

Chapter 12 – The Heart-Broken Ex-Wife: Melissa

Sherman and Everett Mayfield Novel

Lindsey lowered her head sadly. “Daddy has passed away.” Merrick’s brows furrowed as he cast a wary look at Everett again. “Why are you asking this?”

Before Everett could answer, Merrick snorted and said, “Are you pursuing my mommy? Is that why you’re trying to get close to us?”

Everett’s jaw dropped in shock.

“Were your daddy and mommy in a good relationship?” he asked tentatively without giving up.

Merrick snorted. “Daddy was a very good doctor. He was very considerate and gentle. Mommy likes him a lot. Although he has passed away, Mommy will never forget him and fall in love with someone else, so you better give up.”

Lindsey gently tugged at her brother’s arm. “Don’t be so impolite, Merrick.” Merrick knocked on her head. “Silly girl. Why are you so careless?” Then, he cast a dirty look at Everett and looked away.

Everett fell silent. If Melly was indeed Melissa, he wondered who the man in the picture was Did Melissa marry someone else after leaving Andeport?

In the hospital, Melissa saw her two children and rubbed her temples helplessly. “Why are you two here?”

Lindsey ran to her cheerfully and wrapped her arms around her waist. “Merrick and I brought you lunch. We wanted to surprise you.”

It was not until then that Melissa remembered that she had forgotten to eat, for she had been busy examining the medical records of the patients. She squatted before Lindsey and stroked her hair. "Thank you, sweetie. Thank you, Merrick."

The doctors and nurses were shell-shocked when they saw the two children.

"Doctor... Err... Dr. Sherman? Are you married?"

Several male workers of the hospital had a crush on Melissa because she was not only young and beautiful but an incredible doctor as well. However, they didn't expect her to be a mother of two children. Most people couldn't believe their eyes.

Melissa smiled and nodded. "Yes."

She then asked her two children, "Did you say 'Hi' to everyone?"

The two kids then greeted the doctors and nurses in the office. "Hello, nice to meet you all."

Seeing the two adorable kids in front of them, the doctors and nurses surrounded them. Everyone hugged and fussed over how cute they were. As everyone got busy getting to know her children, Melissa sat down to eat. Just then, she saw Everett standing at the door.

Everyone fell silent when they saw him.

"Hello, Mr. Mayfield," they all unanimously greeted.

A smile stretched across Melissa's lips. "What's up?"

Everett walked into the office and crossed his arms over his chest. "I want to discuss Arielle's condition with you."

Melissa snorted with disdain and put down the lunch box on the table. "Mr. Mayfield, let's make one thing clear. Your fiancée doesn't trust me; she doesn't want me to perform the surgery on her. You better confirm it with Miss Sherman first rather than wasting my time.”

Her blunt response startled everyone No one, except Dr. Melly Sherman, dared to talk to Everett this way.
