

Strongest Necromancer Of Heaven's Gate

Chapter 3.2: Character Creation [Part 2]

There were a few more questions on the list, but they were only minor questions. After double checking to make sure he had answered everything correctly, he gave the form to the Angel behind him.

The Angel took it and gave it a quick glance to ensure that every question had been answered.

After seeing that there was nothing wrong with the form, she nodded her head and told the chubby boy to follow behind her.

Five minutes later, they arrived in an open space where countless galaxies could be seen in the sky.

It was the most marvelous thing the boy had ever seen. He just stood there in awe, gazing at the heavens above him.

"Stop gawking and follow me. What are you, a country bumpkin?" the Angel asked in irritation.

"Sorry," Lucien replied as he ran towards her. He had always thought of Angels as kind and benevolent beings. They were nowhere like this b*tchy Angel, who seemed to have a horrible personality.

Ten minutes later, they arrived at a small cottage located at the center of the amazing scenery.

"Your Excellency, Macuilxochitl, I brought the soul that you requested," the Angel said as she opened the door.

When they entered the room, the chubby boy saw an old man who had an infatuated look on his face as he gazed at the screen of his computer.

It didn't take long before the old geezer froze when he realized that he was no longer alone inside the room.

The first thing he did was immediately stand up and use his body to block their view, so they wouldn't see the image on his computer screen.

Although it was only for a brief moment, Lucien had already seen the image of a half-naked anime girl on his computer.

Unfortunately, even though the old man managed to prevent his two guests from seeing everything, his attempt was suddenly ruined by the loud moans that played through the surround sound speakers that hung all around his room.

It was at that moment when the old man realized that he f*cked up.

The Angel's expression immediately changed and she looked at the old man as if he was a piece of sh*t.

The old geezer lightly coughed as he averted his gaze, unable to endure the disdainful stare that the Angel was giving him.

'Am I really going to be fine?' Lucien thought as he looked at the old man who was doing his best to act like a dignified person while failing miserably.

Clearly, the old man didn't expect someone to barge inside his room without knocking first while he was watching something inappropriate for young audiences.

"Boy, what is your name?" the old man named Macuilxochitl asked as he pushed the power button of his computer to forcefully turn it off.

As a member of the Bros Before Hoes Brotherhood, the boy decided to play along with the old geezer's attempt to change the subject.

"My name is... Lucien," Lucien said with a slightly strained smile.

"Lucien? A good name," the old man commented as he eyed Lucien from head to toe. "Well then, Lucien. Did my assistant, Himea, explain everything to you already?"

"Yes. She said that I was chosen to participate in the Heaven's Gate Project."

"And... did she say anything else aside from that?"

Lucien shook his head as he glanced at the Angel who had her arms crossed over her chest.

"She said that this project is confidential," Lucien answered. "The only thing she asked me to do was to fill up the form for my rebirth."

"I see," Macuilxochitl said as he played with the white beard on his chin. "Very well. Before anything else let me properly introduce myself first. I am the God of Gamblers, Macuilxochitl. Since my name is a mouthful, just call me Max."

"I personally designed the Heaven's Gate Project in an attempt to send an individual to a particular world without being found out by the higher ups— I mean, to bypass certain old fogies who are sticklers to the rules."

"Are we doing something illegal?"

"Hahaha! Of course not. It's not a crime unless someone reports it to the authorities. You'll be fine... maybe."

"Hahaha... can I still back out?" Lucien asked while laughing nervously.

Max ignored his question and immediately took another form out of his breast pocket, and presented it to Lucien.

It looked similar to the form the boy just filled up, so he guessed that it might be a continuation of his character creation settings.

"Since I chose you to become my guinea pig— I mean, my hero who will participate in this glorious project, it is only normal that I give you some freebies," Max said with a smile that would put all con-artists to shame. "You may choose only one. So, take your time and choose wisely."

Lucien held the form that the God of Gamblers handed to him and read its contents without any expectations.

However, half a minute later Lucien's eyes widened in surprise as he read the amazing "freebies" that were written on the form he was holding.

"S-Sh*t!" Lucien wasn't able to stop himself from cursing out loud after reading the options that were available for him.

'Regardless of what I choose, I know that I will definitely gain a massive advantage as I reincarnate to my next life,' Lucien thought. 'If possible, I want all of them, but since his Excellency, Max, told me that I could only choose one, I need to take this matter seriously.'

"Well then, have you decided what option you want to choose?" Max asked the boy who was still seriously looking at his options after half an hour had passed.

"Yes." Lucien nodded his head. He had already weighed the pros and cons of his decision, so he faced the God of Gamblers with determination. "Your Excellency, I choose..."
