to serve patients. What if you have an episode and harm the patients or hospital staff?”

“What? He’s mentally ill?”

The public inside and outside the ward stepped back, keeping their distance from Kaze. Benedict nodded. “That's right. You might not know who he is, so I'll let you know. He’s the dimwit who married into the Quint family.”

“Holy shit. He’s the dummy son-in-law. To think | get to see him in the flesh today.”

“| heard he had an episode on his wedding day and hit the attending guests.*.

“Didn't he beat up Liben Radar, the director of Lilyrose Bank? He nearly bankrupted Quintessential too.”

Kaze was well known in Lilyrose, not for the right reasons though.

Despite not meeting Kaze before, these people knew who he was the moment Benedict said he was the dimwitted son-in-law of the Quints.

They gave Kaze strange looks.

The patients’ families in the ward snapped angry looks at Agnes..

“Agnes, your son-in-law is a dimwit. Why didn’t you lock him in a mental institution instead of letting him out here? What if he has an episode and hits us?”

“You're a vile woman. You're angry with life, so you take it out on the rest of us. Have we done anything to you?”

Agnes looked at the families with a pale face, at a loss for words.

She knew Kaze’s family abandoned him in a mental institution. He was not actually sick mentally. However, others did not know about that.

Faced with public criticism, she found herself tongue-tied.

She was in distress.

The family members turned to Benedict. “You care about the patients, Deputy Director Soup. You're a reputable leader here. You have to help us and kick the dimwit out of here. Don’t let him be here.”

Benedict was flattered.

He adjusted his glasses smugly and looked at Kaze haughtily. “Don’t just stand there. Leave now!”

Unfazed, Kaze unemotionally pulled out his phone.

“Contact the director of Lilyrose Wholeness Medical Center. Tell him to meet me at the inpatient services on the sixth floor.”

“Sure, Mr. Chairman.”

Snow's voice came on the other end of the line.

Benefit was surprised, but he soon responded in disdain, "Are you demanding Victor to see you? You talk big. Who do you think you are?"

The others roared with laughter.

"Don't act like you're some big shot, Kaze. Leave now!"

"Get lost! Leave!"

The people inside and outside the ward shooed Kaze away.

"Who told Kaze to leave?"

An offhanded voice came from outside the ward.

Hades and his two sidekicks hurried along the corridor.

With Kaze told to leave, here came his chance to get in Kaze's good graces.

Chapter 263 I'm Here for Kaze Hades had gotten the message from Hunter. Kaze somehow lucked out and saved the daughter of the Butterworth's Queens.

Now that Kaze rubbed shoulders with the esteemed family, Hades could forget getting back at Kaze for trashing his casino. If that was not enough, Hades had to submit to him too.

His uncle, Cronus' main source of income came from the Queens.

With that in mind. Hades shoved aside an on-looking family member of a patient. "Get out of the way."

The family member was a middle-aged man in a suit. He must be a business owner.

The man pulled Hades' hand away in disgruntlement. "Who are you? Why should I leave because you tell me to?"

Smack!

Hades slapped the middle-aged man before he could finish his sentence. Grabbing him by the collar, Hades shouted menacingly, "Can you get lost now?"

The middle-aged man was a cowardly bully.

He had no qualms about taunting Kaze despite not knowing him at all.

Now that Hades smacked some sense into him, the middle-aged man kept his opinions to himself. "I'll leave. I'll do it right away."

"If I hear you telling Kaze to leave again, I'll kill you, cunt!"

Hades hurled him away.

The others blocking access to the door looked at Hades fearfully before giving way.

Furious with the commotion outside, Benedict lectured, "Who's there? What's with the attitude? We are in a hospital, and I'm Deputy Director Benedict Soup. Why are you hitting members of the public? I should call the police on you."

"Benedict? Haha. What a coincidence."

Hades waltzed into the place and recognized the discolored Benedict. "What? Don't you know me anymore, Deputy Director Soup?"

Benedict stared straight at Hades.

Sweat rolled down his bald head.

"I-I do. Of course, I know you, Mr. Hades,"

He stuttered in fear.

Smack!

Hades struck him.

Benedict's glasses were knocked off, and he fell on his bottoms. He stared blankly at Hades. What with the Hades squatted and smacked Benedict's face. "What's with the posh act? You couldn't even pay back the twenty million dollars you borrowed from my casino. Do you remember begging me for a few extra days?"

Holy shit!

The crowd inside and outside the ward looked at Benedict in surprise. It never occurred to them that the high-sounding deputy director was a gambling addict.

He acted high and mighty, but behind closed doors, he would throw his pride away to borrow from moneylenders.

Freaking out, Benedict said gloomily, "Didn't you say you would give me more time, Mr. Hades? Why are you here? If word gets out, I will be suspended. How am I supposed to pay you back then? I'm sure you want the money back. This is just taking things too far."

He intended to move funds from the medical center to cover his gambling debt. Hades put a dent in his plan and poof it went.

Smack!

Hades gave him another slap. "You're not worth my time. I'm here for Kaze."

Agnes turned white as a sheet when she realized Hades was looking at Kaze.

She was now aware that Hades was the one who kept Larry captive.

Hades stormed into the medical center in search of Kaze.

Agnes wondered if Kaze had stepped on his toes again.

"What did you get yourself into again? Are you trying to get our family killed?"

Agnes hissed through clenched teeth. Her opinion of Kaze could not get any lower. Nevertheless, now was not the time to set Kaze straight. Hades rose to his feet and walked toward Kaze.

She gave Kaze a tug. "Don't just stand there. Apologize to Hades. Beg for his forgiveness." Was Kaze going to apologize to Hades?

Hades was dumbfounded. He lowered his head in horror. "Don't. I don't deserve Kaze's apology. Kaze called me, so—"

Everybody looked at Kaze in shock.

The dummy, who everyone looked down upon, managed to reach Hades with one phone call.

Chapter 264 Stand Up Straight Hades' words trailed off. It was because Kaze suddenly gave him a grim look.

After stopping Hades from talking, Kaze turned to Agnes and said, "I didn't upset Hades, Agnes. He's here for Larry. I guess the gambling addict still owes Hades, so he wants Larry to do manual labor like cleaning up pee and poo to pay him back."

Kaze glanced at Hades. "Am I right, Hades?"

Her

He did not want Agnes to know that he called Hades to sort Larry out.

Kaze could not have a fallout with the Laimes until Agnes could get over the incident.

Otherwise, Agnes might hate him for it.

"That's right. I'm here for Larry."

Hades nodded but was puzzled as to why Kaze wanted to keep the phone call a secret.

Still, he knew how to read the room. He got Kaze's message right away.

Hades picked up cues from Kaze through his explanation to Agnes.

Larry was in a daze when Hades approached him with a menacing smile. "Fancy finding you here, Larry."

"H-Hades, I'm injured. Of course, I would be here."

Larry showed his prowess to Kaze just moments ago, and now he could not even finish his sentence in front of Hades. "Get out of bed now!"

Hades yanked him out of bed and kicked his legs. "Can you stand up straight?"

Thud!

Larry slammed into the wall but quickly stood erect.

"I can, Hades. I can stand up straight."

Hades pinched his ear and yelled in rage, "Why are you still at the hospital when you can stand up straight? Who is the act for? Are you trying to make yourself look pitiful before calling the cops?"

"No, Hades. I would never sue you..." "I don't care if you're going to sue. Unless it's life-threatening, you don't need medical attention."

Hades sneered. "You still owe me money. I know you're broke, so I don't need you to pay up. Come back with me. You can clean up my men's and my bodily waste. You can leave when you clear your debt."

He kept eye contact with Kaze in case he had gotten the wrong message. Kaze nodded with a smile.

Hades was quick to adapt.

Relieved, Hades kicked Larry, “Now come with me to Orange Light Hotel.” Larry was dumbfounded.

The debt was paid last night. Why did he owe more?

Larry just put Kaze on toilet duty, and now he was in the same position.

To make matters worse, he would be responsible for the hygiene of hundreds of bowel movements.

Larry turned ashen at the thought of his crappy days. He pointed at Kaze and said, “Let Kaze, the loser, take my place, Hades. He’s strong and compliant. He’s better at handling shit.”

He glanced at Kaze and commanded, “Hear that? Go with Hades now.” The idiot had no idea Kaze summoned Hades to the medical center. Kaze glanced at Hades with a blank face.

Getting the message, Hades smacked Larry to the ground.

“Are you telling me what to do, punk? | assigned you the task, but you looked for a replacement instead. Because of your attitude, you can clean up the toilets of the casino.”

Hades gave Larry another punt and waved his arm. “Drag the punk out of here.” of the One of Hades’ sidekicks drew close and grabbed Larry’s ankle before dragging him out of the ward.

Chapter 265 Ordered the Assault

“Oh, no

“Larry was taken away right under our nose. When his parents find out, they are going to make a huge fuss and demand that we pay. We don’t have the funds.”

Agnes panicked as Hades’ sidekick dragged Larry out.

Kaze smiled. Agnes’ concern was not an issue.

There was no way he was going to cough up the money to save Larry.

Still he uttered, “Don’t panic, Agnes. I talked to Hades last night. He might listen to me. Let me ask him. Wait here for me.”

He needed to inform Hades about other matters which were not for Agnes’ ears anyway.

Kaze went out of the ward.

“Hades, about the money...”

Benedict stood before Hades with his head hung low.

With Kaze approaching, Benedict shot him a look. “Step aside. Can’t you see I’m talking to Hades?” Following Kaze’s explanation, Benedict was convinced that Hades was at the medical center for Larry.

It somehow eluded him that he got a beating from Hades because of Kaze.

Benedict did not see Kaze as a threat.

Kaze glanced at him and said curtly. “Slap him, Hades.”

“Haha. Who do you think you are? Why would Hades listen to-

Benedict sneered in contempt.

He was interrupted by a slap in the face.

“I take his orders, cunt.”

Hades struck him left and right.

He was giving it all to please Kaze.

Benedict covered his face and scrambled away.

“Stop! Why are you fighting at a place of healing?”

A stern and furious voice was heard.

Benedict turned around, and his face beamed. “Save me. Victor! If you came later, you might not see me alive again.”

Victor Cornwell, the director of Lilyrose Wholeness Medical Center, took large strides over and glared at Hades.

“Who are you? Why are you attacking others here?”

Kaze replied indifferently, “I ordered the assault.”

“That’s right. The dummy did it.”

Since Benedict could not afford to cross Hades, he pointed fingers at Kaze. “The guy is the son-in-law of Agnes. She was the reason for the medical slipup years ago, and he’s a lunatic who hits others for no reason. Call the cops to arrest him.”

“Agnes’ son-in-law?”

Stunned, Victor looked at Kaze. He stopped looking angry and asked probingly. “Are you Mr. Kaze Lee?”

“That’s me.”

Kaze nodded.

With a change in attitude, Victor asked respectfully, “Ah, Mr. Lee. What can I do for you?”

“This is Agnes’ son-in-law, the son-in-law of our medical center’s disgrace. How can you...” Benedict was dumbfounded. The last thing on his mind was his painful cheeks.

The onlooking families of patients along the corridors had no words.

Kaze was the son-in-law of the Quints. That was one thing they were sure of.

They even mocke him earlier.

Yet, Victor seemed friendly to him.

“Shut it!”

Victor cocked his head back and criticized Benedict. “Mr. Lee’s company donated billions worth of “What? His company?”

Benedict looked at Kaze with a dropped jaw. He had a lot of questions.

Here he thought Kaze was the dimwitted son-in-law of the Quints; he was infamous in Lilyrose.. When did he own a business?

The patients and their families were taken aback.

Who was the dimwit?

Chapter 266 Relieved of Duty

As a matter of fact, Kaze was also shocked when he heard Victor. He had no idea about donating the medical equipment.

Ray must have donated it a while back without his knowledge. Regardless, everyone was surprised when they heard Victor.

All of them instantly felt ashamed for mocking Kaze earlier. They lowered their heads out of guilt. and wished they could bury their heads in a hole like an ostrich.

If Kaze donated more than a few hundred million worth of medical equipment, how rich could he be?

His net worth should be an astronomical figure.

A young and wealthy person was treated like garbage.

What a joke.

Even Hades was shocked when he looked at Kaze.

He flattered Kaze not because of his strength or power, but because Kaze was close to the Queens.

Now, Victor revealed Kaze as a super—wealthy billionaire!

Was it a joke?

Benedict then looked at Kaze with an awkward look. “Mr. Lee, I-I’m sorry. T-This is a misunderstanding. I’ll apologize...”

“You want me to get out of the hospital right?”

Kaze glared at Benedict. The frostiness in his eyes did not fade just because Benedict said sorry. An apology was not enough for Kaze to forgive Benedict for what he did and said.

“What? Benedict, you asked Mr. Lee to get out?!”

Victor glared at him and shouted, “YOU should get out of this hospital!”

“Y—Yes! Yes! I’ll get out! I’ll get out right away!”

Benedict bowed apologetically and repeatedly.

Kaze scoffed and then looked at Victor. "Director Cornwell, I had nothing to say before you came over but I couldn't just waste your time since you are here. Deputy Director Soup said he was the one who should get out, so I think you should make it happen."

Victor and Benedict were stunned.

They were just playing along and putting on an act, echoing whatever Kaze said; one wanted to please Kaze and the other one wanted Kaze to forgive him.

They did not expect Kaze to take it seriously.

"What's wrong, Director Cornwell? Are you trying to cover up for your colleague? If yes, I don't mind throwing both of you out." Kaze said coldly.

All he needed to do was give the word.

Victor was frightened. He immediately said, "Mr. Lee, you got me wrong. I am not trying to cover up for him. It's just that if I relieve him of his duty because of this, I don't think others would accept it." He looked at Kaze with a troubled expression.

Kaze grunted and said, "Then find a valid reason to throw him out! If I remember correctly, he lost money at the casino and borrowed twenty million. Now he's deep in debt. I believe the hospital can relieve him of his duty for this reason. The medical center is a business that relies on reputation after all."

“He’s twenty million in debt?!” Victor looked at Benedict in shock.

Benedict's face turned pale as paper.

Hades added, “Yeah! Mr. Benedict Soup here owes me twenty million!”

Victor finally knew why Hades slapped Benedict in public earlier.

“Very well then. From now on, Benedict Soup is no longer part of Lilyrose Wholeness Medical Center.”

Benedict was devastated.

The others along the corridor looked at Kaze in fear.

One word and he made the deputy director lose his job.

“Alright then. Victor, I'll leave you to your business. Hades, come here. | have something to tell you.

Kaze did not care what the others thought about him. He tapped Hades’ shoulder and walked to the side.

“Bring Benedict to your place and interrogate him. | want to know what role he played in the medical incident five years ago. Find out if there are any secrets,” Kaze said.

He noticed Benedict reacted strangely to the incident, so he believed that the incident was more than met the eyes. Since Hades was able to deal with Benedict, he wanted Hades to bring the ex—deputy director back with him.

“No problem! Wait for my news. I'll pry his mouth open!”

Hades tapped on his chest and assured Kaze.

Chapter 267 Change of Attitude

“Let's go!”

Hades went over to Benedict.

Benedict looked at the man blankly and asked, “Where are you taking me?”

“My place. Let's have a talk about the debt you owe me,” Hades said with a grunt.

Victor turned a deaf ear and a blind eye at the little scene.

Benedict was devastated.

He was just fired and now Hades wanted to bring him away.

Hades' evil grin told him that he would either die or at least be crippled if he went along, and it was all because he messed with Kaze.

He saw Kaze whispering to Hades at the side before Hades dragged him away.

Benedict looked at Kaze and dropped onto his knees. “Mr. Lee! Please forgive me! | was a fool! | was an idiot! | dared not look down on you anymore!”

Kaze stood in silence and was expressionless as Larry and Benedict were taken away by Hades. Peace returned to the ward.

The onlookers by the corridor had a fearful look at Kaze before they scattered away. They wanted to remember his face so that they would stay away from him next time.

“Kaze, have you talked to Hades? Is he going to release Larry?” Agnes asked when she saw Kaze come into the ward.

She was on the phone with Darcy and did not notice the little confrontation in the corridor.

Kaze shook his head. “I failed. Larry has been taken away.”

“Hmph! | shouldn’t have put any hopes in you!”

She glared at him before going back on the phone with Darcy.

“Darcy, Hades took Larry away. Think of a way to help him!”

“Mom, | said I’m busy working. You can’t just make me babysit him 24/7 or be the Laime family’s maid.” Darcy said with an upset tone.

Worried, Agnes said, “But if his parents come to us again...”

“Let them. Hades said he wanted Larry to do labor work, so just let him be. He won’t die. Besides, he might be able to help Larry with his gambling addiction!”

Darcy then hung up the phone.

“How dare she hang up on me!?”

Agnes put her phone away angrily.

Kaze said. "Mom, Darcy is right. Hades can help Larry with his gambling addiction. Let's go." Agnes sighed as she looked at the empty bed. Since Larry was gone, there was no point for her to stay.

Kaze left the ward with Agnes

When they walked past the nurse station, the chief nurse came over with some documents and gave them to Agnes.

She politely said, "Dr. | mean Madam Quint, this is Larry Laimé's documents. Please bring them downstairs and proceed with the discharge. You can get a refund there."

Agnes reluctantly took the papers.

The chief nurse used to be her colleague.

When Agnes arrived earlier, the chief nurse treated her poorly because she deemed Agnes a humiliation to the hospital. Now, after what happened, her attitude saw a drastic change.

"Madam, Sir, take care."

The chief nurse awkwardly smiled at Agnes before she returned to her station. The other nurses looked at them too.

Agnes went downstairs with lingering questions in her head. After she was done with the discharge procedure, she got the 20 thousand back.

She felt a lot better with the money in hand. She headed to the main entrance and wanted to call a ride home.

“Mom, it’s not that way. We are going to the parking lot. | drove.” Kaze pointed at the parking lot.

“| thought our car got thrashed. Where did you get a car?”

Agnes followed him to the parking lot and saw Hellen and her family waiting. Yenny was even kneeling on the ground wretchedly. When Agnes arrived, Hellen immediately looked energetic.

“Agnes! You and your son-in-law got thrown out? Hahaha! | told Deputy Director Soup that you are coming, that’s why he threw you out!” Hellen raised her voice when she spoke, hoping that everyone in the hospital could hear her.

“Don't go over. | don't want to deal with Hellen,” Agnes said and wanted to walk the other way. Kaze said with a smile. “Don't worry, they won't do anything to us.”

He took his car key and pressed the remote.

Beep!

The Maserati beeped!

Chapter 268 You Got a Good Son-In—Law

The beep from the Maserati surprised Hellen and her family.

“Huh? The owner of the car is here? Where is he?”

Yenny pushed herself up from the ground.

She had been waiting so long that her legs went numb.

Hellen looked around but did not see anyone else in the parking lot.

-The owner of the car isn't here."

"Are you blind? Can't see that I am here?" Kaze said as he brought Agnes, who was confused, to the car.

He waved the key in front of Hellen and then pressed the remote again.

"Y—You are the owner of this car?!"

Hellen and her family were shocked. Their jaws dropped as they looked at Kaze blankly. The idiot son-in-law was the owner of the Maserati?!

How could it be possible?!"

Though their eyes were not deceiving them.

Agnes asked timidly, "H-How much is this car, Kaze?"

"Less than five million? It's not that expensive."

Kaze did not know how much it cost either. He only heard a rough number from Sky.

On top of that. Deborah even asked the mechanic to upgrade the sound system to the best in the market.

The five million from Master Quint were spent on the car.

A car that was worth a few million was not that expensive?

Hellen felt ashamed instantly.

When Sam bought a fifty thousand car, she bragged about it for a long time, yet a car that was worth a few million was nothing to Kaze.

She looked like a fool.

Yenny seized the flaw in Kaze's words and scoffed, "Hmph. Not even five million? This car is around two million. You don't even know how much it cost? Did you pick up the car key from somewhere else?" "Why don't you go pick one up for me?" Kaze rolled his eyes at the woman. "You!"

Yenny was furious. She argued, "I don't believe you can afford such an expensive car. Even if you sell yourself, you can't afford it."

"I don't care if you don't believe me." Kaze did not want to argue with the foolish woman. He said to Agnes, "Let's go home." Agnes was hesitant.

Yenny's words reminded her. She looked at Kaze and asked, "Tell me, did you really buy this car? If there's something wrong with it, I won't get in it."

Kaze was never a reliable person in her opinion, so she did not want to get in trouble.

Yenny seized the moment and added, "Look, you fool! Even your mother-in-law doesn't believe you or want to get in the car!" "Yeah. You must have stolen it!" Sam echoed.

Right after that, a fiery red Ferrari 488 came into the parking lot and stopped in front of them.

The window wound down and Sky's handsome face with a pair of shades hanging over his nose popped out. "Mom, Darcy said you and Kaze got into some trouble. She told me to come and have a look. What's the matter?" Agnes widened her eyes. She could not believe her son was driving a luxury car.

"Sky is also driving a Ferrari?!" Hellen's expression shifted immediately.

Sky used to visit the hospital when he was younger and she knew the boy. "Oh? Hi, Mrs Broad."

Sky did not know the grudge between Hellen and his mother, so he politely called her and said. My sister's car got thrashed, so Kaze bought a new car for her and also got me one!"

The naive boy spilled the beans before anyone asked.

"A five million Ferrari 488 and he gave it to you just like that?!" Sam looked at Kaze in shock.

Hellen and Yenny were shocked as well.

Kaze bought two expensive cars at once?

How rich was he?

Sky then said to Agnes, "Mom, Kaze even bought a seven-seater MPV, and it's at the house already. I think it's a Mercedes, around a million or so. It's spacious, so it's going to be convenient for you and Dad to go out!"

He knew his mother looked down on Kaze, so he tried to help him whenever he could. Agnes was stunned beyond comprehension.

Hellen looked at Agnes awkwardly and wore a smile that had never appeared on her face before.
“Agnes, you've found a good son-in-law there!”

Chapter 269 You Had It Coming.

“Hellen, we've known each other for so many years and this is probably the first time you've said something good about me. Even though I know you didn't mean it, it feels great!”

Agnes looked at Hellen condescendingly. She felt proud for once. Hellen's awkward smile froze as she was humiliated. It was so embarrassing!

She bragged about her car worth fifty thousand in front of Agnes and Kaze and it made her event more embarrassed. She wished she could bury her head in the ground.

How humiliating!

Sam and Yenny looked at Kaze awkwardly as well.

Kaze bought three cars at once, which added up to almost ten million.

Acar of fifty thousand was nothing to him.

“Uhm... Kaze, can you move your car?” Sam said politely and timidly.

He finally lowered himself to speak to Kaze now that he knew Kaze was rich.

Kaze glanced at Yenny and said, “When your husband called me to move my car, I heard you said you would eat the tire if I could afford a supercar.”

Yenny's face turned as pale as paper. She immediately lowered herself and said, "Come on, Kaze! Just kidding! Don't take it seriously!"

"You don't have to eat a tire but remember to stay away from Agnes whenever you and your family see her on the street," Kaze said. There was no way he would make her eat the tire.

Hellen, Sam, and Yenny nodded profusely.

After this little embarrassing encounter, they no longer dared to appear before Agnes.

"Sky, you're just in time. You can drive your mother home and I'll go fetch Darcy from the office." Kaze ignored Hellen and her family and helped Agnes, who was still baffled, into Sky's car.

He then drove the Maserati out of the parking lot.

When he arrived at Quintessential Group, he went straight into Darcy's office.

In the past, there was no way he could stride into Darcy's office without hindrance.

However, now that Darcy had taken control of the company, the employees and guards recognized him as her husband, so no one dared to stop her.

"You came? How's things at the hospital?" Darcy just ended a call with an executive and she sounded tired.

Kaze felt bad. He went up to her and held her hands. "Come on, let's have lunch and you can go home to rest. I have a little present for you."

"Present? What's the surprise?"

Darcy was curious. She followed him to the parking lot.

“Whose car did you drive?”

Darcy looked at Kaze with her enchanting eyes, confused.

“Your car. This is my present for you.” Kaze smiled.

He added, “Do you like it? You can drive this to work from now on. You don’t need to get a ride to the office every day.” He then gave Darcy the car key.

Darcy was still baffled with a blank expression when she sat in the driver’s seat.

She loved it but where did Kaze get the money to buy the car?

“Hades thrashed your Audi A4, so I made him compensate you.”

Kaze chuckled and explained, “Right, do you know whose car was this originally?” “Whose?” Darcy asked as she touched the steering wheel.

“It was Deborah’s. She and Samus used the money they got from selling the house to buy this car. The seller turned on them and gave me this car...”

Kaze told Darcy what happened.

“They had it coming!”

Darcy was amused. She liked the car even more knowing that she snatched the car from Deborah. Deborah had always been the bully and now Darcy finally rose on top for once.

They drove back to Horizon Mirror.

When they arrived at the gate. Lance and Naomi stopped them.

“Darcy, Larry was taken away by Hades again! How can you buy a new car when my son is in danger?! You should have sold the car and saved Larry with the money!”

Chapter 270 ATM

The Laime couple was furious when they saw Darcy come back with a new car, which she should not have bought and instead used the money to save their son.

“We cleared your son’s debt last night and now you want us to save him again? Do you think we’re your personal ATM?” Darcy argued.

“Yes, you are our fucking ATM! Your mother killed my daughter!” Lance argued righteously.

“Darcy, I told your mother to take care of Larry in the hospital but she let Hades take him away! You have to bring him back!” Naomi climbed up the car and threw a tantrum like an uncivilized little girl.

Darcy frowned. She asked Kaze, “What did Hades say when he took Larry away? He wants us to pay him again?”

Kaze would not let the same thing happen twice.

“Hades did not ask for money this time. He simply wanted Larry to do labor work at his casino and he would let the big baby back when he’s done.”

Lance and Naomi’s reaction shifted when they heard Kaze.

“How could Hades force Larry to do labor work? He had never worked a day in his life before- Naomi panicked.

It was a mother like her that nurtured Larry’s bad habits.

“Idiot, you aren't lying to us, are you?” Lance glared at Kaze.

He suspected Kaze did not want to use the money to save their son, so he made up an excuse. “Don't you have Hades’ contact? Call him and ask,” Kaze said calmly.

Naomi pulled her phone out and called him immediately.

Hades verified Kaze’s words.

Naomi started begging, hoping that Hades could release her son.

She even asked Hades how much money he wanted and that he could ask Agnes for it.

Instead of answering, he said, “Old hag, do | look like | need your money? | don’t like your son, that’s why | make him do shit here!”

He hung up the phone. Kaze was pleased to see Naomi crying like a baby after she put her phone away.

“You two have spoiled him since birth and he had never worked a day in his life. Take this as a lesson and a chance to get rid of his gambling addiction. Hades is doing you a favor.”

Kaze then wound up the window and said, “Let's go.”

Darcy honked at Naomi, forcing her to come down before driving into the neighborhood without pause.

Only then did Lance and Naomi realize they had let Darcy go.

“That fucking idiot! Larry was taken and he gloated at us!”

“He doesn’t know how hard it is to work! He should have taken Larry’s place!”

Lance and Naomi cursed at the gate but could not do anything.

“Hahaha, Kaze. You've done it this time. Lance and Naomi must be pissed-

Darcy laughed out loud in the car. She had been upset for the past two days because of what the Laines had put her family through.

Now she could finally get back to them.

When she arrived at Horizon Mirror, she saw the Ferrari 488 and the MPV. She was more surprised than ever.

“Hades thrashed my Audi A4 and he gave us back three expensive cars?” The Audi A4 did not cost that much.

Sky came over with a bright smile. “Darcy, it’s all because of Kaze. Even Mom is thrilled. She was praising him on the way home!”

Darcy frowned. She knew what happened when Kaze explained how he got the car.

Hades made up to them not because of Kaze but because Miru sent someone to beat him up last night and thrashed his place.

However, the little misunderstanding made Agnes see Kaze differently and even praised him.

Darcy did not want to ruin the surprise, so she decided to keep it a secret.

It was better to live in harmony than days filled with constant arguing.

When they walked into the house, Agnes put her phone down and glared at Kaze. "Kaze, was it that fun to lie to me?"