Chapter 11: Her Nephew's Book

Gu Nian was reading a book while her nephew was writing an online novel. Her grades were very good, and she had always been that 'someone else's child' that was mentioned in families. Her brother and sister-in-law often nagged at her nephew in front of her, so her nephew had been annoyed with her ever since she was young. He named her after the evil sister of the unlucky female protagonist in the book.

The female protagonist in the book written by her nephew had a rough life, just like the male protagonist. In the end, the male protagonist had to go through a lot of hardships to secure a high position. However, the female protagonist died in the middle of the story.

Later on, in order to reflect the male protagonist's single-mindedness and ambition, many female supporting roles were arranged to appear. However, the female protagonist was the only one in the male protagonist's heart. The male protagonist had countless concubines, but he did not have a wife. His wife only had a nameplate with the female protagonist's name on it.

Because her nephew's book was very good, her sister-in-law pushed it to her to read.

During the holiday, she spent three days but still could not finish reading the book. She only knew the ending of the female protagonist and did not know the ending of the male protagonist. When she woke up, she had become the Gu Nian in the book.

She cursed her nephew in her heart.

However, she had some doubts again.

There was a scene in the book when someone from the family came to collect gambling debts.

However, what happened next was different from what happened in the book.

In the book, no one opened the door for the person who came to collect gambling debts. The door was broken open and the four members of the Gu family were lying in the central room.

The debt collectors were so scared that they quickly went to call for help.

The grandparents from the old residence came over and called for a doctor, saving the family of four.

Gu Shouxin had bought medicine to kill the whole family.

Later, he was saved. The next time Gu Shouxin owed money, Gu Xin was secretly sold. By the time the elders of the old residence found out, they could no longer get the female protagonist back.

The old mansion wanted to sever all ties with Gu Shouxin.

Gu Shouxin stole Cai Xiaolian's last dowry, a gold hairpin, and ran away.

Cai Xiaolian and Gu Nian were dependent on each other.

Later on, Gu Nian used her embroidery skills to attract the attention of the manager of the embroidery shop, and brought her to Jiangnan.

In Jiangnan, Gu Nian recognized her sister who had been sold. However, she did not acknowledge Gu Xin. Instead, she saw that Gu Xin had someone who loved her and was living a good life. She tried every means possible to harm Gu Xin.

In the end, Gu Nian's death had something to do with Gu Xin.

Gu Nianzhi was so sure that she was in the book because the place they had mentioned was exactly the same as her previous home.

There were not many descriptions of the female protagonist's other family members in the book, but the debt collection incident was a sign that the female protagonist had been sold. Therefore, Gu Nian remembered it very clearly. She even remembered how much money she had spent.

So, what exactly had happened that afternoon?

Could it be that she was not in a novel written by her nephew, but in another novel, or was it just an ordinary transmigration?

Other than the female protagonist, Gu Xin, the parents did not feel like they were written in a book!

Gu Nianzhi was engrossed in her thoughts. Gu Shouxin and Cai Xiaolian did not say anything more and only looked at her.

Gu Xin was quiet for a while before she nudged Gu Nianzhi. "Sister, do you have a headache? Do you want to go back to your room and rest? I'll bring the food over for you."

Gu Nian came back to her senses and pretended to be calm. "No, there's no need. Xin Xin, you should sit down and eat too! I haven't come out for a few days. I don't feel comfortable lying in my room for too long."

"Okay, Sister!"

Gu Xin was very happy. Her sister was really not like before.

The little people in her heart were dancing with joy. Her father had changed, her mother had changed, and her sister had also changed.

'Oh, God! If this is Xin Xin's dream, then let me be in it for a little longer. Don't let me wake up!'
