#Chapter 21 To Hogsmeade - Read Harry Potter and the Secret Treasures Chapter 21 To Hogsmeade

Chapter 21 To Hogsmeade

Luna's words helped Ivan's mentality change, and after breakfast, he began to look on the bright side of things.

Harry returned the parchment and agreed to let Ivan publish the article in the newspaper, Ivan noticed that the parchment was full of tears, it must have been a tough night for him.

At least Gryffindors never lacked the courage to face hardships.

After Herbology class Ivan followed the first years to Flying class.

Since he spent the summer at the Weasley's house, he had learned how to fly a broom, but Ivan had a strong phobia of flying after he told this to Madam Hooch she told him to stand on the sidelines.

It made the Slytherins mad since they wanted to teach Ivan a lesson according to the two houses rivalry.

But now there was no chance, so they had to find another Gryffindor, so they turned their gazes to Colin but Ivan's classmate Vicky Frobisher didn't let them.

They fought on their brooms leading to a comedic ending, besides Ivan, all the Gryffindor and Slytherin new students were severely reprimanded by Madam Hooch and deducted five points.

After seeing Frobisher, he thought of recommending her to join the Quidditch team as a keeper.

However, he didn't have the energy to try this, since the release of the newspaper is getting closer.

Hermione has now replaced Snape as the most terrifying person in Ivan's opinion.

In the next few days under Hermione's supervision he spent almost all the time in the library, the two of them reviewed and revised all the manuscripts, so he had to finish his homework after 10 o'clock in the evening.

While Harry and Ron complained that Hermione hadn't lent them her homework, but after she glared at them, they shut up.

Compared to Ivan they were lucky enough to just work on an article about Hogwarts' Quidditch.

Everyone was busy preparing the manuscripts, but Hermione was still dissatisfied with the academic section.

"Ivan we've only received two submissions so far." Said, Hermione, while looking at the two manuscripts, "One is from Percy, "The Present and the History of the Crucible," and the other is "How to find a Crumple-Horned Snorkack."

"If there is no other choice do Luna's article first." said Ivan as he stopped writing, "Her father does a magazine that publishes such articles, I heard the sales are good, so there are people who like to see such things."

"Ok?!" said Hermione in a voice full of doubt.

It wasn't the same quality as he imagined since the manuscript quality was too low.

Page three introduced interesting Hogwarts News of the week but is limited by the source of the articles with most of them coming from Gryffindor students.

Ivan, Harry, and Ron flying a car to school was the front page. Only a handful of things were related to Ravenclaw and Hufflepuff, and as for Slytherin, there was almost no other news besides Malfoy provoking people on several occasions.

Afterwards was an article about the safety of young wizards which took up five-pages, it was full of legal terms, Ivan was unsure whether anyone would read it.

He believed Hermione's articles would be skipped by most young wizards.

As for Fred and George's articles, it covered the Grand Staircase and the frequently used secret passages, which could help some of the new students and attract some readers.

They must have left a lot out because with these secret passages it would be impossible to escape Filch who was familiar with the secret passages.

Ginny helped Hagrid with his article about magical creatures, Harry and Ron wrote about Quidditch, in Ivan's opinion, he didn't find any good thing to highlight.

"So it seems that the story I wrote about Lily will be highlighted." thought Ivan as he turned the newspaper, and what he saw next was more than ten pages of photos of Lockhart.

After the photos was Hermione's story about Lockhart.

Under Hermione's description of Lockhart, it made him seem greater than Dumbledore.

Following that was Lockhart story. Since Lockhart announced to the class that he would publish a story in the newspaper, the girls in class came to him wanting to see the content ahead of time.

Although it wasn't ideal, Ivan had to admit that the success of the first issue of Hogwarts' Magic newspaper was entirely up to the charisma of Lockhart.

"Almost done, it looks like everybody did there best!"

Ivan put the newspaper down and turned to Hermione and said: "I'm going to Hogsmeade Saturday to talk to the businesses there."

"Hogsmeade, only third years get to go there and only on a specific Saturday." said Hermione in a serious tone, "And you need a parent or a guardian's signature."

"I don't Hermione!" said Ivan, "I learned from Fred and George that there is a secret passage to Hogsmeade."

"Secret passage," said Hermione as she shook her head, "If you are caught you will be expelled."

"As long as you don't tell anyone, no one will know. We need advertisements and sponsorships. or we will not have enough money to print one issue of the newspaper, you know ink and paper aren't cheap."

"But.."

“Don’t worry, Hermione!” laughed Ivan, “I remember Saturday is Gryffindors first Quidditch match, I will be back before it is over to cheer on Harry!”

Chapter 22 Conflict and Fight

Ivan’s Hogsmeade trip was not as easy as he expected, businesses were not keen to spend money on an obscure newspaper that they’ve never heard of.

However, through Ivan’s effort to persuade them, there were still some businesses that agreed to sponsor the newspaper.

For example, Honeydukes gave him two big cans of chocolate Cauldrons that they couldn’t sell, Zonko’s Joke Shop owner gave him a lot of Dungbombs, and The Three Broomsticks offered him a glass of free lemonade.

The owner of The Three Broomsticks said: “Kids can’t drink so here’s some lemonade!”

“Well nothing is easy in the beginning but at least its better than nothing,” said Ivan comforting himself, and after drinking the lemonade, he carried a giant pile of things through the long narrow secret passage and walked back to Hogwarts.

As he made it back to Hogwarts, he saw that Slytherin and the Gryffindor students were on the Quidditch field arguing about something.

Draco Malfoy was at the center of the crowd, he seemed to have said something nasty to Hermione, and it looked like Fred and George would pounce on him, Ron glared at Malfoy while pointing his broken wand at him.

“You will pay for what you said” shouted Ron.

In the next second a large explosion resounded through the field, a green colored spell shoots out of the back of Ron’s wand and hit him in the abdomen, causing him to fall to the ground.

“Ron, Ron! Are you okay?” screamed Hermione

Ron opened his mouth to answer but what came out were not words, but slugs were spat out and fell to the ground.

The Slytherin team’s players couldn’t stop laughing and their captain Flint turned red from laughing so much. Malfoy fell to the ground laughing so hard at Ron’s blunder. The Gryffindor team surrounded Ron who continued to spit out slugs.

Ivan hurried to the crowd when Colin saw him he happily said, “YOu’re back, Ivan, Ron was hit by his own spell. Harry, can you help him?”

Colin excitedly held up the camera and pointed it at Harry.

“Ivan took out his wand and uttered the spell “silentium” at Ron, but the spell didn’t work, and Ron spat out a new batch of slugs.

“Yes, Malfoy?” Ivan looked at Malfoy coldly and pointed his wand at Malfoy that formed a red light on the tip.

In an instant, Malfoy was struck by Ivan’s spell.

“Damn how dare you..” The smile on the Slytherin students faces vanished in an instant and looked at Ivan coldly, several seniors quickly pulled out their wands.

Soon more and more Slytherin pointed their wand’s at Ivan, while the Gryffindor students soon pulled out their wands and glared at each other, the tension was reaching its peak. (Note: This is what I imagine but with a lot more people.)

“Stupid mud blood, I will kill you!” Shouted Malfoy as he got up from the ground while picking up he wand, “Bumbler falls!”

It seemed to be a signal that made each side nerves stretch to the extreme, Gryffindor and Slytherin read out their own mantra, and then the whole Quidditch stadium turned into a battleground.

Students who were originally sitting in the stadium poured into the field, so the situation became even more chaotic. When several students in Hufflepuff saw what was going on the turned towards the castle and ran.

After escaping from three spells, he realized he was too slow to cast a spell of his own, so he decided to throughout all the Dungbombs he got earlier.

When he threw a Dungbomb, it only hit the Slytherin students, this interrupted their spells, the stench was accompanied by Slytherin Screams.

Malfoy was his primary focus, so he is now covered with dung.

“Attaboy, Ivan!” Chered Fred and George.

It didn’t take much longer before Ivan made the Slytherin’s abandoned their wands and pounce on the nearest enemy in the most primitive way.

The Slytherin students took advantage of the moment since no one wanted to be near the dung covered Slytherins which deprived the Gryffindors of fighting them.

Ivan ran into one of Malfoy's roommates Blaine Zabini, the two people soon fought, making Ivan's lips to break and causing Ivan blood to pour out.

Ivan didn't let the other side get the better of him, he gave Zabini a few punches, and when he was ready to finish the other off, a big hand suddenly separated the two.

"My God, what are you all doing?" Said Hagrid with a shocked face.

Not far away Harry and Malfoy were in a scuffle, Ron kept spitting slugs up at Goyle, Hermione was fighting here and there, but she was still holding onto her wand, as for Colin and Neville, they were fighting Crabbe together, and the Quidditch player was fighting each other.

As for Fred and George, they somehow got more Dungbombs and were throwing them at Slytherin students.

A few seconds later, a loud noise echoed throughout the Quidditch field. Almost all the professors came out. Dumbledore stood there with his wand raised high.

"Group fights, I've been at Hogwarts for so many years, but I've never seen anything like this before!" said Professor McGonagall while being a little perplexed, "Gryffindor and Slytherin are deducted a hundred points each, and if this happens again, I'll cancel your Quidditch game."

"But Professor ..."The Gryffindor Quidditch captain Oliver Wood quickly argued.

"Quiet, Wood!" I thought you would be better than this, " said Professor McGonagall with an expression of disappointment.

"Who started it?" said Professor Snape as he gazed at Harry and Ivan who was standing beside him.

"It was Ivan Masson and Harry Potter!" Said almost all the Slytherin students while pointing at the two people.

"They are lying, Malfoy started it!" said the Gryffindor students.

"He called Ivan and Hermione mud bloods!" said Ron while puking up slugs.

"Shut it, Weasley! I can tell who is lying." Snape turned his eyes to Harry and Ivan, "As for you....."

“Severus, I believe they are students of my house, so I’ll decide how to punish them,” said Professor McGonagall.

Chapter 23 The first issue of the newspaper

The punishment for the fight was decided quickly, and everyone involved in the fight was sent to detention.

Harry, Ivan, and Hermione helped Lockhart respond to his admirers because Lockhart wanted help, while Ron, Colin, and Neville helped Filch clean the trophies in the trophy room.

Malfoy had to clean up Snape’s office, while Slytherin and Gryffindor’s Quidditch team had to clean up the Quidditch field since Fred and George threw too much dung.

At dinner, Harry looked frustrated, he told the others that it was the worst punishment, he preferred to help clean the trophies or clean the Quidditch field.

Hermione was even more frustrated than Harry, she said with a sullen face, “Look at everything you’ve done, there’s only a day left before the official release of the newspaper and everyone is in detention. Ivan, you shouldn’t be so impulsive and Ron you’re still spitting up slugs for Malfoy’s sake.”

Ron whispered to Harry with his head down, “When we were fighting, Hermione looked more excited than anyone else. Of course, his voice was shallow, so except for Ivan who was seated beside Harry, no else heard him.

“Don’t get angry, Hermione!” said Fred comforting her, “After all, we won, didn’t we?”

“This was the first time we used Dungbombs to attack others, the effect was amazing!” said George while looking at Slytherin’s long table with satisfaction, There was stench everywhere, so no one wanted to go near them.

“To celebrate this victory, we should have a party.” said the two in unison.

“I should write and tell your mother about this,” said Hermione while looking at them angrily.

“Let them be, Hermione!” said Ivan quickly, “They helped us after all, it was Malfoy who called us Mud Bloods.”

“What does that mean?” asked Harry, of course, he could tell it was something vulgar.

“It is an offensive remark. The word Mud Blood is a pejorative term for people who are muggle-born with no recent magic ancestry.” Explained Ron, “Some wizards, like the Malfoy family always feel superior to others because they are so-called purebloods.”

After hearing the name of he who must not be named, everybody at the table shuddered, especially Ginny, she looked terrified.

“Let us change the subject, what are we going to do now?” asked Hermione.

“Really, Ivan!” said Harry excitedly

“Of course, Harry, but you need to be the sacrifice and stay with him.”

When Harry heard what Ivan said Harry went back to being depressed.

When they arrived at Lockhart’s office after dinner, Ivan asked Lockhart to let him and Hermione go back and finish the manuscripts because there was only a single day left until the official release of the Hogwarts’ Magic newspaper, and they still had a lot of work to do.

Lockhart very readily agreed to Ivan’s request, after all, in Lockhart’s eyes he was the center of attention of the newspaper.

“This will be a lot of work!” said Ivan while smiling, “We can find Ginny to help us since she shouldn’t be in detention.”

“She went to help Fred and George clean up the Quidditch field, there is still traces of Dungbombs left, with two brothers like that I feel bad for her,” said Hermione.

“I’m not saying they are bad people, but they are just too mischievous, perhaps.....”

“Well, Hermione, I just wanted to ask, What are you going to write?” Seeing that Hermione was going to go on forever, he changes the subject of the conversation.

“An article that calls attention to school violence.” answered Hermione with a slight pause, “But after hearing you talk about Mud Bloods, I am going to change it to The legitimate rights and interests of Muggle-born wizards, that is my task, so the rest is up to you!"

Afterwards Hermione got up and searched for books related to her article.

Ivan rearranged the front page and put the fighting incident as the headline.

Time passed, and the Gryffindor's were still in a festive mood.

A lot of people heard about the fight Saturday, though the end result was close, at the sight of the smelly Slytherin students, people knew that Gryffindor came out on top with a few cheap tricks.

The gossip was spreading everywhere, and Ivan was once again the focus of attention, there was gossip about him everywhere, there were at least ten versions of him taking Malfoy on.

Ron was also the subject of discussion since he is spitting out slugs, so everybody is talking about what kind of spell can do this, so a lot of the library's books on charms have been borrowed.

The four houses were regretting not seeing the group fight with their eyes.

As a result, people were full of anticipation for the upcoming first issue of the Hogwarts' magic newspaper because the newspaper had details of the battle and the spell Ron used.

On Monday morning, Ivan woke up early and came to the Great Hall with a newly printed newspaper.

Following his strategy, the first issue is free, it had all the staff, article author's name and order method on it. Fred and George made a song, but Professor McGonagall made people stop singing it. But this didn't stop everyone's enthusiasm, except for Slytherin's boycott of the newspaper, all the copies were soon taken by the other houses.

Inside the great hall, everyone was looking through the newspaper or discussing the articles.

The Slytherin long table was out of tune with the other three since they didn't speak but just ate breakfast with a gloomy face. It was like a funeral at Slytherin's long table, the atmosphere was scary and chilling.

Ivan set aside a bunch of newspapers after he printed them for the teachers. He took over ten thick newspapers and gave them to every professor.

Dumbledore happily accepted it, while Professor McGonagall just nodded but looked a little proud of Ivan, and Professor Flitwick and Professor Sprout smiled and picked it up; as for Lockhart he took it and immediately turned it straight to his pictures and started giggling, and asked Ivan to send him a few copies.

The trouble was Snape, he glanced at Ivan with a gloomy face, he seemed to have no intention of talking to him, like the Slytherin students.

Ivan pretended to be careless and dropped it where Snape could see the article about Lily, but Snape still showed a disgusted face while looking at it.

Chapter 24 Extraordinary Success

“Unprecedented success, Ivan!” this was Fred and George’s evaluation of the newspaper.

Now the Hogwarts’ Magic newspaper is the most popular thing in the entire school, all the student are talking about it.

Handsome, intelligent, and the creator of a newspaper, Ivan is now almost as famous as Harry, he is now one of the most popular students, most people had a positive evaluation of him, and even the girls were thinking of writing love letters to him.

The advantage of the newspaper was that he could change public opinion, so in his article, he showed that Slytherin was the primary cause of the battle.

Of course, it was the truth.

Now that everyone knew what happened they decided to condemn Malfoy which made Malfoy angry. Malfoy glared at Ivan and Harry from afar but didn’t come up for trouble.

Also, Hermione’s articles were doing better than he expected, even though most young wizards will not care about this stuff. However, at lunch Ivan noticed several professors reading the contents of the articles carefully.

Introducing secret passages, Quidditch, and magical creature articles were popular with the young wizards, although most of the stuff was covered in books many young wizards won’t read those books.

Some of the articles can help new students integrate into school life quicker. The twins made word games and joke that the seniors like.

But Luna was still very Happy and gave a recent issue of the Quibbler to Ivan and said her father would like to cooperate with them in depth for a joint publication of Horned Snorkack research results.

It was mainly popular among girls and Hermione was not an exception. Even a lot of Slytherin girls secretly got a copy of the Hogwarts' Magic newspaper.

But what was more surprising was that a few people got a new newspaper from Ivan to mail back to their parents, most of them were fans of Lockhart. This would increase the number of buyers, but then Ivan had to consider printing them.

Someone finally noticed Ivan story about Lily by breakfast, The descriptive article brought everyone back to Godric's Hollow.

As one of the most well knows modern wizarding events, the young wizards knew the basics of what happened, but no one knew the details that Ivan wrote in his article.

Today's breakfast was destined to be much longer than usual, as everyone was immersed in this tragic story, no one care about their food.

Besides the Slytherin's the other houses were all quiet while reading the article. This made Slytherin's curious, but because of the boycott, they couldn't look.

After a while, the Slytherins went back to their houses common room, but the Slytherin students were still looking at them curiously.

Ivan had a smirk since he had to stay up late that night and work.

Slytherins boycott was soon almost nonexistent. Ivan also noticed that Snape was absent at breakfast that night, it seems that the article had a significant impact on him.

In fact, in the following week, Professor Snape's mood was bizarre, Snape was the first to leave the class, he didn't eat in the great hall either, apart from Ivan no one else knew what was wrong with Snape, Snape wasn't even making it hard on Gryffindor students which was inconceivable to some students.

Everyone now knew how Voldemort failed, people were unaffected by the duel between James and Voldemort but were touched by the love that Lily showed.

As the article said, she had a chance to live, but for Harry's sake she gave it up. Ultimately the power of love caused Voldemort's magic to rebound and usher in a new era.

They were paying tribute to Harry and his parting, as heroes who saved the wizarding world.

That evening Gryffindor held a party where all the staff of the Hogwarts' Magic newspaper became the primary focus, It made Colin excited, which made him slightly concerned about him.

"Hogwarts Magic newspaper" achieved unprecedented success, they originally printed 700 copies but had to print another 300 copies afterward since the demand was so high.

Even the businesses that advertised in the newspaper benefited, as well as Fred and George's modified magical fireworks, all of which were sold in under a day, so they are creating new ones.

After the businesses advertised in the paper, their sales increased around 30%, for example, a lot of ordered lemonade by owl from The Three Broomsticks which made Madam Rosmerta wish she let Ivan drink Butterbeer. Another example is after Ivan recommended the Cockroach Clusters, they instantly became the most popular candy at Honeydukes. (Note: The other chapter said Chocolate Cauldrons, but it was supposed to be Cockroach Clusters. My bad and I'll change it.)

This allowed the Flume couple to sell a lot more than they usually would which made them delighted.

Of course, when the student bought them people instantly became nausea and lost their appetite, Ivan also got the terrible title 'Cockroach killer.'

A few days later the businesses sent a letter to Ivan and invited him to come again that weekend to discuss future cooperation.

While the price they were willing to pay was lower than the Daily prophet but a least it was a step forward after he got them to sign a long-term contract.

As a result, the necessary cost of printing the newspaper was solved.

It made him feel relieved that he could afford to pay for the next issue of the Hogwarts' Magic newspaper.

Three days later, while Ivan was eating his breakfast and whispering to Hermione about the next issue of the newspaper, he received an unexpected letter.

“Look guys!” said Ivan excitedly, “The editor in chief of the Daily Prophet wants to buy the rights to reprint Professor Lockhart’s pictures and novels, my story about Harry’s mother, and .....

Ivan paused, and everyone stared at him nervously.

“And Hermione’s two articles, ‘Calling for the Ministry of Magic to focus on the safety of underage witches’ and ‘The legitimate rights and interests of Muggle-born wizards.’”, said Ivan dryly

“My goodness!” said Ron in a surprised tone with mouth wide open.

“Is it true, Ivan?” asked Hermione

“Yes,” said Ivan as he wrinkled his nose and added, “In fact, Barnabas Cuffe thinks your articles are brilliant, and if you want you can sign the contract that came with the letter and they will mail the reprint costs and royalties tomorrow.”

“Of course I am willing!” said Hermione as she grabbed the contract.

“The editor of the Daily Prophet is insane, why would he want to buy Hermione’s articles.” said Ron, “Is it because she wanted the ministry of magic to ban the Quidditch game.”

“Who knows maybe he has acrophobia like me.” said Ivan as he stood up, “I’m going to go talk to Professor Lockhart and take Colin with me to take some new pictures.”

Harry looked at Ivan’s back and blinked innocently, he couldn’t understand why someone would want to publish the article in the Daily Prophet.

Harry agreed to let Ivan put the article in the Daily Prophet, he felt it was necessary to let more people know what she did.

Chapter 25 Deviation from the Story

He signed the contracts with the daily prophet, but Ivan underestimated the influence of the Daily Prophet, when he sat to eat some toast the next morning, he saw a parliament of owls fly into the great hall.

“Look!”

I didn’t know who shouted when all the students looked up and saw a fantastic scene.

“Hogwarts Great Hall, Ivan Masson!”

Ivan saw his name and address on an envelope, he frowned and reached for it, but soon three, four, five owls flapped their wings to his side, they stepped on the butter, knocked over the salt, each one wanted to give him their letter first.

“What’s the matter?” asked Colin curiously.

No one answered, and then seven more owls flew down, but this time they were looking for Harry.

“I think I know what’s going on guys, look at this!” said Hermione excitedly, she grabbed a Parcel from the owls. But before she could open the parcel over ten owls flew in and surrounded her instantly.

Ivan opened the parcel Hermione handed over, it contained the latest issue of the Daily Prophet. The article about Harry’s mother was placed on the front page with the other articles by the editor and Bathilda Bagshot.

Lockhart’s photos and novels occupied the entertainment section and the novel section. Hermione’s two articles occupied a space under Rita Skeeter’s article.

“The letter she held was sent by a witch who was over 50 years old, thanking Hermione for efforts to keep underage wizards safe since she lost her daughter in a flying accident when her daughter was eight. A lot of the letters came from Muggle-born wizards, who thanked her for saying what they always wanted to say.

Unlike Hermione’s thanks she received, Harry received a much more touching thanks. People used some gorgeous but over the top statements to express their sorrow over Harry’s unfortunate life.

As for Ivan, he got more criticism.

People complained about some of the things he wrote, such as how Voldemort failed, what Lily’s last spell was, and who was the Black haired boy on the pendant.

A man said they had the right to know the truth.

Ron opened one of Ivan’s letters and muttered, “What does he want to know, why not just ask he who should not be named?”

“Look this woman is suggesting you go to St Mungo’s Hospital for Magical Maladies and Injuries,” said Colin, “She might be a follower of he who should not be named?”

Almost every professor received a large number of letter, including Dumbledore and McGonagall, the readers who read Ivan’s article hope that the professors will take better care of Harry.

In the face of an endless stream of owls, they were overwhelmed.

Professor Snape, cast a spell causing all the owls to fly away.

Unlike Snape who was angry, Lockhart was extremely excited, Lockhart received the most letters, he put all the letters in a particular pocket so that in his free time he can write back to his fans.

Anyway, Ivan’s articles had an unforeseen result.

Many older wizards were surprised that young wizards could write so well, but most people think they make a lot of sense, although in some places the wording isn’t accurate considering the age of several people the flaw is negligible.

The good news about all this is the editor of the Daily Prophet said he was willing to reprint the articles of Ivan, Hermione, and Lockhart for a while, which will significantly enhance the sells of Hogwarts’ Magic. In addition to the students in school, there are even adult wizards willing to order the newspaper.

With the advantage he achieved so far, Ivan successfully printed around 800 follow up papers per issue.

Everything was going right, and the Hogwarts’ Magic newspaper became part of the everyday life of a few wizard, the newspaper received more and more contributions and made some modest profits. Professors and students got accustomed to the countless owls that rained down for breakfast every Wednesday.

Because of the small amount of money he earned, Ivan bought a few herbs for himself and bought Hermione a new quill. The rest of the money was spent on Fred and George’s research.

Under the supply of materials, the twins achieved excellent results.

In addition to the magical fireworks, they also developed Extendable Ears, Self-Writing Quill, Nosebleed Nougat, and Ton-Tongue Toffee.

These things were brilliant but fraught with danger.

Fred and George received a lot of orders, and many young wizards expressed their excitement for their new product. However, Percy and Hermione didn't let them turn other people into their guinea pigs, which led to the twins almost living in the school hospital.

The matron of Hogwarts Madam Poppy Pomfrey was mad, even without Fred and George she was busy every day.

Since October the weather became cold.

Ginny and Ivan who was sick recently were not spared by Percy who forced them to drink some of Madam Poppy Pomfrey's Pepperup Potion which caused steam to come out of their ears for hours.

His cold, the reviews of the manuscripts, and the increasing class assignments greatly reduced Ivan's focus of the Chamber of Secrets.

Thankfully Ginny had not had any abnormalities, she had gone to the library every night to help Hermione to help edit the manuscripts, so she shouldn't have the time to open the Chamber, or she hasn't been controlled by Tom Riddle.

Ivan found time to talk to her about the diary, but Ginny said she had never seen a black diary.

This surprised Ivan, if Ginny didn't have Tom Riddle's diary who did, did Lucius Malfoy not give it to her, perhaps since crossing over it produced more than a simple ripple from the butterfly effect. (Note: Translators punches Ivan and says, "no sh*t Sherlock")

But anyway, the plot has changed, Ivan's most significant advantage gone!

After worrying about it for a while, Ivan cleared his mind and decided to worry about it some other time.

Hopeful Tom Riddle does not appear as for a way to destroy the Horcrux's, not my problem so Dumbledore should worry about it.
